Mayor of Seattle Tells How He Beat I. W. W.

Ole Hanson, mayor of Seattle, jumped into the Chicago Victory loan campaign yesterday and in a series of five crackling speeches urged a new love of America and the necessity of keeping faith with those who died in Flanders field.

The fighting mayor, who dealt with the Seattle I. W. W. troubles with an iron hand and who advocates the lamppost or deportation for all those who do not believe in America's form of government, proved to be a white haired, plain talking citizen who bears a striking resemblance to Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, and expresses the same hatred of sham, the same love for the under dog.

Mayor Hanson was accompanied by his wife. He called her "Mother" and was thoughtful of her comfort all day as they whirled from place to place through the rain and the crowds. They have nine children and are proud of it.

Was Busy All Day.

From the time he arrived early in the morning, until his departure for Detroit at 11:45 at night, Mayor Hanson was kept busily at work. He is a smooth orator and appears well acquainted with racial problems and prejudices. He is trying to rub these out in this country.

To him the Liberty loan is merely an incident to the duty of American citizenship. In a Billy Sunday manner he attacked those who refused to buy bonds as hardhearted and shallow headed, putting them in a class with war-time slackers. He looks upon the loan as a bridge between the war and the long time of peaceful, happy development in this country. He would not hesitate to kill the "snake of bolshevism wherever it shows it head."

"Funerals, not Conferences."

"Kerensky made the mistake of calling conferences instead of starting funerals," he said at one of his meetings. "There is not room enough on earth for the red flag and the Stars and Stripes."

His biggest speech of the day was at an Association of Commerce luncheon at the Hotel La Salle, where a thousand business men applauded him. He spoke at a little dinner at the Swedish club and then went to Lake View auditorium and to the Le Moyne High school, where crowds awaited him. At 10 o'clock he finished the day by addressing 2,000 at the 1st regiment armory.

Here the Swedish National society was welcoming home their soldiers and sailors. In one of his speeches he drew a sharp distinction between the Germans who came to this country years ago and those who remained at home and turned toward the propaganda of war.

Tells Story of Strike.

At the Lake View High school he told the history of the Seattle strike trouble.

"Ninety per cent of the working people are just as loyal as you and I," he said, "but out in Seattle criminal leaders got control of the unions. I am a member of the boilermakers' union myself, and when I was elected I told the people I would keep order, close the dance halls, stop red flag parades, and if any one tried to create disorder or take over the government I would hang them to the nearest lamp post.

"Well, the I. W. W. from Butte, the bolsheviki, the McNamara followers from California, and other criminals came into Seattle. I saw they intended to overthrow our government if they could. They were advocating taking over the shipyards. They told the workers to take what was theirs; that Russia had shown the way. They established a council, and finally, one night, when most of the decent union men had gone home, the council voted a general strike.

Sixty-five Thousand Quit Work.

"Sixty-five thousand misled workmen left their employment. It went on for a day. The Union Record said that if the suffering increased they would take over the industries and run them.

"I believe the working people everywhere are loyal, but the 10 per cent who are not ought to be drummed out of the United States. I said to the men who came to me:

"You are revolutionists, not strikers.

BULLETS FLY IN WAITER STRIKE; TWO MAY DIE

Bluecoat and Agent of Union Fall in South Chicago.

Two men are reported dying in the South Shore hospital, South Chicago, of bullet wounds received last night in a revolver battle which developed from the strike of waiters, waitresses, and cooks now on in eight restaurants in South Chicago.

The wounded men are:

Policeman John L. Kinney of the South Chicago department, whose home is at 610 East Ninety-fifth street. He is married and has a daughter 2 years old and a son 4 months old.

Asmus Jessen, 9324 Yates avenue, business agent of the Teamsters, Chauffeurs, and Helpers' union No. 742.

"Jim" Sought as Shooter.

A man known only as "Jim" shot both men, according to the stories told the police. He had been in South Chicago three days and was working as baker and cook for the Popular bakery, 9153 Commercial avenue. Strike leaders say he was imported to spy upon them for the restaurant proprietors.

The strikers were holding a meeting last night in a hall at Ninety-second street and Baltimore avenue when he came in. Jessen accosted him and the following conversation ensued, according to Pearl Bailey, president of the waiters, waitresses, and cooks' union, who is being detained by the police as a witness:

JESSEN—Why did you let a nonunion teamster haul your trunk from the depot?

JIM—I didn't know he was nonunion.

JESSEN—Why didn't you make it your business to find out, if you're a good union man. I think you're a spotter.

Shots Follow Passing of Lie.

JIM—You're a liar.

Blows passed and the man drew his revolver, firing twice. One bullet lodged in Jessen's stomach and another in his lungs. He has not since regained consciousness.

Kinney heard the shots and ran to the hall. He met Jim, who still had his revolver in his hand, and ordered him to halt. Jim ran north in Baltimore avenue and turned up an alley. When Kinney arrived there Jim opened fire. One bullet entered the neck and lodged in the base of the brain.

Kinney fell unconscious. A patrol wagon arrived soon and a search was started for the gunman. Up to a late hour no trace of him had been obtained.

Neither Jessen nor Kinney has revived sufficiently to give details.

WILL PUBLISH NAMES OF THOSE BUYING NO BONDS

J. G. Schaefer, chairman of the Thirty-third ward Victory loan committee, has evolved a plan which he hopes will spur on the subscriptions to the loan in his ward. The total last night was $447,500, which is 45 per cent of the ward's quota.

Mr. Schaefer expects to start his precinct workers at once on a house to house canvass, and will have a tabulation made of the persons who have failed to buy Victory bonds with the intention of publishing or posting the list.

It is Mr. Schaefer's idea that many have carelessly delayed their subscriptions and that through this house to house canvass they will be stirred up to their duty to Uncle Sam and the army. He thinks other wards may copy the plan.

PUBLISH TABLE OF CASUALTIES, D. S. CROSSES

Infantry Men Show Second Division in Honor Place.

Simultaneously with the receipt of the New York dispatch giving tabulated casualties of American divisions—the 2d division (including the marines) standing at the top—"The Tribune" received from its Berlin correspondent an interview with a German artillery chief who pronounced the 2d division the most effective of American fighting units.

New York, May 3.—[Special.]—The United States Infantry association, the organization of the officers of that arm of the regular army, has compiled a comparative table of total battle casualties and distinguished service crosses received by divisions, which will appear in the May issue of the Infantry Journal, the official publication of the Infantry association.

The casualties include only killed in action, wounded, missing, and prisoners, and the figures are those of March 8, while the distinguished service crosses include all awarded to members of combatant divisions up to and including March 1 last.

The above table shows that the 2d division of regulars, which included the marines, not only suffered the greatest casualties of any single division, but that the division received more than twice as many distinguished service crosses as any other division, its total being 664 crosses, the second highest number awarded being 334 to the 1st division.

The 3d division of regulars received the next highest number, while the division which stands fourth in the honor list is the 26th or New England guard division. The Rainbow division

TURN UP YOUR TROUSERS; MORE RAIN TO COME

"Too much rain," say the farmers.

"O, this rain," says the home gardener.

And what the golfers say is awful.

The weather man sadly admits the precipitation since the first of the year has been three inches more than normal. This last week, he must confess, put 3.02 inches of rain all over the middle west, home gardens, golf links, mud roads, and other places.

And there's more rain to come today, he fears!

The average rain for the year is 33 inches. And last week accounted for nearly 10 per cent of it. From 8 o'clock Friday to 8 o'clock Saturday evening there was a precipitation of 1.63 inches.

The North Shore towns reported last night that a number of gardenettes had been washed out. At Lake Bluff the viaduct of the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee Electric was flooded, and passengers had to walk around it to transfer to other cars.

3 IN COMA; GAS HEATER BLAMED

Mother and Sons Victims in Home Mystery; Will Recover.

The house at 2248 Osgood street was shut tight. The windows were locked; protected by storm windows.

Mrs. Elizabeth Davitt had lit the gas heater to warm the water for her son Leslie's bath. Leslie, a machinist, who works nights, got up at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Then he bathed. When he came out of the tub he saw his mother lying unconscious on the floor. He called a doctor.

Frank, the younger son, an attorney, ran to the home of Mrs. Mary O'Brien, 1035 Belden avenue, and told her his mother was dying.

Brother Also Victim.

When Dr. G. L. Kaufman, 2524 Burling street, reached the house he found both Mrs. Davitt and Leslie unconscious. He called in Dr. Arthur S. Bachman, 2453 Orchard street, and sent for a lung motor. By the time Mrs. O'Brien reached the house Frank also had been a victim of the mysterious influence and lay unconscious on the floor.

Mrs. O'Brien opened a window, then broke the pane in the storm window.

"Fresh air," she said. "That heater burned up all the oxygen in the house. I know a case on the west side——"

Blame Gas Heater.

"Beans," said one of the doctors, who had revived the two boys—the other physician had rushed Mrs. Davitt to St. Joseph's hospital—"canned beans. Maybe poison in them."

He took the beans Mrs. Davitt had cooked, and the city chemist will analyze them tomorrow.

"Beans nothing," said Leslie. "I didn't eat any of the beans—it was the heater. There was no ventilation in the house, you see. The gas heater consumed the oxygen. Mrs. O'Brien is right. My mother will be all right tomorrow, they tell me."

WILL PEOPLE DESERT FLAG IN VICTORY HOUR?

BY CARTER GLASS.
[Secretary of the Treasury.]

THE Victory loan campaign is two-thirds over, but subscriptions have been reported for little more than one-third of the loan.

Is it conceivable that the American people, who with heart and soul waged the fight for freedom, will permit this loan of victory and thanksgiving to fail?

Our sons gave of their health, of their strength, and of their lives that freedom might not perish. There are one and a half million American boys in France and Germany. Now that the war is ended it would be as reasonable for them to dishonor the nation by deserting the flag as for the nation to dishonor itself by deserting them. Is it a large thing that we are now asked to lend our money to pay the cost of victory? Is American money less willing than American manhood?

Let every one of the millions who have bought Liberty bonds buy Victory notes and success is sure.

WIFE WILL SUE WALTER J. HILL

St. Paul, Minn., May 3.—[Special.]—Morton Barrows, father of Mrs. Walter J. Hill, admitted today that his daughter would start suit for divorce within two weeks. Walter J. Hill is the son of the late James J. Hill, famous railway magnate, and is himself heavily interested in live stock interests. Mr. Hill is now cruising in a yacht off New York.

Mrs. Hill will base her suit on the grounds of desertion, according to her father. The Hills are said to have been estranged for several years.

It is reported that a settlement has virtually been reached between the attorneys for Mr. Hill and his wife and that there will be no contest to the action.

Four Enemies Send Armies Into Hungary

BULLETIN.

LONDON, May 3.—The Roumanian army is reported to have occupied Budapest according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Berlin.

COPENHAGEN, May 3.—The Roumanians yesterday effected a crossing of the Theiss river at Szolnok and Tisza-Polgar, according to advices from Budapest. Miskolcz, ninety miles northeast of Budapest, has been evacuated.

Czech forces have advanced near Banreve, the main cause of this military success being lack of discipline by the Hungarian troops.

Fear Massacre by Reds.

BUDAPEST, May 2.—[By the Associated Press.]—Delayed.—The city is quiet, but there is a feeling of panic lest the reds engage in massacres of the bourgeoisie before the allies reach the city, and entire families are fleeing. The last train for Austria, which is the only frontier open, left Wednesday afternoon, crowded to the utmost with men, women, and children standing in all cars, and reached Kamorn at 7 o'clock. Immediately after the departure of the train Czechs crossed the Danube and cut off the possibility of any more trains leaving.

Italians Gain Rapidly.

VIENNA, Friday, May 2.—[By the Associated Press.]—Italian troops stationed in Carinthia are advancing northward and eastward and have occupied a bridge over the River Drave.

Jugo-Slav forces, it is stated, have attacked the Austrians between Laibach and Klagenfurt with the apparent object of reaching the railway line to Vienna, which is held by the Italians.

Allies Demand Surrender.

BERLIN, May 3.—It is learned here that the soviet government at Budapest has been in communication with the French mission at Vienna, from which it has received conditions demanding capitulation of the soviets and the surrender of all arms and ammunition and that Budapest be occupied by a democratic administration.

The soviet envoy replied that he was empowered to accept all these conditions, but his counter proposal that the personal safety of the members of the government and their families be guaranteed was rejected.

MADMAN SHOOTS 3, CAUGHT BY POSSE IN BATTLE

Monticello, Wis., May 3.—[Special.]—The madman, name unknown, who shot Dick Marty, a farmer four miles south of here, and badly wounded Matt Salbras, sheriff of Green county, was captured this evening after a pitched battle with a posse of twenty-five men, but not until he added a third victim to his total, Spencer Morton of Monroe, Wis., recently discharged from the United States army. The posse first tried to get the man by firing at the windows of his room. Later they broke into the house and fired through the ceiling until the man, exhausted and without ammunition, surrendered. He was taken to the county jail at Monroe, Wis.

Lake Forest Goes "Dry" When Water Works Fail

A water famine existed in Lake Forest for several hours yesterday, the pumps at the water works having become impaired. The emergency supply in the reserve had been depleted before it was discovered the pumps were pumping air instead of water. There was no water either for drinking or bathing and some of the wealthy residents had it brought from nearby towns in barrels.

Maj. Mannock Champion British Ace; Score 73

LONDON, May 3.—The air ministry has decided that, so far as can be ascertained, the champion British airman of the war was the late Maj. Edward Mannock. Maj. Mannock brought down seventy-three enemy machines. Of all the allies Lieut. Rene Fonck, the French ace, holds the record with 78.

1,942,391 Returned to Civil Life from Army

Washington, D. C., May 3.—Demobilization of the army has returned 1,942,391 officers and men to civil life, the war department announces today. Of these 103,524 were in the commissioned grades. The total authorized discharge was announced as 2,072,000, and of these 789,320 are men returned from overseas.

JUGO-SLAVIA SENDING ARMY TOWARD FIUME

Austria and Hungary Invited to Seat at Peace Table.

BULLETIN.
Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.
[Copyright: 1919.]

BERNE, May 3.—Unless a solution of the Fiume question is speedily found it is feared that there will be bloodshed, for Serbian and Jugo-Slav troops numbering 300,000, with arms and ammunition which they took from Mackensen's army during its retreat, are reported preparing to march on Fiume. The Italians are sending reinforcements to Fiume.

BULLETIN.

BRUSSELS, May 3.—[By the Associated Press.]—A petition has been presented to King Albert by the Belgian National Political committee that he refuse to sign the peace treaty. This committee represents 100,000 members and 300 communes.

PARIS, May 3.—The council of three has decided to summon the Austro-Hungarian peace plenipotentiaries to a meeting by the end of May, the Paris newspapers assert today. The Austro-Hungarian delegation will be housed at St. Germain.

St. Germain is seven miles north of Versailles and the Austrians will thus be separated from the Germans at Versailles. The actual negotiations will take place at Versailles, to which place the Austrians will be transported by motor cars.

Reuter's correspondent says the Austrians and Hungarians have been invited to come the week after next.

Conference in Museum.

The prefect of the department of Seine-et-Oise and Col. Henry of the French war office went to St. Germain today to look over the situation and to arrange for quarters.

Several hotels are available for the Austrians while an old chateau, which has been rebuilt for use as a museum, offers suitable conference halls.

The famous terrace of St. Germain, overlooking the Seine, will be used by the delegates for exercise.

EXPECTS EARLY PEACE

PARIS, May 3.—[By the United Press.]—Peace with the other enemy powers is expected to follow quickly the signing of the German treaty.

According to the previously announced program, the Bulgarian and Turkish treaties will be taken up at practically the same time as the Austrian agreement.

The German treaty, it was believed tonight, will be handed to the Germans at Versailles not later than Wednesday. A secret plenary session of the peace conference, at which the entire treaty will be considered, is regarded as a certainty before the document is presented to the enemy representatives.

May Decide Italy Dispute.

Peace with Austria is regarded as certain to affect the Italian situation. Italy is directly concerned in the terms of this pact. Fiume, which was the direct cause of the Italians' withdrawal from the conference, formerly was an Austro-Hungarian port. Dalmatia formed the principal portion of the Austro-Hungarian coast line on the Adriatic.

A statement was issued by Italian press headquarters here today that the American, British, and French ambassadors in Rome had opened negotiations with the Italian government for return of the Italian delegation. No confirmation of this could be obtained here, but the feeling was growing tonight that some understanding would be reached.

Count Cellere, Italian ambassador to the United States, was granted a conference with President Wilson today. The visit was regarded as a hopeful sign.

ITALY PRESS PROTESTS

ROME, May 2.—Delayed. — Newspapers favorable to the government protest against the continuation by the peace conference of negotiations with the German delegates without the participation of Italy, because, they say, it violates the treaty between the allies forbidding a separate peace. Tribuna says:

"The allies are pledged to us by a sacred treaty. They cannot sign a peace without us and they cannot make a separate peace without reason. President Wilson may be an autocrat, but not to the point of imposing the shame of treason upon Great Britain and France."

The Idea Nazionale asks how the peace conference could declare the league of nations approved unanimously last Monday while Italy was absent; how the conference could assign Kiau-Chau to Japan when Italy was not present, and how the conference can present the preliminaries of peace to the German delegates without Italy acting with them. The newspaper adds:

"The conference places itself outside the alliance of Italy. Italy must answer by the annexation of the territories she claims."

TREATY OMITS ITALY?

BY RICHARD V. OULAHAN.
Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.
[Copyright: 1919.]

PARIS, May 2.—[Delayed.]—A substitute draft of the peace treaty is being prepared, with all the provisions relating to Italy omitted. The failure of the Italian plenipotentiaries to exchange credentials with the German plenipotentiaries at Versailles yesterday has made no impression on the conference, as the allied chiefs had already decided to arrange the treaties with Germany and Austria without Italy's concurrence if that government persisted in its attitude on the Fiume question.

In the section of the German peace treaty relating to reparations, two articles which concerned compensation to Italy have been left out of the new draft.

Everything indicates that France, Great Britain, Japan, and America are determined that peace shall not be delayed by Italy's course.

WANT COLONIES BACK

LONDON, May 3.—Reuter's Limited learns from reliable sources that, among the terms of the treaty to which the Germans will offer the most objection, is that relating to the surrender of her colonies. They will urge that German East Africa, Togoland, and Kamerun be left to her, and, upon refusal, will ask to be assigned some part in the future administration of the former German colonies.

They will ask that, in any case, Germany shall not be debarred from purchasing some Portuguese colonies at a future date, should Portugal be willing to sell.

A plea also will be made that the Saar area revert to Germany after a term of years. The delegates will oppose any proposal to deprive them of sovereignty over the Kiel canal, while agreeing that it shall be free to the world's commerce.

Oppose Polish Corridor.

They will oppose any so-called Polish corridor, while guaranteeing to Poland the right of free transit both by rail and by the Vistula to Danzig and while opposing any plan to deprive them of sovereignty over the city itself, will agree that portions of Danzig shall be reserved solely for Polish commerce.

It is not improbable that the peace treaty will not be ready for presentation to the Germans before the end of next week, says Reuter's Paris correspondent, owing to the fact that several questions remain unsettled and also because the actual working document is taking more time than had been anticipated.

STUDY CABLES PROBLEM

PARIS, May 3.—[By the Associated Press.]—In an effort to hasten the remaining details of the peace treaty the council of three met an hour earlier than usual today and resumed consideration of the question of the German cables. The council planned to hear experts appointed to study the question.

The Italian situation took on a favorable appearance today. The indications were that some arrangement would be made for Italy to be represented when the peace treaty is presented next Wednesday.

Thomas Nelson Page, the American ambassador, and Camille Barrere, French ambassador, both are making efforts at Rome to find by conversations with Premier Orlando a formula which will heal the breach caused by the withdrawal of the Italian delegation.

PEN IN GERMAN ENVOYS

VERSAILLES, May 3.—[By the Associated Press.]—The erection of barricades in the "German quarter" of Versailles, designed to prevent any of the Germans from straying off the section assigned to them, began this morning. The barricades consist of wooden palings bound with wire and set up on both sides of the Rue des Reservoirs, one side of which is reserved for the Germans, while the opposite side has been left free for residents.

Strict control will be established at all the exits to prevent the Germans from going out of bounds without authority.

These strict measures were considered necessary because of the disinclination of some of the subordinates in the German party to obey the regulations prescribed for their movements.

GERMAN ENVOYS EAGER TO GRASP PASTRIES, SOAP

Peace Agents Waiting for Terms Which the Allies Decide.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

VERSAILLES, May 3.—From my window in the Hotel Reservoir I can watch the German peace delegates, who are housed in a separate wing of the hotel and see them strolling up and down the fenced off portion of the grounds behind the hotel. Every morning they send out for all the Paris newspapers. They are particularly intreested in the Paris press printed in English and they practically buy out the news venders' entire stock of Heralds, Daily Mails, and CHICAGO TRIBUNES.

Most of the enemy delegation, which numbers a couple of hundred, are perfectly satisfied to wait indefinitely until the big three solve the world problems, as they are living and eating much better here than they did at home. Only half a dozen of the Germans brought any soap with them and it was the first thing they demanded. Every German demands two or three helpings of butter at each meal and none makes any attempt to conceal the delight at drinking real coffee again.

The Germans evince their old time taste for French pastry and they insist that tarts and cakes form the dessert at each meal. The Bordeaux wines form their favorite beverage and they have bribed every guard, waiter, and chambermaid to purchase cigars and cigarets for them, as their own smoking material is ill smelling and bad tasting.

Some Trouble Caused.

The officer in charge of the French chasseurs, guarding the Germans, said that no trouble was experienced with any of the German delegation except in one instance, when three German newspaper reporters, accompanying the delegation, slipped out of the hotel and went to Paris. The trio were stationed in Paris before the war and they immediately looked up their former girl friends in Paris.

The three Germans made a date for a dinner the next night with the girls, but this time they were detected on leaving the hotel and stopped. The Germans pleaded to be permitted to keep the engagement, explaining that the girls would be waiting for them, but when the French officers volunteered to send word that the Germans could not show up, they refused the offer, stating that they feared they might get the girls into trouble for associating with the enemy.

The French officers had little sympathy for the women who consented to make an appointment with Germans.

French Are Indifferent.

The people here are supremely indifferent to the Germans' presence and even the small boys no longer are finding enjoyment in peeping through the fence and yelling, "Sales boches!" until the French guards drive them away away with a great show of fierceness. One boy told his mother, "The boches look just like other men," and the French sentry, with a fixed bayonet, grinned.

Beginning today, Versailles is a closed city to every one except the natives and those holding special passes. Soldiers are placed on every road entering the city and passes are needed to enter the town. Another pass is necessary to approach the Reservoir hotel, and a third pass is needed for entering the chateau grounds and approaching the Trianon palace, where the meetings between the Germans and the allies will take place.

German Five Billion Issue Meets Quick Death.

PARIS, May 3.—Following the Klotz failure to saddle the international pool of all war debts upon the peace conference, which would have left the United States to carry the allies' financial burden, the American financial experts today rejected the British plan formulated by F. M. Keynes of the British treasury providing for a $5,000,000,000 bond issue to Germany, to be guaranteed by allied and associated powers.

In the opinion of the American delegation, including President Wilson, the British plan is obnoxious to the American people, who are realized to be reluctant to become guarantors for European loans. Furthermore, the $5,000,000,000 loan to Germany is necessitated only because of the shortsightedness of the European allies, who insist upon extracting all the liquid assets from the Germans and then want the United States to provide more as a working capital for Germany.

Blame Lies with Allies.

If the British plan had been passed it was expected Germany would use half to three-fourths of the $5,000,000,000 bond issue for reparation extracted under the Paris treaty and the balance for internal credits. American financial wizards, under the leadership of Thomas W. Lamont, studied the proposition and rejected it with the president's approval.

CHINESE ISSUE PROTEST UPON JAPANESE GRAB

Claim That Allies Act Unjustly in the Far East.

PARIS, Friday, May 2.—[By the Associated Press.]—In declaring its disappointment with the decision of the council of three regarding Kiau Chau, the Chinese delegation to the peace conference in a statement today said that the decision gives Japan practical control of northern China. The statement reads:

"The Chinese delegation has been informed orally on behalf of the council of three of the outline of the settlement proposed regarding the Shantung question. Under this settlement all rights to Kiau-Chau formerly belonging to Germany are transferred to Japan. While Japan voluntarily engages to hand back the Shantung peninsula in full sovereignty to China, she is allowed to retain the economic privileges formerly enjoyed by Germany.

Will Gain Economic Rule.

"These privileges, the delegation is informed, refer to the Tsingtao-Chinan railway, 280 miles long; the mines connected with it, and the two railways to be built connecting Shantung with the two trunk lines from Peking to the Yangtse valley. In addition she obtains the right to establish a settlement at Tsingtao, and although the Japanese military forces, it is understood, will be withdrawn from Shantung at the earliest possible moment, the employment of special railway police is permitted.

"Such being the outline of the proposed settlement the Chinese delegation cannot but view it with disappointment and dissatisfaction.

"These German rights in Shantung originated in an act of wanton aggression in 1897, characteristic of Prussian militarism. To transfer these rights to Japan, as the council of three proposes to do, is, therefore, to confirm an act of aggression which has been resented by the Chinese people ever since its perpetration.

Chinese Capital Crippled.

"Such virtual substitution of Japan for Germany in Shantung is serious enough in itself, but it becomes grave when the position of Japan in southern Manchuria and eastern Mongolia is read in connection with it. Firmly intrenched on both sides of the Gulf of Pe Chi Li, the water outlet of Peking, with a hold on the three trunk lines from Peking and connecting it with the rest of China, the capital becomes but an enclave in the midst of Japanese influence.

"Moreover, owing to China's declaration of war against the central powers Aug. 14, 1917, and the abrogation of all treaties and agreements between China and these powers, the German rights automatically reverted to China. This declaration was officially notified to and taken cognizance of by the allied and associated governments. It is, therefore, significant that the council in announcing the settlements of the Kiau-Chau-Shantung question referred to the rights to be transferred to Japan as 'the rights formerly belonging to Germany.'

Bestows Rights of China.

"It appears clear, then, that the council has been bestowing on Japan the rights, not of Germany, but of China; not of an enemy, but of an ally. The more powerful ally has reaped a benefit at the expense, not of the common enemy, but of the weaker ally.

"If the council has granted the claims of Japan in full for the purpose of saying the league of nations, as is intimated to be the case, China has less to complain of, believing as she does that it is a duty to make sacrifices for such a noble cause as the league of nations.

"She cannot, however, refrain from wishing that the council had seen fit, as would be far more consonant with the spirit of the league now on the eve of formation, to call upon strong Japan to forego her claims, animated by a desire for aggrandizement, instead of upon weak China to surrender what is hers by right.

Raises Question of Fiume.

"China came to the conference with a strong faith in the lofty principles adopted by the allied and associated powers as the basis of a just and permanent world peace. Great, therefore, will be the disappointment and disillusion of the Chinese people over the proposed settlement.

"If there is reason for the council to stand firm on the question of Fiume, there would seem to be all the more reason to uphold the claim of China relating to Shantung, which includes the future welfare of thirty-six million souls and the highest interest of peace in the far east."

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 3.—

FRANK S. DICKSON, adjutant general of the Illinois national guard, took up with the war department today the question of reorganizing the guard in that state. Gen. Dickson told Maj. Gen. Jesse McI. Carter, chief of the militia bureau, that Illinois will proceed with the reorganization at once, now that the former national guard regiments are beginning to return. The tentative table of organization for the Illinois national guard as worked out by the general staff provides for three or four infantry regiments and two or three of artillery, a smaller number of units than existed previously. The guard will be expanded as further appropriations are obtained.

WILLIAM B. WILSON, secretary of labor, in a letter to James Wilson, president of the International Association of Pattern Makers, says that bolshevism will secure no foothold among the workers of the United States. He quotes from the utterances of Lenine in Russia and declares that no sane American whose mind has not been perverted by self-interest would think of displacing the orderly processes of progress provided by American institutions. Agitation for anti-red legislation continues and action is practically assured when congress meets.

REPUBLICAN SENATORS, learning from the White House that President Wilson probably will not call congress much before June 1, are considering means of meeting the widespread propaganda in favor of the league of nations covenant being conducted by the League to Enforce Peace. They recognize its potency and, with a month before congress meets, they recognize that much public sentiment might be created in favor of the covenant. They propose to counteract this with a campaign of education on their reasons for modifying the covenant's terms.

THE WAR DEPARTMENT, having decorated soldiers for bravery in war, now proposes to issue citations of honor to American employing citizens who do their duty to the country by accepting returned soldiers and sailors to their old jobs.

Herron Claims Italy Is Victim of an Injustice

ROME, Friday, May 2.—The Epoca today prints a letter from Prof. George D. Herron declaring that grave injustice is being done to Italy and that the people of the various countries do not know what is happening behind the scenes in Paris.

ITALIAN ANGER TOWARD WILSON BEING COOLED

People Suspect That There Was Reason for His Plea.

BY WALTER DURANTY.
Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.

ROME, April 30.—[Delayed.]—Public excitement here has greatly diminished and there is a general feeling of satisfaction that yesterday's meetings of the chamber and the senate were unaccompanied by popular demonstrations.

Although President Wilson is still out of favor, Italians are coming to admit that there is something to be said for his motives in issuing his manifesto. They at least allow, though with a certain surprised reluctance, that as far as the internal situation is concerned, the effects have been nothing but good.

Moreover, now that calm and forethought are taking the place of the previous hotheaded fervor, a majority of the ruling classes, at any rate, realize that nothing would be more regrettable than that a gulf should exist between Italy and the allies.

View of Turin Deputy.

In the words of Deputy Davione, Nationalist representative of Turin:

"Whatever be one's personal opinion of the practicality of the league of nations scheme, as outlined in Paris, one is forced to agree that, commercially speaking—and after all in the modern world, commerce is of paramount importance—the nations are already bound by business ties which, without being formally drawn up in a covenant, are none the less real.

"It is unthinkable that Italy, with her mighty industrious population, but with her great need of raw materials, should hold permanently aloof. Now that we have demonstrated our unity of purpose in support of the Italian claims, it is the universal hope that a ground for understanding will be speedily found."

Italian View of Fiume.

The question remains, how is that ground to be attained? One thing seems certain, that no agreement can be accepted by Italy which will deprive her of Fiume. The Italians meet the argument that they are trying to have their cake and eat it by pleading the London treaty for Dalmatia and self-determination for Fiume, with the assertion that it is not Italy which is asking Fiume, but Fiume begging to be reunited to Italy.

To them Fiume is a daughter city crying to her mother to save her from her enemies. The Italians cannot leave that cry unheard and, rightly or wrongly, they will insist on Fiume to the bitter end.

This, however, does not mean that it is impossible to reach some compromise as to Italian tenure of the city under the league of nations, paralleling somewhat, for instance, the arrangement made for the Saar valley.

33D DIVISION MAY REACH U. S. ABOUT MAY 11

BY PARKE BROWN.

DIEKIRCHE, Luxemburg, May 3.—Word comes back from Brest today that the entire 33d division may be on the Atlantic as early as Monday and probably will begin landing in the United States about May 11. Reports indicate the train movement to the coast has been smooth, the maximum delay of any train so far being four hours. But even with this delay the entire journey from Luxemburg was made in less than seventy hours, and the schedule is sixty-three and a half hours, and there is the good news of an early sailing date.

The 33d, by good fortune, reached Brest just as a large number of transports were making ready to start westward. The 32d was not as fortunate and reached Brest between two ship movements. Therefore it suffered a longer stay in port. It is believed the longest stay of any 33d man there will be two days. Divisions to follow possibly will be even more fortunate. When the next one reaches Brest the entire camp there may be held only a few hours.

The official schedule published long ago showed the 89th would follow the 33d from this area. The last train of the thirty-four standard trains of American box cars was used by the previous division. The departure of the 5th division has completed taking over the 33d's area by spreading out from its own adjoining part of Luxemburg.

ERMAN BOASTS THEY WILL HAVE A RIVAL LEAGUE

Claims Allies Must Pay for Sinking Grand Fleet.

BY HENRY WALES.

[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

VERSAILLES, May 3.—The state of mind of the German peace delegates was outlined today by one of the newspapermen accompanying the delegation. While he has no official communication with the enemy contingent, he undoubtedly reflected the views of his countrymen and the hopes they entertain as to the outcome of the negotiations.

"We got most of our information regarding what the peace conference had decided to embody in the treaty and what the principal terms were from the English newspapers and THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE Paris edition," said this German reporter.

"The English newspapers printed the military terms, and I do not believe that Germany will accept the small army that Lloyd George demands. We read with great amusement President Wilson's explanation of how the 'freedom of the seas' will be nonexistent in the next war because, owing to the league of nations, there will be no neutrals, but the average German believes that in this matter Mr. Wilson merely avoided this obstacle to placate England.

"Will Not Yield Saar."

"We will never agree to give up the Saar valley if it can possibly be avoided and President Wilson should realize that he is only creating another Alsace-Lorraine if he agrees to the French demands for these coal fields. We are willing to insure France a coal supply until the Lens mines are working again, but will oppose the French occupying the Saar basin.

"From the way President Wilson refused Italy Fiume, it seems inevitable that Danzig can go to Poland, which will cause another festering spot in Germany and will surely result in trouble eventually.

"Germany will never give up its fleet permanently, either, and if the allies sink the high seas fleet, as it is rumored, the cost of these warships will be deducted from the reparations we pay."

Scoffs at World League.

My informant seemed to regard the league of nations lightly, and asserted that he believed there would be two leagues of nations.

"Germany, Austria, Hungary, Bulgaria, Russia, Mexico, and Turkey are outside the league, and now Italy is out also," he said. "Japan and China would gladly join a league offering a harmless clause about the equality of all races, which an opposition society of nations might willingly insert.

"It seems to be that there is plenty of room on this earth for two leagues of nations, and they would be fairly equally divided in strength and prestige, especially if the other league collected a few members from among the dissatisfied members of President Wilson's league, such as Spain, and perhaps Jugo-Slavia."

Can Pay Damages Soon.

This newspaperman is not worried over Germany's inability to pay the reparations bill, explaining that despite the tremendous cost of keeping up the imperial military and naval machine before the war Germany made money hand over fist.

"Now with a limitation of armaments and all the money saved and all the former military man power working industrially, we will be a bigger factor than ever," he said. "All we need is raw materials and shipping facilities.

"Furthermore, Germany soon will become the world's premier aerial nation, as we have the best dirigibles and aeroplanes. Every allied aviator ever captured—French, British, or American—was forced to admit that our machines were the best.

"The British dirigibles will never equal our Zeppelins. They never used them on long distance raids or cruises during the war. The Gotha machines which we used nearly two years ago were bigger than the biggest French, British, or American machines today, figures prove."

ASSERTS U. S. IS NOT OBLIGED TO BUY SPEEDWAY

Washington, D. C., May 3.—Controller Warwick of the treasury ruled today that the act of congress appropriating $3,000,000 for acquisition by the public health service of the Speedway hospital project at Chicago was not mandatory and that if the service desired it might spend the money for a hospital or sanitarium elsewhere.

There has been no announcement as to whether the public health officials propose to take over the nearly completed Speedway project as a part of the program for the care of sick and wounded soldiers and sailors. Secretary Glass, however, has under consideration a recommendation of the service that the hospital building be purchased for $2,500,000, and that the remaining $500,000 of the appropriation be spent in completing and equipping the building.

The Speedway hospital was built by Chicago interests with the expectation that it would be taken over by the war department. When the department failed to accept it a bitter controversy arose which was aired before a senate investigating committee.

HOMECOMING OF 149TH WILL BE MILITARY ONE

Civilian Outfits to Be Barred from Chicago Parade.

Military regulations will dominate Chicago's great homecoming ovation to the 149th field artillery next Thursday.

Announcement of the decision to eliminate everything of an unmilitary nature from the stirring regimental parade of the gunner heroes was made last night by Col. W. N. Pelouze, chairman of the city welcoming committee, following conferences with representatives of both regimental auxiliaries, the governor's reception committee, and city officials.

In the "harmony meetings" it was emphasized that the artillerymen themselves, and not homefolks' organizations nor Chicago patriotic societies, are to be the guests of honor and center of attention on the big day. Elimination of all civilian features from the parade has been requested by Col. Henry J. Reilly, commander of the famous Rainbow regiment.

Mrs. Unger Active.

"Minor differences concerning the choice of a banqueting place and parade features were brought up today by Mrs. A. H. Unger and a delegation of the Fathers and Mothers' association, of which she is president," said the homecoming director. "This organization felt that the homecoming dinner should have been given at the Hotel La Salle because it has been headquarters for the auxiliary, and desired to furnish a civilian float to head the regimental parade.

"It was explained that arrangements for the dinner had been made before any specific request had been made by any auxiliary. Today is the first time I have been notified that the committee's choice of hotel accommodations was not entirely satisfactory. It was also explained that the homecoming parade will be kept strictly within military lines upon the request of Col. Reilly himself and to conform with all military precedent. After the usual advance guard of mounted police a gun caisson and cannon, properly draped, will be drawn as a memorial to the regiment's dead. The famous regimental band will follow, leading the unit. Wounded and casual members of the regiment will be in line. Civilian floats and automobiles may follow the parade if permission is had from city authorities, but they must not detract from the unit itself."

Parade Starts 11:45 a. m.

The parade will start from the Coliseum promptly at 11:45 a. m. after gunners have enjoyed reunions with their relatives and friends there. The head of the column will pass the official reviewing stand at Michigan avenue and Harrison street at 12:10 p. m., where it will be reviewed by Gen. Wood, Gov. Lowden, Admiral Bassett, and other army, state, and city officials, and proceed through the loop, bringing up at the Congress hotel, where dinner will be served the entire regiment of 1,011 men and officers in the gold room. Three bands will be stationed along the line of march. Addresses will be made during the dinner by Gov. Lowden and Gen. Wood.

Two Grand Stands.

Both Chicago auxiliaries have arranged to erect grand stands on Michigan avenue to accommodate relatives of the gunners. The official reviewing party of sixty will occupy the reviewing stand, which is to be moved from its present location at the Art Institute to the foot of Harrison street.

Col. Reilly left Camp Merritt yesterday to visit Washington, where he made final arrangements for the movement of his regiment to Chicago. The movement will begin Tuesday afternoon and will bring the gunners to the Illinois Central station at 8:30 a. m. on Thursday.

LOYAL EMPLOYERS ARE TO RECEIVE U. S. HONOR CERTIFICATES

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 3.—[Special.]—In these days of government recognition of men who did their duty in the war, decorations and citations have until now been confined principally to those who fought for their country or performed some heroic deed directly connected with the war.

Now, however, the government proposes to recognize the patriotic employers who perform their duty in employing returning soldiers and sailors. Such men are to receive a citation from the government which will carry with it a special certificate that may be handed down to posterity.

Announcement to this effect was made today by Col. Arthur Woods, assistant to the secretary of war, who explains that his office has completed arrangements with both the war and navy departments for this recognition of employers who pledge themselves to take back employés who entered the service and to show preference to soldiers and sailors in taking on new employés.

For those who join this new legion of honor among employers a special certificate will be given, suitable for framing, signed by Secretary Baker of the war department, Secretary Daniels of the navy department, and by Col. Arthur Woods, representing the war and navy departments.

This certificate, which is headed "War and Navy Departments, United States of America," reads as follows: "This certifies that John Doe has assured the war and navy departments that he will gladly reëmploy everybody who formerly worked with him, and left to serve in the army or navy during the great war.

MAYOR PROCLAIMS EMPLOYMENT SUNDAY TO AID EX-FIGHTERS

MAYOR THOMPSON issued a proclamation yesterday declaring today, "Employment Sunday." Employment Sunday has been designated by national church organizations as a day throughout the nation when efforts will be made from the pulpit to obtain employment for workless discharged soldiers, sailors, and marines. The mayor's proclamation follows:

"The national church organizations of the United States have united in a campaign to assist the United States employment service and coöperating agencies in finding employment for returning soldiers, sailors, and war workers.

"Sunday, May 4, has been designated as 'Employment Sunday,' upon which this subject will be discussed in churches and before religious gatherings in the hope of stimulating further the work of finding employment for the men who are returning from overseas and from camps.

"At the request of the secretary of labor I am calling public attention to this day and hope that it may be successful in inaugurating a more intensive effort by all of our people who have the welfare of our returning fighting men at heart."

MRS. CASTLE AND CAPT. TREMAN ARE MARRIED

New York, May 3.—Mrs. Irene Castle, famous dancer and film star, and Capt. Robert Treman of Ithaca, N. Y., were married shortly after noon today at the Little Church Around the Corner.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Houghton, rector of the church.

The widow of Vernon Castle, who died a little more than a year ago when he fell in an airplane in Texas, had consistently denied that she was to wed.

Mrs. Castle, it was announced, will continue her work in the films under the name of Irene Castle.

The couple left tonight for Loon lake, in the Adirondacks.

Mrs. Castle, it was stated, will make her home in Ithaca, which is the home of the bridegroom, and in New York she will live at the Ritz hotel, giving up her home on Lexington avenue, where she lived with her former husband.

Mrs. Castle and Capt. Treman were attended at the wedding by life long friends. The bridesmaid was Mrs. Clement Amory of New York City and the best man was Sherman Peer of Ithaca, a classmate of Capt. Treman when they attended Cornell university. The ushers were E. L. Sprague and John M. Guntlet of New York and Lewis Henery of Elmira. Philip Boyer, a broker, gave the bride away. Mrs. Castle was dressed in a gray charmeuse satin dress and wore a large gray picture hat.

REILLY'S BUCKS ADVANCE GUARD REACHES HOME

149th Casuals Cheer as Old, Familiar Scenes Loom.

Sleepless, cold and hungry, but wearing a grin that rivaled their Rainbow insigna for luster, a half dozen members of Col. Henry J. Reilly's 149th artillery said "Howdy, home," to Chicago yesterday.

Nearly a week in advance of their regiment, and exuding gleeful sympathy for the "poor birds who are long distancing Chicago from way down east" the advance homecoming party passed through the city shortly after 5 p. m. on a Camp Grant troop train which carried more than one hundred combat casuals from Camp Merritt. They shouted greetings to the first familiar landmarks as their trains came in from the southeast, drank in Chicago's smoke and smacked their lips, cheered the stockyards odor to the echo and led a mad charge for telephones when the train drew up in the Great Western yards.

Yards "Sweet Incense."

"Boy," said Gunner F. A. Rupert of B battery, who in pre-bellum days lived at 1951 Belmont avenue, "that sniff of the yards as we came by was the best perfume I've smelled since we started traveling. Wait 'til that bunch of wild men in Camp Merrit smells it. We looked all over France just to find a stockyards and get one home thrill."

"This is the only luck we've had since the armistice," declared Corporal F. J. Hartigan of F battery, after he had been pulled forcibly from one of the three telephones in the yard office. "Some of us missed our sailing orders when the regiment boarded the Leviathan and came home in a tub. We beat Col. Reilly home and were waiting for the bunch at Merritt. When they saw us heading west there nearly was a riot in those parts. The regiment has been feasting on the thought of what they will do when they hit Chicago for so long that it's a religion with them."

Other Homecomers.

Other members of the regiment who came through as advance casuals to return for the regimental reception next Thursday included A. R. Sabin, 3934 West Byron street; K. H. Kittoe, 7922 Yale avenue; Henry Kurty, 1425 South Homan avenue, and Herbert Loving, 8119 Burnham avenue.

The train, packed to the doors with Chicago and Illinois men who fought through the last campaigns in France, carried more Rainbow division men, Prairie division casuals, Blackhawks, and representatives of other divisions and overseas organizations. None of the men had slept since leaving Camp Merritt because of the cramped quarters and discomforts of the wooden day coaches in their train. Ancient wooden cars had been commandeered to bring the party home, because of the lack of passenger stock in the east.

Just Like France.

"Just like sunny France," commented Frank J. Koridek, 2025 West Coulter street, a Prairie division veteran, "only over there they are honest about it and mark their de luxe cars 'eight horses or fifty men.'"

Mrs. Robert Biddle's Red Cross canteen team welcomed the train. The workers included Lieut. Slade, Mrs. Seymour Wheeler, Eleanor Dawes, and Mrs. Worth Dunham.

Legion Meet Delegates Get Special R. R. Rate

"All railroads running into St. Louis have agreed to carry delegates to the American Legion convention—which is to be held there May 8, 9, and 10—on the basis of two-thirds fare for the round trip, from any point in Illinois."

Maj. Thomas R. Gowenlock, chairman of the publicity committee for Illinois, made the statement last night. Those desiring to attend the convention can get the reduced rates by showing discharge papers and furlough papers or the American Legion certificate, countersigned by Eric Fisher Wood, temporary secretary of the national committee.

Arrangements have been made to lodge and board the delegates for $1 a day. These accommodations may be obtained from the legion headquarters at the Hotel Statler.

RUSSIANS OPEN DRIVE IN NORTH; FAIL TO GAIN

Allies Repulse Heavy Attack on Vaga Front with Big Loss.

LONDON, May 3.—A war office official report says that Archangel advices have been received to the effect that serious enemy attacks, long anticipated, have begun on the Dvina and Vaga fronts. A message from the Dvina front on Thursday says bolshevik gunboats shelled the allied positions spasmodically, but were forced to withdraw, owing to the gunfire.

A Vaga front dispatch Friday says that after a long bombardment the enemy delivered an attack in great strength, but was being repulsed everywhere with great loss. In the forest the enemy suffered heavy casualties, leaving forty dead lying on the wire. Gen. Ironside says the allied troops fought splendidly.

Americans on Vaga River.

The ice on the Dvina river has completely broken up from Archangel and is moving out. It is expected the river will be navigable for gunboats within a week.

A contingent of Americans was stationed recently on the Vaga front, where the bolsheviki are attacking, it was learned from an authoritative source.

Join Against Roumania.

PARIS, May 3.—The Temps announces today that a wireless message sent out by the Russian soviet government Friday gives the text of a treaty of alliance entered into by the Ukrainian and Russian bolsheviki against Roumania.

Petrograd has probably been taken by the Finns, according to information believed to be trustworthy which has reached Paris.

Defeated on East Front.

HELSINGFORS, Finland, May 1.—Delayed.—[By the Associated Press.]—Defeated along the entire eastern front by the Siberian armies, the bolshevik forces are retiring in disorder, the Russian newspaper Russkaya Pjisni says.

Three Yanks Dead, 8 Hurt, in French Train Crash

ORLEANS, France, May 3.—Three American soldiers were killed and eight injured seriously when an American army motor truck was struck by a railroad train at a grade crossing near La Ferte-St. Aubin, thirteen miles southeast of Orleans, today.

MOSCOW CENTER OF SOCIAL QUAKE SHAKING RUSSIA

People Less Hungry and Food Cheaper in City of the Soviet.

BY FRAZIER HUNT.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

FINAL ARTICLE.

MOSCOW, April 20, via Helsingfors and Paris, May 3.—Here in Moscow at the seat of the Russian soviet government the revolution assumes deeper tones than the agonized cry for food that one hears everywhere in Petrograd. You feel the real thrill of the terrible upheaval of the old social orders here.

You hear the pulsebeat of the revolution—for here is the heart of Russia, and you know that the immediate future of the country centers in a group of men sitting in former quarters of the czar within the ancient walls of the gorgeous half barbaric Kremlin.

The east begins to show itself here. You catch it even in the frozen twilight when the bulbed Byzantine towers of Moscow's thousand and one churches are silhouetted against the gray skies. In this city of revolution the east really meets the west.

People Less Hungry.

The people look less hungry and less desperate than in Petrograd. Food is a little more plentiful and a little cheaper. Petrograd is and always has been the outpost of the revolution and the frontier of protest within the government itself against its own workings. Petrograd is as a foreign city of Russia and the fires of revolution always have been kindled there. She is always striking and having labor troubles, but Petrograd is only Petrograd, while Moscow is Russia. If one could catch the voice of soviet Russia speaking through Moscow he would probably hear some such words as these: "How long will it last?" Friends who invite you to a modest dinner of soup, roast horse, potatoes, cornmeal pudding, and black bread that probably cost your hostess $20, say it. The taxi driver who charges you $8 for a journey that in the old days would have been high at 80 kopeks, or 40 cents, shrugs his shoulders at your protest and tells you that 40 pounds of hay costs $10, says it.

Homes Are Cold.

Many think they mean will the soviet power last, but what they really mean is how long will the present unbearable, disheartening conditions last. How long before there will be sufficient wood to keep the houses and offices warm enough to be even half comfortable. I am writing this in a room that has had no heat for days, and there is a snowstorm blewing outside. How long before the factories can go ahead again, cars run regularly, and streets be cleaned and men have a real liberty of expression and a feeling of freedom and a real voice in the country. How long before there will be smiles and happy people.

The protest against the soviet communist government as an order and type government is growing less and less, and discontent is centering in things that have not been done and things that could not have been done. The protest of physical conditions—it is a cry for the plain comforts and the plain liberties—is the outstanding fact that one senses here in Moscow. The revolution has won, but he soviet government has yet to succeed. It has failed to make good with its own people primarily because it has been unable to tear down with one hand and build up with the other, especially when the world has locked its own doors from the outside. The soviet government will never be a secure positive government until it does give its people the comforts and life they are crying for.

No More Revolt Dreams.

And so it is that today the leaders are not dreaming of revolution but of building up and of opening Russia again to the world and of the world opening itself to Russia. They are talking and working only for recognition without and within themselves. They want America and the world to recognize them, but they are striving as well to have men and brains within the country, who have held off from them, recognize what is best in them.

Just as they will compromise with the world to gain a national recognition, so they will compromise with their own people to gain domestic recognition. They are now distinguishing between different classes within the classes.

Cry for Bread Goes On.

While they dream of outside and inside recognition the cry for bread goes on, and Moscow walks to work while electric power houses rot for lack of fuel. Numberless factories are closed down and the whole economic life of the country is wrecked. It is a desperate hour of doubt and chance for the soviet government. They are fighting with their backs to the wall.

"And if we could only buy 1,000 locomotives from America we could make a thousand factories sing again," one high government official told me. "If they would only give us a chance to end our civil wars and foreign troubles and to open our country and go into the world and buy things we need to rebuild our broken country."

This is a desperate hour and they are making a hard fight to carry on. From March 18 until April 10 no regular passenger trains were run, so that every bit of available transport could be used to bring food and fuel. Two hundred and twenty engines were freed and the government announced they were able to haul to the cities 60,000 tons of extra food from the newly opened food depots of Ukrainia and the south.

A short time ago Lenine gave the workmen of Petrograd these figures. There was something tragically pitiful about bragging of releasing 220 engines when Russia should count them in the thousands.

I came from Petrograd to Moscow on the last of the regular passenger trains that left there. Despite the general transport breakdown the train was a very comfortable one with an international sleeping car, and it made the journey in nineteen hours.

Moscow one finds more settled down with the revolution than Petrograd. The communist government has stamped the city with more of its plans. All private shops and stores are closed. Unless one goes to the great public market, where prices are so high that to foreigners it seems foolish, you can't get a safety pin without a passport and a card at the government stores.

Different in Ukrainia.

Everything but these open markets are run by the government. In this connection it is interesting to note that in the newly acquired Ukrainian revolutionary district, which has its own soviet power independent of Moscow, private trade and private banks have not been crushed. Even government officials here are watching carefully how this experiment of not tearing down every phase of the old economic system works out in a socialistic state. Moscow has swung farthest to the opposite end, where there is complete government ownership of everything.

VICTIMS OF REDS IN MUNICH

Richest Man in Germany and Leading Artist, Hostages Held by Communists, Reported to Have Been Shot.

PROF. FRANZ STUCK.

PRINCE ALBERT OF THURN AND TAXIS.

Prince Albert of Thurn and Taxis, who, with three other hostages, were reported to have been shot by Munich communists, before the war was the richest man in Germany. Next to him was Frau Bertha Krupp von Bohlen, daughter of the founder of the Krupp works at Essen, with Friedlander Fuld, the Berlin coal king third and the former kaiser fourth. Prince Albert married Marguerite Clementine, princess imperial of Austria. He was 52 years old and had six sons and one daughter.

Prof. Franz Stuck, another victim, was one of the leading artists of Germany. He was 45 years old.

Prince von Werde and Privy Counselor Albert Doederlein also were reported to have been shot.

PRINCES AMONG HOSTAGES SHOT BY MUNICH REDS

Many Killed in Battle In and North Of Bavarian Capital.

BERLIN, via Copenhagen, May 2.—[By the Associated Press.]—Delayed.—Among the hostages said to have been shot in Munich by the communists before they were overpowered were Prince Albert of Thurn and Taxis, Prince von Wrede, Privy Councilor Albert Doederlein, and Prof. Franz Stuck.

Prince Albert was head of the Bavarian branch of the family of Thurn and Taxis. He was married to Archduchess Marguerite of Austria and was one of the leading nobles of Bavaria. The Von Wrede family has been prominent in Bavaria for years.

Dr. Doederlein was a professor in the University of Munich, while Prof. Stuck was well known as a sculptor, painter, and architect.

Many Fall in Battle.

Heavy fighting marked the entry of Bavarian and German government troops into Munich, and there were heavy losses on both sides.

The government forces entered the city after a communist offer to negotiate had been refused. They met with desperate resistance which made it necessary to fight for each position. The attack was carried out by combined Prussian, Bavarian and Wurttemberg troops, who fought their way into the suburbs of Schwabing, Thalkirchen and Nymphenburg.

100 Killed North of Munich.

BERNE, May 3.—[Havas.]—Desperate fighting between government forces and communists is proceeding north and east of Munich, according to advices received here. Already more than 100 persons are reported to have been killed.

The Red guards, before evacuating Munich, destroyed all documents at police headquarters, wiping out the records of fifty years.

BUYS HOBOKEN PIERS OF GERMAN STEAMSHIP CO.

New York, May 3.—[Special.]—Another possibility that Germany might be able to resume as a commercial sea power after the war has been removed by the United States in the purchase for national purposes of the three piers of the old Hamburg-American line at Hoboken, thus leaving the German Steamship company with no property of its own in this port. The three piers have been in the possession of the American government since this country entered the war.

Purchase of this property from the German interests became known today when papers of conveyance were filed in the Hudson county courthouse in Jersey City. The price paid was $2,500,000.

Quell New Revolt Aimed to Restore Portugal Ruler

Washington, D. C., May 3.—An unsuccessful attempt at another revolution in Portugal was reported in advices received here today through official channels. Two regiments of infantry were said to have joined in the movement to restore the monarchy, but the remainder of the army remained loyal and the revolt was quickly put down.

RUSSIAN SOVIET FREES TREDWELL, AMERICA CONSUL

U. S. Agent in Turkestan Reaches Finland.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

HELSINGFORS, April 28, via Paris, May 3.—The last of the American consuls held in Russia has been released, and yesterday he passed the frontier into Finland. For five months this American official, Roger C. Tredwell of New York, consul at Tashkent, Turkestan, was held prisoner by the bolsheviki, his execution feared by American consulate officials.

One month ago today he was released and, in company with eighteen other foreigners, sent in a special car on a 2,500 mile trip from Turkestan to the Finnish border. Two of the party were Swedish and Danish Red Cross officials, who had been working among Austrian prisoners of war and were held up in Petrograd for unknown reasons.

Yesterday was the first time the Russian frontier had been open for some days, on account of military movements.

Another American who came out yesterday was Frazier Hunt of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, the correspondent who has been investigating conditions in Russia for the last two months.

Had Wild Adventures.

Hidden away in the steppes of Turkestan, far removed from the mad world, Consul Tredwell has been having some harrowing adventures.

A year ago Mr. Tredwell left Petrograd with orders to open a new consulate in Tashkent. Following the November, 1917, revolution, the city workers of Turkestan established local soviets. On the 1st of May they combined, forming the soviet republic of Turkestan.

Mr. Tredwell's train was the last to enter Tashkent before rail connection with the central government at Moscow was cut by the Ural Cossacks. In July of last year the Trans-Caspian republic was formed and it cut off Turkestan from the Caspian, thus further isolating Mr. Tredwell.

Mr. Tredwell was arrested, but after a few hours was released. For ten days he was confined to his house under guard, then for two months he was given the privilege of walking about town for two hours under an escort each afternoon.

There was no change in political conditions until the end of January, when the bolshevik forces captured the important city of Orenburg at the door of Turkestan, reopening communications, but not by railroad connection. Bridges were blown up. Not until March 26 of this year were the bolsheviki able to control all the territory and get railway cars.

Tredwell Party Leaves.

The second day of reopened communication Mr. Tredwell's party left, crossing the River Iletsk on tracks laid on the ice. Ten days later the ice broke and rail communication was interrupted. The journey from Tashkent took four weeks. The party spent five days in Moscow and three days in Petrograd.

Conditions in Turkestan, members of the party reported, were very uncertain for the bolsheviki. Only a small per cent of the people are Russians, 95 per cent being Moslems. The Russians all live in cities, and the soviet officials either were recruited from city workmen or were imported from the communist party. Turkestan natives, accustomed to the Russian rule, submit to the bolsheviki, but there is grave discontent present.

Economic Conditions Bad.

Economically, the district is in a desperate condition because as there is practically no manufacturing all goods must be shipped into the country. Isolation has worked great hardships on the population. A few trainloads of cotton were shipped out to central Russia during the few days the railroad line was open, but even internal trade has been difficult. Prices are high, food is scarce, discontent against communist rule that has spread generally over the whole of Russia is strongly felt in this hinterland.

BRITISH POLICE AIR CROSSROADS IN NEW RULES

BY ARTHUR E. MANN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

LONDON, May 3.—Today, usually only noted for its labor celebrations, will now go down in history as one of the outstanding dates in the history of aerial navigation. For civilian and commercial flying in the British isles this morning became possible and legal under an elaborate code of regulations issued by the air ministry. Henceforth passenger and freight transportation through the air will be as much recognized and well regulated as land and water traffic.

In the interest of safeguarding military and naval information a number of prohibited areas are announced, over which civilian flying will not be permitted. These include such places as the whole of Scapa flow, the North sea naval base, most of the big naval bases and docks, certain military aerodromes, military and naval wireless stations, and various other kinds of military and naval works.

Ambassador Reading Has No Idea of Successor

New York, May 3.—Lord Reading, retiring British ambassador to the United States, said prior to his departure today on the steamship Aquitania that he had no idea who his successor would be. Lady Reading, Sir Conyngham Greene, retiring British ambassador to Japan, and several British army officers, accompanied him.

CHILD HURT IN FALL.

Stanley Osochka, 13 years old, 1015 West Erie street, is in the county hospital suffering from a broken leg caused when he fell from a swing in the James Otis school playground, West Grand avenue and Armour street, yesterday afternoon.

2 BOYS IN ATTIC ARSENAL BATTLE SIX DETECTIVES

Captured After Police Nearly Meet Death Amid Thrills.

A handful of policemen almost shook hands with death last night when they captured two boys.

Three colored bandits had robbed the clothing store of Peter A. Johnson, 4457-9 Wentworth avenue, earlier in the evening, taking $600 from the safe, $50 from the cash register, and $14 from the customers.

Lieut. John Norton of the detective bureau believed that Clarence and Lillard Levi, 5344 Federal street, 14 and 17 years old, might know something about that affair.

Seven in Attacking Squad.

He went to the house and took with him Detectives Boschulte, Birmingham, Stapleton, Ronan, and Halpin and Edward Webber, a police chauffeur.

The lieutenant, with Birmingham and Ronan, went to the front door. Webber stationed himself on one side of the house. The others went to the rear.

Mrs. Anna Levi, mother of the boys, was in the house. With her were her daughter and John H. Jones, late of the 356th infantry, a nephew. She said neither Clarence nor Lillard was at home. But Boschulte, at the rear, heard a noise inside the house. He pushed open the door. Stapleton and Halpin followed.

It is a story and a half frame house, with a dark attic. Boschulte found it was possible to get into the attic by climbing up the pantry shelves and then crawling through a hole. Up he went.

Quick Action by Detective.

When his head had gone through that hole he felt something cold pressed against his temple, and a voice said:

"I'll kill you if you don't get out of here quick."

Boschulte had his flashlight in one hand, his revolver in the other. He swung with the flashlight and knocked the man down. Then he swung himself quickly up and lay, stomach down, on the floor. The man he sought was behind a post. He fired. The bullet whistled past Boschulte's head. Boschulte pumped his gun six times; and the boy called out, "I surrender." Boschulte took him down with him. This was Lillard.

Meantime Webber, standing by the side of the house, saw shingles flying into the air. A hole appeared in the roof. Then a kinky haired head appeared in the hole. Webbers fired high. The head ducked.

Two bullets came down through the ceiling, just missing Norton and Bermingham. Boschulte went up into the attic again. He shouted for surrender. The answer was a fusillade. Boschulte, with Stapleton at his heels, crawled along the floor, and of a sudden saw his quarry behind the chimney, leaped upon him, and disarmed him. It was Clarence, the 14 year old.

Attic an Arsenal.

The police found in the attic two loaded cartridge belts, three sabers, three swords, a bayonet, a rifle, an automatic pump gun, three knives, two flashlights, two boxes of cartridges and 100 loose bullets, a bunch of skeleton keys, and some targets.

Clarence and Lillard were identified as the robbers of the Johnson store. Clarence was identified as the boy who confessed to twenty-five robberies last March and who escaped from the Juvenile Detention home.

Chief Garrity commended the policemen, and said there should be some place other than the Juvenile home where boys like Clarence could be kept. He was not taken there last night.

URGE SOLDIER FARMERS TO GO BACK TO PLOW

Dr. P. L. Prentis, director of the United States employment service, received a telegram yesterday from Secretary of Agriculture Houston. He was asked to make an appeal to the ministers of Chicago to observe "Employment Sunday" to day, and to urge soldiers and sailors with farming experience to return to the plow.

"I hope the people of the country will universally observe "Employment Sunday," said the appeal, as a day of fresh dedication to the mutual helpfulness which will serve to work out in the months to come the difficult problems of employment and industrial reorganization.

"In these days of victory we can make no better offering than that of service to the men and women who have won the victory."

PARIS DELIRIUM PASSES WITHOUT MANY HEADACHES

BY SPEARMAN LEWIS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, May 2.—[Delayed.]—Paris awoke today with not even a headache—except for the many heads that were whacked by sabers—as a reminder of the May day labor demonstrations and riots. Everything that was stopped in the twenty-four hour manifestation of discontent was running full blast today. Several hundred battered hats in the gutters of what might be considered the loop of Paris were the only outward evidences of fights between gendarmes and unarmed civilians.

Paris is rather comforted that the demonstration was in no wise bolshevik.

THE MAN WHO SANK THE LUSITANIA

[illegible] PUBLISHING CO.

This is the first picture of Capt. Lieut. Schweiger, the commander of the U-boat, which sank the Lusitania May 7, 1915, to reach America. Schweiger is the third man from the left.

The photograph was taken about two months after his distruction of the great British liner off the Irish coast, with a loss of more than 1,000 lives, many of them women and children. He is shown celebrating with a number of friends, for at the time he was hailed throughout Germany as one of the great heroes of the war.

It was reported later that Capt. Lieut. Schweiger had been killed.

U. S. SEAPLANES START ON FIRST 'LEG' TOMORROW

Leave Rockaway Beach for Atlantic Trip Starting Point.

TREPASSEY, N. F., May 3.—The giant seaplanes of the United States navy will start from Rockaway Point on the first leg of their trans-Atlantic flight on May 5, it was announced here tonight. They are scheduled to leave Trepassey for the Azores between May 12 and 14.

Newfoundland Sees U. S. Plane.

St. Johns, N. F., May 3.—[Special.]—For the first time in history an American seaplane flew over New Foundland today, when one of the little scouts accompanying the advance party of the United States navy's trans-Atlantic flying expedition reconnoitered about Trepassey, where the mine layer Aroostok was anchored. Flown by Lieut. Talbot, the little jitney circled about St. Mary's bay for half an hour, while a crowd of onlookers, many of whom had never seen an airplane, followed it with fascinated gaze.

The landing party from the Aroostok was met with a simple, genuine hospitality. The Aroostok's commander and a group from the ship at once explored the vicinity of Trepassey and selected a site for hangars and shops. It is understood that these will be erected at once.

British Flyers Balked Again.

The "take-off" weather here was again unfavorable today, and this, coupled with the advent in the mid-Atlantic of an area of sixty miles an hour quartering winds, yesterday believed to be coming from the West Indies but which now appear to have moved straight across the states to Cape Hatteral and then have headed northeastward across the Atlantic, made a start for the British planes impossible.

Pennsylvania Wins College Air Race.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 3.—The first of a series of inter-collegiate seaplane races was held today at Atlantic City over a three mile circular course for a total distance of thirty miles. The race was won by S. Raymond Beckwith, representing the University of Pennsylvania. His time was 23:26.

CUT IMPORT FREIGHT RATES.

Washington, D. C., May 3.—A general reduction on import freight rates from Pacific coast ports to all eastern territory was announced today by the railroad administration.

WILMETTE COP SHOOTS SUSPECT FLEEING HOUSE

James Madigan, 28 years old, 2245 Dayton street, Chicago, said to be a burglar, was probably fatally wounded yesterday by John Schafgin, a Wilmette policeman, as he attempted to escape from a house at 600 Central avenue, Wilmette.

Schafgin asserted he believed the man would die of the wound.

Three burglars, evidently intent on blowing the safes of the A. B. Dick company, mimeograph manufacturers at 737 West Jackson boulevard, escaped after firing a volley at Patrolman Michael Nash of the Desplaines street station who interrupted them at their work.

Three men held up and robbed Abe Peltz as he was about to enter his home at 1019 South Lincoln street.

Women's wearing apparel valued at between $4,000 and $5,000 was stolen from the Cicero Cloak shop, 5232 West Twenty-fifth street, by burglars who "jimmied" a rear window.

Four armed bandits held up the store of the Vinasity Tea company at 1901 South Racine avenue and obtained $20 from the cash register.

DANIELS ROUSES NAVY DISCUSSION IN BRITON PAPERS

One Criticizes Him, Intimating He Is Trying to Bluff England.

BY ARTHUR E. MANN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

LONDON, May 3.—The utterances of Secretary Daniels, since he has been in England, regarding American naval policy, seem to have done much toward quieting the disturbed British press over the possibility of competitive building between Great Britain and the United States.

Two papers most critical in the past of recent American building plans, the Morning Post and the Globe, today have editorials, headed "Daniels Has Come to Judgment," welcoming his statement that it would be "a calamity worse than a crime if the British people and the American people ever enter into competition in navy building."

Globe Thinks Him Too Pointed.

"He coupled that observation," the Globe comments, however, "with a hint that unless the league of nations is really established Mr. Wilson may find it necessary to go on with his $600,000,000 scheme for construction of American warships. It may be as well to point out to Mr. Daniels in the most courteous manner possible that this is not exactly the way in which to win the sympathy and support of the British empire for a shadowy league, and that he would have done better to leave that part of his argument out. If the United States wishes to become a great naval power—a somewhat curious commentary on Mr. Wilson's idealism—we can have no possible objection."

The Post says regarding Secretary Daniels' description of the future American navy as a mobile police force of the seas: "The British navy for a good many years has fulfilled this task, and, if America will take her share, so much the better."

Sink Fleet.—Daniels.

LONDON, May 3.—[By the Associated Press.]—The greatest moral lesson of the war would be to sink the entire German fleet with proper ceremonies, Josephus Daniels, American secretary of the navy, who recently visited the captured German vessels at Scapa Flow, declared in a statement today to the Associated Press.

"The German fleet should be sunk, in the opinion of American and British technical experts in Paris," the secretary said. "Those who are not technical and who view the situation entirely from the moral side have the same idea and believe that the ships should be sunk with bands playing and flags flying to keep company with the merchantmen the German navy destroyed.

"I think the greatest moral lesson of the war would be the sinking of the whole fleet with an unforgettable ceremony. These ships which I recently viewed are magnificent craft, but virtually useless as a part of the American navy."

GRANTS SOLDIERS EXTRA MONEY FOR TRAVEL EXPENSES

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 3.—Thousands of soldiers, sailors, and marines discharged from service between Nov. 11, 1918, when the armistice went into effect, and Feb. 28, 1919, may file claims with the auditor of the war department for 1⅔ cents per mile for travel expenses from the place of discharge to their homes. This was decided today by Controller of the Treasury Warwick, passing on a number of questions involving discharged soldiers' travel allowances.

Controller Warwick held that the act of Feb. 28, 1919, allowing 5 cents a mile from the place of discharge to the bona fide home or residence of a discharged man was retroactive to Nov. 11. Men discharged between those dates were allowed only 3⅓ cents a mile, however, under a former act.

The controller declined to establish any general rule by which the military or naval authorities can determine what constitutes the "bona fide home or residence" of a man.

"Upon discharge an enlisted man should be paid 5 cents a mile from place of discharge to place of original muster into the service," the controller said, "and if the place claimed to be that of his bona fide home or residence is at a greater distance he can present a claim for the difference between that amount and the amount paid him on discharge."

WAR EMBARGO ON GERMAN GIRLS BOTHERS YANKS

BY PARKE BROWN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

COBLENZ, May 3.—Not that they would object at all to marching further up into Germany and treating 'em rough again, if necessary, but because they see a chance of a removal of present social restraints, Private J. Doe and his pals are looking forward with a pleasant anticipation to the possibility that peace will be signed soon. It may mean cancellation of the anti-fraternization rule, the drastic order which requires both a general and a first class 'buck' private to gaze at the other side of the street when a pretty maiden passes, at least, when there is an M. P. nearby. In such an event, the soldier foresees the likelihood of the movies and perchance a moonlight stroll in feminine company now denied. It unlocks the doors of romance and adventure in a foreign land now bolted against him.

Also it might permit him to sit down beside a botttle of Rhine wine and talk of old times with Heine, who used to tend bar at Fritz's little place on the corner back home. The way might be opened for an occasional friendly fistic argument over the war. In short, there are boundless possibilities in the situation.

Much has been predicted and something has been promised to the doughboys when the war is over and they are looking forward with no little eagerness to an opportunity to make good. Many of them have bowing and smiling acquaintances that threatened to develop at times, but time after time the inclination to lend assistance across a muddy street was squelched by the glimpse of an officer on the next corner.

MURDERED GIRL BURIED ALIVE AFTER ATTACK

Pennsylvania Horror Starts Posse Hunt for Slayer.

Latrobe, Pa., May 3.—Miss Emma Austraw, pretty 19 year old school teacher, whose mutilated body was found wedged in a vault under a log hut on an abandoned farm near here today, was buried alive after being attacked and shot, was the statement made tonight by State Trooper J. A. McCue, who assisted in removing the body.

According to McCue, there was evidence that the girl had put up a desperate struggle with her assailant as he forced her into the vault. She was probably trampled to death, he said.

State police and posses of armed citizens were searching tonight for the young woman's slayer.

Held Four Suspects.

Four foreigners were held by the state police as suspects. There is no direct evidence against them, the police admit.

One of the prisoners is Emmet Gesbeck, 30, of Loyal Hanna, who was arrested Friday night, after he had appeared at the home of the girl's father, John W. Austraw, in Latrobe, and explained, it is said, that he was a private detective from Philadelphia. His actions aroused the suspicions of Austraw.

The body of the girl, who has been missing since Monday, was found by Lawrence Moore, 16, a boy scout, who had been tireless in his search for his teacher. The girl's hands were tied behind her back, her face had been beaten and she had been struck on the head with a blunt instrument. Her death had evidently occurred forty-eight hours before the finding of the body.

Put Up Hard Fight.

An examination revealed that the young woman had also been shot through the head after being attacked. That she had given her captor a battle is shown by the fact that her finger nails were broken, her hands and face scratched and her clothing torn to shreds.

Ropes used to tie the girl's hands had been drawn so tight that the flesh on her wrists was cut. The body evidently had been trampled down to make it fit the small space in the vault.

After dismissing her pupils last Monday afternoon, Miss Austraw started for the Kiser farm, where she boarded. When she failed to reach home that evening an alarm was sounded. Since that time private detectives, state police, the Latrobe police and scores of friends and relatives have been hunting for her.

WIFE IS FIRST AID TO HANSON, FIGHTING MAYOR

She's Grandmother, but Looks Like a Girl, Scribe Finds.

BY LUCY CALHOUN.

Men who meet Ole Hanson, mayor of Seattle and scourge of the unworthy wobblies, come away impressed with the forceful personality of the man. They write reams about his sense of justice, his quickness of perception, and his vigorous way of acting on his principles. But what of Mrs. Hanson, the quiet, dignified, and beautiful little lady who accompanies him on his present trip? Women can tell in a minute that although Ole Hanson is a big man, he could not be so great without the help of his silent partner. He himself joyfully admits it. The two were guests of the Swedish club last night at a small dinner.

Looks Like a Girl.

"Why, she looks like a girl," was the comment as Mrs. Hanson made her appearance. "And she has nine children," said somebody else.

Mrs. Hanson laughed as she caught the whisper. "They don't know it," she said, "but I have a grandchild, too. My youngest child is a year and a half old and I have a grandchild just the same age—my oldest daughter's child. My own baby is named Lloyd George—we both admire him—Mr. Hanson and I."

Mrs. Hanson is very much afraid that the I. W. W. may take it into their head to send a "package from Gimbel's" to her children while she is away.

She has brought her little 4 year old son, Eugene Field, with her, because she was afraid something might happen to him while she was away.

First Bomb Broken.

"O, but the wobblies wouldn't do anything so awful as that!" expostulated one of the women at the dinner. "Well, they have done things so bad that I can't help being anxious," said the mother. "Mayor Hanson was fair with them. He told them in the beginning that if they started anything he would have them shot. The bomb that was sent to us was broken a little and some of the stuff was running out of it. The next one they send might not be broken."

There is not a lazy bone in the body of the mayor's wife, and she has no fine lady airs. "We are the friends of the people and we want to be always," she said. The talk veered to domestic matters and it was learned that Mrs. Hanson did much of her own housework.

"I feel that the time is coming when most women will have to do their own housework," she said.

Trouble Getting Help.

"We have a great deal of trouble in getting help in Seattle, and it seems that you have here, too. I don't blame the girls in the least.

"The housemaid's position is the loneliest one in the world, and I believe that the present system of managing housework is wrong. Our domestic helpers come by the hour and we pay them 45 cents an hour. I do some of the work myself—as much as I can. I believe that a woman who doesn't know how to cook should not eat—and really, now, isn't it ridiculous to see a woman with no children and no job having to get a maid to do the housework for herself and her husband?"

Mrs. Hanson herself did not look in the least like an overworked housewife. She is very pretty, with brown eyes and curly brown hair, and she was smartly dressed in a gown of black satin and georgette, trimmed with a little gold bead passementerie. A black hat with two wings, and high heeled colonial slippers with silver buckles completed the costume. No lace cap and spectacles for this youthful grandmother.

PAWNED DIAMOND SHEDS LIGHT ON OAK PARK THEFT

Detectives Leonard Burch and Thomas Duffy, who daily make the rounds of the pawnshops, discovered yesterday a diamond and opal ring, which they identified as one stolen from the home of H. B. Ahrensfeld, vice president of the National Produce bank, at 736 North East avenue, Oak Park.

It had been pawned by A. E. Hanson, a jeweler and engraver, with an office in the Kesner building. He said he had bought it from George A. Thomas, owner of a rooming house at 745 North Dearborn street. Thomas said he bought it of a man named Jack Quinn, he had met in a saloon.

The police also recovered a gold rope chain with a diamond studded heart shaped locket, a silk coat owned by Mrs. Ahrendsfeld, a dress belonging to her daughter, and also a few things identified as the property of R. G. Cook, 305 Forest avenue, Oak Park.

TRAIN KILLS LABORER.

Michael Slobb, a laborer for the Illinois Central railroad at Wildwood camp, found unconscious on the tracks at Sixty-third street, Friday, died yesterday. It is supposed he was struck by a train.

SUPPRESS REDS, BUY BONDS, IS PLEA OF HANSON

'Fighting Mayor' Tells of His Battle Against the I. W. W. on Coast.

You have brought suffering on 400,000 people. I have 440 men in the police station who are loyal to Seattle and to the government.' Believe me, I never did appreciate before what those blue coats could do when they were up against the real thing like that. I said I would swear in 1,100 more men and that I had machine guns and sandbags.

"I said: 'You are not going to turn out a light in this city or turn off the gas, and I will see you in hell before I will ask you for a permit.'

"I then wrote my proclamation and told every one to go back to work, and we prepared to fight. The street cars started to clang and the union labor men became aware that their leaders had betrayed them and these leaders began running from town.

Must Subscribe Loan.

"Suppose these 65,000 had been starving. That would have been a different thing. It is up to you in the United States to see to it that unemployment, poverty, enforced idleness ceases. You must subscribe your quota of the loan or the next congress will be helpless to enact into laws the things that are necessary for a big period of building and reconstruction."

Mayor Hanson still believes this is the land of opportunity. He has one theory for curing social ills and this is it:

"Let us stand by our government and use it to bring about better conditions."

The mayor did not rest between meetings. After his noonday address he came over to THE TRIBUNE office to have his picture taken and to write out a statement.

Like one long familiar with a typewriter, he sat down and made the keys clatter. He uses the first two fingers of each hand to swat those keys, and he swats hard and quick. He's a rattling good stenographer, is Ole Hanson, and here's the statement he ripped out on the machine while admiring reporters watched:

"The people of the United States have the greatest opportunity to secure the future greatness of the United States by purchasing the present issue of Victory bonds. If the people subscribe congress will be only too glad to embark upon a career of public works which will absorb a very large number of the unemployed. We all want sane constructive readjustment and reconstruction to go ahead. The government dare not go ahead with anything much that will cost money unless the people of the United States back it up as they promised to do and finance our victory.

World Watches Chicago.

"Chicago is a large city, it is a rich city, it is a populous city. But the greatest city is not the largest and wealthiest community, it is that community where the heart throbs of American patriotism are most prevalent and where the people keep their word and stand by the promise of their country.

"The school children of Chicago will be ashamed if Chicago does not come through. It is your duty—not the duty of any one else on earth. I shall watch what Chicago does with interest. So will the whole world. I am sure that it will be found 100 per cent."

"The west is going over the top," said Ole Hanson. "And the middle west and the east. The whole country is taking the loan. And why shouldn't it?"

"Chicago has subscribed $87,521,350," the reporter said. "There have been 208,110 subscribers. There is still more than $100,000,000 lacking to make up the quota."

"Chicago better hustle," the mayor said. And he walked out, with short quick steps, talking fast, gesturing with his hands, his brown eyes mild again.

MANY DEAF TO VICTORY'S PLEA, "BUY A BOND"

Wounded Drag Crippled Bodies Past Booths, but Drive Slumps.

A soldier on crutches, dragging one leg painfully, went past the Liberty loan sales booth in the Hotel La Salle lobby yesterday.

"Buy a bond! Buy a bond!" called the salesgirl.

No one paid any attention to her. It was 4 o'clock in the afternoon and not a bond had been sold.

"What's the trouble?" asked a reporter.

"They are waiting for George to finish the job," said the salesgirl. "They have forgotten about the soldiers. I think I could sell oil stock or a mountain canary, but not bonds."

Upstairs Ole Hanson, the "fighting mayor" of Seattle, had appealed to a great crowd of business men, quoting to them the words of "Flanders Fields." Parades, red fire, singers, tinsel—all the glory of the great demonstrations on the lake front—seem to have fallen flat, so far as results are concerned in this strategically placed hotel booth sales counter.

It's Up to the Banks.

"The banks will have to do it," is one of the excuses often used, according to Mrs. Herbert E. Simmons, captain of the booth. She has been selling about $4,000 worth a day until yesterday.

"It is a great tragedy," she added. "We need something of the emotional appeal—something of music with tears in it—to stir the hearts of these men. They are not sacrificing much." She pointed to the groups of prosperous looking men on their way to cigar counter, barroom, or restaurant.

Over in the Hotel Sherman loan booth, the captain, Mrs. D. M. Ottis, said she had sold $700 worth.

"We are doing well," she said. "The loan is going over in Chicago, but it will only be because of hard work. The trouble is with the workers. They must be always on the job, persistent, never letting a man get away."

She has six girls, called the "beauty squad," which may have something to do with her record.

Rain Spoils Plans.

The rain yesterday spoiled all the plans of the "Honor day" program, including the parade of wounded soldiers in the loop. The program will be given tomorrow.

The city subscribed only $6,550,900 yesterday, bringing the total subscribed to date to $87,521,350. The number of subscribers was 208,220. The city's quota, which must be reached during the next week, is $189,-250,000.

This means nearly $18,000,000 a day. Heroic measures are necessary. At no time in the fourth campaign was the situation so serious, and the fear has developed at loan headquarters that the city may fail.

The state of Illinois has subscribed $42,000,000 of its quota of $84,825,000. Iowa and Michigan have exceeded their quotas. A group of Iowans subscribed $7,000 the other night in one of the Chicago hotels. Wisconsin is coming to the front and Milwaukee is close to its quota figures.

Mothers Sell Bonds.

Yesterday was "Gold Star Mothers'" day, and all day long a group of women who gave their sons in the war stood at their booth at the Blackstone hotel and sold bonds. They added many thousands to the fund. The largest subscription in this booth was $100,000, from the Illinois Manufacturers' Casualty association.

Women's clubs have subscribed $4,859,450 in loan subscriptions, Mrs. Lambert O. Wile, vice chairman of the women's committee, said yesterday. Booths in department stores reported $3,888,600. Hotels and restaurants have raised $1,000,000. Reports from ward organizations were better. The trades division slackened. The theatrical, moving picture, and amusement division has obtained only two-sevenths of its quota.

What Have You Done?

"What has each of us done to make this loan a success?" asked Alvin F. Kramer, executive secretary of the loan committee. "How many of us have betrayed the cause in his capacity as salesman or buyer. If a city repudiates the loan that pays for the war, is not this a repudiation of the war? I do not believe Chicago will fail. I believe that when Chicago realizes what the failure of the loan would mean, the citizens will rise to a man and oversubscribe it."

Largest Subscriptions.

Subscriptions over $50,000 reported yesterday were:

$285,000—Continental Can company and employés.

$200,000—Morris & Co. employés.

$150,000—Goodman Manufacturing company.

$75,000—S. W. Straus & Co.; Royal Insurance Company of England.

$88,000—Regensteiner Colortype company and employés.

$57,200—Nelson & Le Moon and employés.

$50,000—Chicago Pneumatic Tool company.

HONOR DAY IS POSTPONED TO FIRST FAIR DAY

Rain Disappoints Heroes Who Had Planned to See Ball Game.

Thousands of discharged fighting men, wounded heroes, and Chicago patriots were disappointed yesterday when rain spoiled plans for the city's first big Honor day.

"The boys are disappointed," said Capt. Myron E. Adams, chairman of the directing committee which made arrangements for the parade of wounded, their banquet in the Congress hotel at noon, the ball game in Sox park, and the night carnival and dance along Victory Way. "We're all disappointed, but it can't rain forever."

"We are going to beat the weather for the boys who beat Germany. Honor day in its entirety will be staged on the first fair day in May. If the sun shines Monday the entire honor day program, parade of wounded, and all, will go forward then.

Wait Weather Out.

"If it's still bad weather Honor day will be held Tuesday. We will simply wait the weather out. You can't beat this bunch of fighting men who are on their toes to hear and feel Chicago's appreciation."

Rain did not deter Chicago from halting her activities at 11 a. m. for one minute in tribute to her soldier dead. The silent ovation was observed throughout the loop, and in most outlying districts, according to reports which reached the various patriotic committees. Mayor Thompson's proclamation, requesting that all traffic stop for one minute at 11 a. m. will also be carried out when the weather permits holding the complete Honor day program.

Day Merely Postponed.

"Please make it clear that Honor day is simply postponed and will be held in its entirety as soon as the weather permits," requested Col. W. N. Pelouze, chairman of the welcoming committee.

WE MUST LEND $2,842,021,000 TO U. S. THIS WEEK

Two-Thirds of Time Gone, Only One-Third of "V" Loan Subscribed.

Washington, D. C., May 3.—With two weeks of the Victory Liberty loan campaign gone and only one week remaining, only $1,657,979,000 has been subscribed, the treasury reported tonight. This is 36.84 per cent of the $4,500,000,000 desired.

Subscriptions and quota percentages by districts, arranged in order of percentage standings, are as follows:

District.	Subscription.	Per ct.
St. Louis	$126,246,000	64.74
Minneapolis	83,266,000	52.86
Chicago	332,122,000	50.90
Boston	170,724,000	45.53
Kansas City	77,078,000	39.52
Richmond	80,566,000	38.36
Cleveland	151,734,000	33.71
Atlanta	48,353,000	33.57
Philadelphia	112,653,000	30.04
New York	376,900,000	27.91
San Francisco	78,071,000	25.00
Dallas	20,260,000	21.43

Behind Fourth Loan.

At the end of the second week of the fourth Liberty loan campaign, when the total sought was one-third greater than now, the nation had subscribed $2,269,876,000, or 37.83 per cent.

In response to pressing inquiries today as to the treasury's attitude concerning the progress of the loan, officials explained that subscriptions were not piling up as fast as they had hoped when they arranged a loan of comparatively small size.

They said they were "a bit concerned" over the record of the last two weeks, but not to an extent that they were ready at this time to sound a note of positive alarm.

Small Buyers Do Part.

One of the most hopeful signs is that many individuals are buying Victory notes, and indications are that the subscriptions tabulated to date include what is considered a rather small percentage of purchases by banks or big corporations. The government's financial men are anxious for promotion of this condition of "wide distribution."

For example, 856,000 of the 1,840,000 railroad employés in the United States have subscribed and the proportion will increase greatly on final reports, it was announced by the railroad administration. Subscriptions amounted to $79,493,000.

LOAN PAMPHLET FLOOD TO FLOAT CITY "OVER TOP"

If Chicago fails to go "over the top" in the Fifth Liberty loan it will not be because it has not been told of its opportunity and its duty. In addition to speeches, celebrations, newspaper articles, and advertisements more than 25,000,000 pieces of literature have been distributed, inquiry at the supply department yesterday revealed. About 5,000,000 pieces are still on hand, to be distributed this week.

More than 1,000 shipments of supplies and literature are made every day. Nine thousand shipments were made before the opening of the loan, and 48,000 salesmen supplied with kits—buttons, posters, report blanks, subscription receipts, etc. Starting with a force of ninety office employés, forty-two trucks, and twenty-two touring cars, the supply department now has fifty employés, eight trucks, and five touring cars at work. There are more than two hundred varieties of pamphlets, posters, buttons, cards, circular letters, report and subscription blanks on hand at all times.

The department occupies an entire floor at 115 South Dearborn street, and has 20,000 square feet of floor space in a Jackson boulevard warehouse.

V-VOLLEYS

Sixteen thousand Chicago high school cadets of the R. O. T. C. battalions will start in Monday morning to sell $1,000,000 worth of Victory bonds. The school campaign in Chicago has been delayed because the schools were closed last week for "moving day." Elsewhere in the district first reports show $72,550 already secured by school salesboys. In Chicago St. Ignatius college reports $10,000 already placed. Northwestern university has secured $2,350.

Desplaines passed its quota for the Victory loan yesterday, having a total of $145,000, or $10,000 over its quota, with the drive still going. Desplaines is the fourth Cook county district to secure its allotment.

At a special meeting of the Italian Chamber of Commerce of Chicago held last night resolutions were adopted calling upon Chicagoans of Italian descent to give all possible support to the Victory Liberty loan. A manifest signed by the president of the association will be distributed through the Italian sections of the city urging Italians to buy bonds. "Nothing will be left undone," read the manifest, "to gather all the Italian people to do what this body considers a necessary patriotic duty."

Capt. Daniel E. Barnard of 1924 West One Hundred and Third street, civil war veteran, never ceased sacrificing for his country to the day of his death, last month.

When his safety deposit box was opened last month following his decease, there were found in it $1,200 worth of United States bonds issued during the civil war. These matured many years ago and ceased to pay interest, but their owner declined to present them for payment, saying "he didn't need the cash just yet and the government could use it."

The Twenty-second Ward Victory Loan organization, together with the North Avenue Merchants' association, will hold a Victory parade Monday evening. The parade will form at North avenue and Halsted street at 7 o'clock and march east in North avenue.

I'D HAVE OPENED IT, LANDIS SAYS AS BOMB BURSTS

Jurist Sees Bullet of Policeman Explode Deadly Package.

The Hoosier humor of Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis was silent yesterday afternoon as he stood at a window of his chambers and watched his May day bomb exploded on the roof of the south wing of the federal building, three stories below.

The revolver of Detective Sergeant John L. Coleman of the Chicago avenue station, aimed from a distance of twenty-five feet, spoke three times. The first shot grazed the maple tube which was received in the mail of Judge Landis Wednesday morning, shortly after his departure for Rockford, and found on the desk of his secretary by newspaper reporters.

Third Shot Explodes It.

The second bullet nicked an end. Judge Landis watched intently. The third penetrated the cylinder. The detonation was that of a giant firecracker, but a flash of fire indicated the power of the blast.

Judge Landis turned to his desk. "I'd have opened it if I'd been here," he said. A few minutes later Chief Postal Inspector James E. Stuart and Capt. Thomas Porter of the secret service brought the fragments of the bomb to his chambers.

The maple tube had split into six pieces, the glass container had been completely shattered, and the wood was stained by the acid.

"Dynamite," Say Police.

"Dynamite," said Capt. Porter. "Enough to decapitate a man."

Judge Landis made the inspection silently, as though picturing to himself the maniac or anarchist who had conceived and sent the bomb. There was no emotion in his manner—merely the quiet interest he displays in everything that comes to his attention.

"I have no time to theorize about this," he told an interviewer. His visitors departed and Judge Landis resumed work.

Up in the department of justice, Acting Chief Agent Philip J. Barry was inspecting a practical joker's bomb, sent through the mails to Dr. N. R. Flath, a dentist, 3901 Cottage Grove avenue, Friday afternoon.

It's Joker's Bomb.

It appeared to Agent Barry to be a hoax. But there was a chance—one in fifty—that it might be genuine. Barry looked at the ceiling for a minute, whistled softly, gazed at the wicked instrument and set to work. He cut the fuse, pulled the cork from the bottle, tasted the contents and gently picked the rubber caps from the iron. There was no explosion except from Mr. Barry.

"At the time when the country is seething with anarchists and alarmed by bombs it is an outrage that any one should try to be funny in this manner," he said. "I can't imagine a person of intelligence with such a lack of judgment."

The Bottle Contained Water.

A few hours later the acting chief announced that one of his agents had found the sender, and secured a confession.

Dr. Flath, called by telephone, said the sender was Dr. Okal M. Colvin, a woman physician with offices with him at 3901 Cottage Grove avenue. Dr. Colvin laughed.

"It was all a joke," Dr. Colvin explained. "I thought I would play a trick on Dr. Flath."

By this they hope to counter- the organized propaganda favoring league which is being conducted the League to Enforce Peace and r organizations.

Reason for Conference.

Republican leaders want all those oppose the present covenant to together, not so much for the pur- of framing a plan of action as to centrate all the ideas of the op- ition for its effect upon pub- opinion. Some of them are con- ing means of counteracting the te conventions which are to be d in the near future by the League Enforce Peace, and it is probable, that the session seems to be a th off, that more speaking tours of country will be made by opposition ators.

Johnson on Japan Deal.

Senator Johnson of California broke nce today, not to violate Senator ge's injunction on the league cove- especially, but to point out the ident's inconsistency in his peace ty dealings with Italy and Japan. "Within the week," he said, "after imitation barrage upon racial equal- y the Japanese boldly made their ands, and without the semblance a contest, apparently, the president gets his words which we were still choing and abjectly surrenders."

Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, for- r chairman of the foreign relations mittee, and the president's spokes- n in the senate on the league cove- t, returned to Washington today a western trip and said if the publicans attempted to make the gue covenant a party issue it would it the party in 1920.

MATERIAL FROM EUROPE USED IN MAY DAY BOMBS

New York, May 3.—[Special.]—The police were informed today that the casings of the infernal machines mailed to twenty-five government officials and prominent persons throughout the country were made of plane tree wood. This species of the plane tree, it was said by experts, is not grown here, but 's common in England and south Germany.

It also developed that the small vials onstituting an important part of the ombs' mechanism are not now in use ere among druggists or perfumers.

The origin of the wood and the ource of the vials are now regarded among the most important of the clews being followed out by the authorities.

BOIL IT!

COMMISSIONER OF HEALTH JOHN DILL ROBERTSON yesterday warned Chicago to boil all drinking water until further notice.

"The abnormally heavy rains have taxed the sewers beyond their capacity.

"The only safe method of escaping possible epidemic of disease is to boil all drinking water.

"Because cellars have been flooded I advise that nothing that has been in contact with the water in the cellars be used for eating purposes."

BOASTS OF "SAFE SPOT," AND THEN POLICE NAB HIM

George Rice had just finished telling "one of the boys" that he had picked the safest spot in the city when Lieut. William Baldwin and Detective Sergeant Neil Kaller raided his handbook at room 604 Crilly Building yesterday.

The detectives arrested fifteen inmates, including George, and took $500 in currency and numerous form charts and cards along as evidence.

George Schneider's cigar store at 5903 State street also ran afoul of the law.

The New Way To Protect Your Skin—Use Foundation Cream "One of the Seven"

To have your complexion look its best and to protect the delicate skin tissue from exposure, you should apply Foundation Cream before using face powder. This cream is greaseless and is easily absorbed, leaving the skin soft and smooth.

Foundation Cream gives you increased beauty at once and you can prove it. Apply your powder without using the cream. Remove it with Lettuce Cream. Then apply the powder after Foundation Cream has been rubbed in well. Now notice the velvety texture and the naturally beautiful appearance of your skin. Make this test yourself and you will be instantly converted to the daily use of Foundation Cream.

How Foundation Cream Was Perfected

Foundation Cream is the newest addition to the Marinello Cream "family". Marinello skin specialists realized that the face should be prepared with a cream before powder is applied.

The average cream is too heavy. Therefore, they created the new cream which is ideal for this purpose. It has been thoroughly tested and is now used by hundreds of thousands of women.

There are seven Marinello Creams. Each is different—each is made by a special formula for one particular skin condition. Consult the chart of Marinello "Seven Creams" and learn which your skin needs.

How to Sample Marinello Creams

Mail us two 3-cent stamps and we will send you a generous sample of the cream your skin needs, together with a sample of Foundation Cream and a beautifully illustrated booklet which tells what to do for a red nose, stippled skin, pimples, blackheads; how to use rouge; how to cleanse the skin; what to do for dandruff, for a dry or itchy scalp, falling hair—and many other useful beauty helps. Marinello Company, Dept. T-10, Mallers Building, Chicago.

Chart of Marinello Seven Creams

Lettuce Cream for cleansing the skin. Cleans better than soap and water and without irritation, 60c.

Tissue Cream for a rough, dry skin. It builds up the skin and gives it the extra nourishment which it needs, 60c and $1.20.

Astringent Cream for an oily skin. It restrains the too abundant secretion of oil, 60c and $1.20.

Whitening Cream for a sallow skin. Gives your skin that "pink and white" roseleaf quality, 60c and $1.20.

Acne Cream for blemishes and blackheads. This disagreeable condition may be overcome in a short while if you are faithful to the use of cream, 60c and $1.20.

Motor Cream for skin protection. Neither wind nor weather can harm your skin if you fortify it with Motor Cream first, 60c and $1.20.

Foundation Cream before using powder. It makes the powder go on so much more smoothly and stay longer, 75c

To supplement the action of the Creams, always apply Marinello Powder before venturing out.

PUBLISH TABLE OF CASUALTIES AND D.S.CROSSES

Infantry Association Shows Work of Divisions.

holds fifth honor. The 77th division is ninth and the 27th tenth in the list.

Nearly three-fourths of all the crosses awarded went to infantrymen.

D. S. C. Comparison.

The comparative table of D. S. C. awards by arms of the service as compared and made public by the infantry association is as follows:

Infantry	2,942	Signal corps	50
Air service	251	Tank corps	36
Medical corps	238	Other services	70
Artillery	183
Engineers	149	Total	3,919

The difference in the D. S. C. totals in the two tables is explained by the fact that 493 crosses were awarded to soldiers who were in units not attached to any division.

ONE OF FIRST IN ACTION

Washington, D. C., May 3.—[Special.]—The 2d division of the American Expeditionary Force is a regular army division and was one of the first in action after America entered the war. It has been much altered of late, but originally, and when engaged in its bitterest fighting, it was commanded by Brig. Gen. J. A. Le Jeune.

It is of the 2d division that the first American marines landed on French soil are a unit.

The division first went into the trenches in March, 1918, on the Verdun sector, where it held the line until early in May, when it was moved into Picardy, into reserve positions behind the 1st division, then located in the line before Cantigny.

Saviors of Paris.

It was when the Germans threatened Paris in their drive on the Marne that the 2d division made its historic fight a short distance northwest of Chateau Thierry. It was the marine brigade of the 2d division that had the hard eighteen days of fighting which ended in driving the Germans out of Belleau Woods and saving Paris. Several weeks later the infantry brigade of the same division captured the village of Vaux.

On July 18 the 2d division was one of two American divisions which, with one French division, perfected the history making attack on the German line southwest of Soissons, and executed the maneuver which started the Germans on the retreat that ended with the armistice.

In St. Mihiel Drive.

The division was engaged two or three times most effectively in the Marne-Aisne battle and then went into the line for another push in the Champaign sector. After effective assaults at this place its thinned ranks were refilled with replacements and the division was rushed to the St. Mihiel sector, where it engaged in the Sept. 13 battle that resulted in the reduction of that important salient.

The organization completed its unique and remarkable battle history by being twice engaged with great effectiveness in the Meuse-Argonne fighting and on the day that the armistice was signed the fighting 2d was again on its way to another point of prospective attack.

Staff of Second Division.

On the staff of the 2d division were chief of staff, Col. John C. H. Rhea; inspector general, Col. Charles H. Bridges; judge advocate general, Lieut. Col. J. H. Hayes; surgeon general, Col. John [illegible] Hanner; ordnance officer, Maj. [illegible] C. Rogers; signal officer, Maj. Joseph H. Andrews; division quartermaster, Lieut. Col. Lawrence S. Carson. The infantry regiments were the 9th, Lieut. Col. Ralph B. Lister; 23d, Col. Robert O. Van Horn; 5th machine gun battalion, Maj. Harry T. Lewis; 5th regiment marines, Col. H. Bearse; 6th regiment marines, Col. Smedley Butler, who led the American marines to the attack on Vera Cruz; 6th machine gun battalion, Maj. Littleton W. T. Waller Jr.

Other Units in Division.

In the division also was the 2d artillery brigade, commanded by Brig. Gen. Albert J. Bowley, with the 12th regiment, Maj. Leon R. Cole; 15th regiment, Col. J. R. Davis; 17th regiment, Col. John R. Kelly, and 2d trench mortar battery Capt. Percy D. Betts.

Other units included the 2d regiment engineers, Col. William A. Mitchell; 1st field signal battalion, Maj. Charles Murphey; 2d supply train, Lieut. Col. William F. Herringshaw; 2d ammunition train, Lieut. Col. William H. Monroe.

NATIONAL GUARD LOSES MOST

Suffers More Severely in War than Regulars or National Army.

Study of casualty statistics of thirty combat divisions of the American fighting forces in the war, issued by the war department and giving figures up to Jan. 10, sheds some light on the relative part played by the regular army, the national guard, the national army, and the marine corps in the war. The tables show those killed in action, dead of wounds, missing in action, or taken prisoner. Field signal battalions, ambulance companies, trains, and some other specialized branches of the service are not included, but the tabulation shows graphically the total losses of each basic section of the army.

Slightly wounded, or others who were able to return to the service, are not included, the figures applying only to those who were absolute losses so far as active military operations were concerned.

Figuring the percentage of loss, not according to the numbers in each section but for the total American force, it is found that the losses of the regular army were 30 per cent, the national guard 39 per cent, the national army 27 per cent, and the marine corps 4 per cent.

The table follows:

	Killed in action.	Died of wounds.	Missing in action.	Prisoners.	Total.	Pct.
Regulars	8,524	3,549	5,297	551	17,819	.30
National guard	11,555	4,566	5,445	1,457	23,023	.39
National army	8,023	3,207	3,890	798	15,901	.27
*Marines	1,390	707	271	76	2,444	.04
Totals	29,295	12,029	14,903	2,860	59,087

*The marines are listed with the Second division of regulars.

A GERMAN VIEW OF IT

BY RICHARD HENRY LITTLE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

BERLIN, April 30, via Paris, May 3.—Every doughboy in the army has his own idea of what was the best American division that came overseas. Some are a trifle doubtful, perhaps because they changed divisions once or twice, but the great majority can tell right off the reel which division is the best, and, by a strange coincidence, it invariably happens to be the one to which the particular man belongs.

Perhaps the German opinion on the subject would not be given serious attention by American soldiers, but to satisfy my own curiosity I asked Col. Rudolph von Xylander, chief of artillery in the Third German army, what he thought about it. Without a moment of hesitation Col. von Xylander said: "One composed of both marines and infantry—the 2d division."

The colonel qualified this with the remark that he hadn't seen all the American divisions; he could only speak about those in front of the Third German army and those he had seen casually to the left of the Third army.

The next question naturally was why he thought the 2d division was the best.

"It was better disciplined and better led than the others," Col. von Xylander replied. "It was a fighting machine; it didn't waste its men; it always knew what it was about and in an unexpected phase of the battle could readjust itself and turn things to its own advantage.

"We were always much pleased to learn that the French divisions in front of us were being taken out and replaced by Americans, because then we could turn over and get a little sleep. But if we learned the 2d division was coming after us we had to reinforce our line, increase our battery fire and generally sit up and take notice."

Criticizes American Tactics.

The next obvious question was why the Germans were pleased when the French were replaced by Americans.

"Because the Americans weren't nearly as good troops as the French," Col. Von Xylander said, "but, of course, it wasn't their fault. When they came into the war the French had been at it four years and were seasoned veterans. The Americans had slight training and their officers practically were not trained at all. The men were much better than their officers, which again was not the officers' fault, because you can come nearer to making a soldier in three months than an officer.

"The American officers and men were very brave, but they would rush about sometimes like crazy people and get all mixed up. Men would run away ahead of their artillery and get in positions absolutely untenable, where they simply threw their lives away. Their officers would seem bewildered and sometimes it seemed to us that their men paid no attention to them, but ran to fight to suit themselves."

"And this was not true of the Second division?" I asked.

"The Second division," the colonel answered in enthusiastic tones. "Ah, they never stopped; they had plenty of steam, too, those men in the Second, but it was always under control."

Von Xylander said for a year and a half the German Third army was east of Reims; when the armistice came it had been pushed back beyond Sedan.

Denies Firing at Cathedral.

Speaking of Reims suggested another inevitable question. I asked why the German artillery had been turned on the cathedral of Reims.

"You are asking that question of the right man," the colonel answered. "For a year and a half every German gun that fired a shot into Reims was under my direction. While you will find the town practically razed today the cathedral stands uninjured, except for slight damage done by the bursting of defective shells intended to explode far beyond the cathedral.

"I continually cautioned my gunners to be careful to do no injury to the cathedral, which is so proved, because it stands today. Had I been so instructed I could have blown the cathedral to pieces in a few hours with high explosive shells from my big guns."

Germans Driven Off Hill.

I asked Von Xylander just where the 2d division had especially come into his life. He said it was at a high hill called Blancmont, atop which he had roosted over a year until the 2d came along and pushed him off.

"It was a grand hill," the colonel said. "It was the highest piece of land for miles and from there I could see what all my guns were doing. We had it strongly fortified, but the 2d gave us a great fight and finally captured the hill. We made a counter attack and drove them down again, expecting they would return and drive us off in turn, but they apparently were shifted somewhere and did not come back. We held the hill until our general retreat in September."

I had to insist that with all their faults the Americans seemed to keep Jerry busy making tracks back toward Germany. The colonel threw up his hands and regarded me despairingly through his monocle.

"Ach, Gott!" ejaculated the colonel, "there were so many of them. They were hard to kill and the more you shot them down the more of them there were. I don't think they stayed dead."

An Investment Whose Elements Are Absolute Solidity and Growing Value

The above pictures were taken in sections immediately adjoining Britigan's Portage Park properties. All of the buildings shown above are within three blocks of the subdivision.

As an investment and at the same time a method of saving money on the monthly payment plan there exists no better proposition than the purchase of real estate in a thriving city. Such an investment has two characteristics—(1) It is permanent and (2) it is constantly increasing in value.

BRITIGAN'S PORTAGE-PARK PROPERTIES

Britigan's Portage Park Properties are located along the line of the growth of Chicago. That great artery of commerce and travel, Milwaukee Avenue, has been responsible for the building of values on the Northwest Side as great and substantial as those in any section of Chicago outside of the Loop. This great artery serves this property, as do other section line streets, like Irving Park Blvd., 56th Avenue and Montrose Avenue, which is a great travel thoroughfare and an important half section line street.

Transportation, the demand for home property in this district, the beauty of the surroundings and remarkable accessibility are all elements that have contributed to the rapid growth and value of BRITIGAN'S PORTAGE PARK PROPERTIES. The necessity for additional transportation will undoubtedly force the extension of the Logan Square Branch of the Metropolitan "L" into this district. Necessity also will probably hasten the extension of the Montrose surface line to and beyond this property. This surface line is today less than a mile to the east, and therefore any extension made according to Chicago standards will bring to this property the added values that always come from increased transportation facilities.

The Britigan Reputation Is Back of This Property.

See This Property Today—Rain or Shine!

The physical attractiveness of this home property has indeed been a surprise to those who have seen it during this sale for the first time. Here on the high ridge land, with a boulevard on the north and a 40-acre park adjoining it on the south, is a well developed district containing hundreds of most beautiful homes and flat buildings, having the appearance of the prettiest sections of the Edgewaters and Rogers Park with every educational and recreation facility.

Stand in the center of this subdivision and look around in any direction and you will see development of a rare and costly nature. Some of the finest homes and flat buildings of the Northwest Side have been built on the property adjoining BRITIGAN'S PORTAGE PARK PROPERTIES. On the north is a boulevard and on the south is the second largest park on the North Side. Thousands of people have made this district their home, and schools, churches, stores, shops, playgrounds and recreational facilities have been provided for this population.

The BRITIGAN property in the PORTAGE PARK District is the valuable holding, and so be sure when you come out today to come direct to the Britigan Office. Our PORTAGE PARK PROPERTIES have been planned and will be improved and developed by one of the greatest Real Estate Organizations in the United States. In buying this property you buy not only a property developed as part of a great residential district, you buy not only location and transportation facilities, but you also buy the judgment, the efforts, the material accomplishment and the service of a combination of experts in subdivision building. We want you to realize that our own interest as an organization in this property is as great as the interest of all our purchasers combined; that we have our reputation at stake, and the continued success of this Organization depends absolutely on the satisfaction of our customers. That the satisfaction of every purchaser in this subdivision may be complete, we have spared no effort that would accomplish that end.

During the First Two Weeks of This Sale the Public Bought Lots Amounting in the Aggregate to Over $250,000

While every lot is as good as every other lot and values are present in every section of this property, we advise you to act quickly to give yourself the greatest opportunity for selection

How to Get to This Property

Take a Milwaukee Ave. car to Montrose Ave. and walk two short blocks west to Lockwood Ave., where you will see our office on the property. Or the Irving Park Blvd. car west to Lockwood Ave. (which is a few blocks west of Milwaukee Ave.) and walk north on Lockwood Ave. to the property. If you desire to come by automobile, telephone Rand. 7400 and ask for the Sales Manager, who will see that an automobile calls for you and takes you to the property.

Children's Playgrounds

Portage Park

For the convenience of our patrons and visitors to our Portage Park property, we have built a children's playground containing swings, sand pile, rings, teeter boards, etc. These grounds will be in charge of a nurse so that you may bring the children along and need have no fear that they will not be well taken care of while you are inspecting the property.

HE LIKED 'EM SHORT AND DARK —GOT 'EM, TOO

His Own Wife Qualified in All Points Save Age, She Says.

William Joseph Totten might not have had esthetic tastes in regard to women, but he knew what he liked and that kind he picked, according to the testimony of Mrs. Marie L. Totten before Judge David M. Brothers in the Circuit court. She was granted a divorce and $25 a week alimony yesterday.

"We were married Sept. 2, 1902, and separated April 4 last, after I found him living with another woman at the Hotel Astor," testified Mrs. Totten, who lives at the Hotel Randolph. "He and a woman were registered there as 'J. B. Byron and wife,' and I saw him leave the hotel with this woman.

"He had said before that he liked them short and dark, and this woman answered the description. He picked the kind he liked."

"But you are short and dark," the court reminded Mrs. Totten.

"He wanted some one younger than I, probably," she replied.

As further evidence of Totten's association with other women, his wife presented to the court a letter signed "Fannie" and addressed "Joe, Dear."

"I am blue and upset and long to see you," was an oft repeated phrase, the letter ending with: "I will close, saying with all my heart, I love you, Joe."

A tale of check-kiting, gambling, high living, and one wild woman against Frances C. Friss, 4621 Le Claire avenue, told to Judge Jacob H. Hopkins in the Superior court yesterday, won a divorce for Mrs. Frances Willis Friss.

Mrs. Friss accused her husband of embezzling $30,000, spending it in the thirst parlors, and then of impropriety with a waitress, Gladys Healy, whose flight west with Friss caused a sensation some months ago.

"He told me all about it," Mrs. Friss testified, "after he and Gladys were brought back from Los Angeles. He told me he had lost the money in gambling, and afterwards, in 1918, he went to a restaurant and told his story to Gladys. He said Gladys advised him to go west, and suggested that she go with him. They went together and were arrested in Los Angeles."

SWITZERLAND'S PART DURING THE WAR—AN EYEWITNESS STORY

BY HAROLD F. M'CORMICK.

[Who was in Switzerland during a large part of the war's duration.]

A PERSON who has been in Switzerland these last few years might be thought to be making zigzag journeys around the world; it might be thought the name "Switzerland" sounds like that of a playground and suggests a joy ride, but it is not at all so, according to the experience I have had. "From Greenland's icy mountains to India's coral strand" is not a greater contrast than is that of the attitude of Switzerland during the war, as I found it, placed as she was between the nations in conflict, and the attitude of Switzerland as I remember it years ago during peace times.

If you imagine a busy and gay summer hotel transformed into a hospital you will then have in symbolism the relation between Switzerland before the war and Switzerland during the war.

To me there immediately appeared the transformation. I have never seen a country that could be more consecrated in its way and path than Switzerland, under the stress and strain of its struggle for existence, due to its location and the situation with which it was confronted.

Big Problem—How To Exist.

Switzerland's greatest problem was how to exist. There were certain commodities she had to get from Germany, Austria, Bulgaria, and Turkey, which could not be supplied to her from the allies; there were certain commodities which could come only from the allies.

The result was that Switzerland was constantly under pressure from one side or the other. Naturally, every contract made by her with one side had to be ratified or approved by the other before conclusion, because otherwise, in the turn of events, the pressure and the reaction upon Switzerland would be worse the nert time and the result would be "revision downward" and more hardship. So when, in the course of their pursuits, the Swiss made a contract for supplies with one side they would have it ratified by the other side before it went into effect, and in that way they were able to carry on their business to a certain extent with very much better results.

Never did a more stirring practical appeal reach the Swiss people for their undivided and whole hearted loyalty to the cause of the allies than when President Wilson announced that he would send them 240,000 tons of grain during 1918 without any qualification or condition whatever. That was the culminating feature which caused Switzerland to realize what President Wilson really was; more than a schoolmaster, more than a theorist, more than a teacher, but rather a man who could demonstrate what he would do in a fashion that won their respect and confidence.

Composed of Three Nationalities.

Switzerland is naturally composed of three parts, a German element, a French element, and an Italian element; and all these three languages are spoken in the various sections. Before the war the German element was naturally the strongest and naturally looked to Germany as its godmother. The French part of Switzerland looked to France, and the southern part of Switzerland looked to Italy.

These elements were also under pressure, so to speak, and they had their differences among themselves, and they used to debate within themselves oftentimes as different speaking peoples. But they were "Swiss" from start to finish, and the minute anything came along which involved their national spirit or involved the integrity of that little republic 600 years old then other matters were put in abeyance and they were the Swiss republic, first, last, and all the time.

Looked to U. S. for Leadership.

They had originally a deep feeling of regard for the United States, because they realized that the United States was also a republic, a younger sister, but tremendously larger. They looked to us for the lead, and when in the course of events we went into the war it was the final event that turned Swiss sentiment toward absolute partisanship on the side of the allies.

One might fairly say, speaking in broad terms, that Switzerland was pro-German in the earlier stages of the war, but as the war proceeded and it was realized what power of cruelty, domination, and other dangerous elements accompanied progress by the fire and sword of the Germans she began to see that adhesion to that side meant great jeopardy for her democracy—meant great difficulty for her people. Of course that original attitude was determined in large part and strengthened by the fact that the German element was the most prominent and powerful factor in Switzerland's life, industrially and generally speaking.

Turns to "Even Break."

After Switzerland saw this German war wave rolling across western Europe she began to see for herself what it would spell to her to have anything like even a relative victory of the German arms. Then she wanted both sides to have an "even break," because it was felt if there could be a "peace without victory" it would cause each side to look to her for support and approval and to seek friendship with her.

In this aspect she saw herself rising to be the keystone of the new European arch. But that idea did not last long. It was an aspiration without success behind it.

Soon, therefore, the Swiss discerned that there was only one thing to do, and that was to back the allies, and that there was only one thing coming, and that was the victory of the allies—and then they, the Swiss, did come on their part, and came strong, on the side of the allies.

Close to the Fight.

Life in Switzerland was most curiously and intimately mixed up. I felt when I was over there tremendously close to the fight, tremendously in the thick of affairs, but I had too much of an impersonal view. When I came back to America I found myself back in my partisan and patriotic element, but, with a feeling of distance from the battle line.

I cannot exactly illustrate the difference, but there I felt in the thick of the fight, and not personal. Here I felt personal but away from the fight. The atmosphere over there was one of tension. Foreign men there were trading in all the supplies they could buy and store up, and everybody was suspicious of everybody else.

These traders got Switzerland into great difficulties. They were mostly refugees from the central powers or were people of mixed nationalities—a German husband and French wife or an Austrian wife and Italian husband. People in such circumstances couldn't very well live in either country together, so they came to Switzerland and lived there.

Undertakes Red Cross Work.

Now, Switzerland undertook during the war the most wonderful work through the Red Cross; and with the interned soldiers, who by agreement with both sides, were brought to her country for rest, and with incapacitated soldiers and interned civilians brought through her country to be exchanged.

The men, women, and children turned out to welcome these soldiers, whether they were passing through or had come to stay. All through the little towns you would see groups of soldiers of all nationalities allotted to these districts.

Switzerland served in her way as a melting pot, either for the exchange of views through her newspapers, or for the exchange of prisoners, and in her way did her part as best she could. I admired her immensely and came to respect her point of view. She had many difficulties, but she plowed along through them as best she could.

Swiss Did Their Part.

So Switzerland has done her part in the war just coming to a conclusion, and in the annals of history she will stand high for what she has accomplished, and for her attitude of upholding the principles for which the allies pursued the war to a successful outcome.

Inasmuch as Switzerland exports to the allies twice as much as to the central powers, and inasmuch as she imports twice as much from the allies as from the central powers, it can easily be seen that her commercial destinies lie side by side in the path which the allies are following. She is much more a competitor of the central powers than she is of the allies.

And now as peace draws near it is to be hoped that she will have her share of contentment and prosperity following the long ordeal through which she has emerged, and that the relations between herself and the United States will be closer than ever before in the thought of a better understanding, each toward the other, as well as in the reality of a common purpose.

TROOPS, POLICE, OF GARY TO HALT REDS' MEETING

10,000 Calumet Region Bolsheviki Plan a Big Demonstration.

Ten thousand bolsheviki, I. W. W., and other radicals have been summoned to Gary for a parade and demonstration today, and the police, militia, and department of justice agents are holding themselves in readiness to suppress them.

Mayor W. H. Hodges of Gary yesterday issued a proclamation forbidding the affair, which was originally planned for May day, as a Debs protest. Indiana state authorities are coöperating with Mayor Hodges.

Gov. J. P. Goodrich has arranged for emergency application of the measure recently passed by the legislature providing for "fine and imprisonment for any display of red flags or buttons, or other anti-government insignia."

To Protect City's Good Name.

Mayor Hodges' proclamation was issued after he had received information that the Gary radicals were prepared to hold the demonstration in defiance of previous police orders and had sent invitations to the radicals of Chicago, Hammond, South Chicago, and other towns of the Calumet region to assemble at noon today at the Froebel school grounds, in the heart of Gary's foreign element.

The proclamation reads:

"After observing what happened in Cleveland, Chicago, New York, and other cities May 1, and after making a careful survey of conditions here, and in order to protect the good name and citizenship of Gary, I have arrived at the conclusion that it is best not to permit any public gathering or public parade in the streets of Gary for the next ten days. The police department has been instructed to carry out this order."

Radicals Plan Defiance.

However, at a meeting held in Turner hall, Gary, the radicals announced they would not be deterred by the mayor or the police. Morris Lieberman, who presided, said:

"The mayor's proclamation is not worth the paper it is written on and could not be enforced."

No red flags would be carried in the parade, it was said. The meeting was attended by a thousand persons and speeches were delivered in a dozen different languages, including Russian, German, Polish, Lithuanian, Croatian, Hungarian, Slavish, and Serbian.

Repudiated by Labor Chiefs.

Gary's organized labor unqualifiedly repudiated the proposed demonstration in a statement issued yesterday by Fred H. Dietricks, president of the Gary Trades and Labor council. It read that "the labor unions are not interested or connected in any way."

Capt. R. C. Rankin of Company I, Indiana state guard, has been notified to hold his men in readiness for action. The Gary police department, comprising seventy-five members, will work double shifts today.

Gov. Goodrich this afternoon sent word to Sheriff Barnes and County Prosecutor Clyde Hunter to assist in preserving order. There are about 2,000 returned soldiers in Gary, and they are anxious to get into the battle if one is pulled off. Several agents of the United States department of justice arrived in Gary this afternoon and are watching developments.

The militia and the fire department also will coöperate with the police department.

RIDICULES REDS WHILE CONGRESS TALKS OF ACTION

Labor Chieftain Wilson Says Free People See Fallacy.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 3.—[Special.]—Bolshevism will secure no foothold among the workers of the United States, in the opinion of William B. Wilson, secretary of labor.

Most of the support of this movement, the secretary explains in a letter to James Wilson, president of the International Association of Pattern Makers, comes from the mistaken belief that it is democratic.

In an extended argument Secretary Wilson quotes from Lenine's own speeches to prove that the bolshevik government is not even a dictatorship of the proletariat, but is absolutist in type like czarism.

No One Wants a Dictator.

"From the beginning of time," he said, "until the creation of the United States the workers had been excluded from a voice in governmental affairs. There was a perpetual struggle to remedy the wrong. The philosophy upon which they acted was that every person who had to obey the laws of a country ought to have a voice in determining what those laws should be.

"But clearly this is not the principle being pursued by the Russian bolshevists. They fear the will of the majority just as much as Kaiser Wilhelm, Emperor Carl, or Czar Nicholas did, and boldly declare the dictatorship of the 'advanced class awakening to a new democracy,' and this group is to be the sole judge of how the people shall live, what they shall do, and how they shall do it.

"It sets up the dictatorship on exactly the same plea that every autocrat has used—that he knows better what is good for the people and how they should be treated than they know themselves. It goes farther. It insists that the revolution demands the absolute submission of the masses to the 'single will' of those who direct the labor processes. This single will must be obeyed by 'obligatory labor service.'

"The worker is no longer to be permitted to quit work for reasons that are sufficient to himself. He may not like the place, or may have friends somewhere else and desire to move, but he cannot without permission of the dictator. He may dislike his work, his manager, his foreman, his shop, his wages, his hours of labor, or the conditions of employment, but he must not quit because of the merciless 'dictatorship of individuals for definite processes of work.'

"I am sure no sane American, whose mind has not been perverted by self-interest, would for a moment think of displacing the orderly processes of progress which our institution provides for this wild scheme of autocracy based upon the assumption of superior knowledge of the needs and wants of the proletariat."

Congress Likely to Act.

The movement for drastic legislation to curb the wave of anarchy and bolshevism was given new impetus today by a declaration by Representative Mondell of Wyoming, the new Republican floor leader of the house.

"If any further legislation is necessary to punish bombmakers and bomb senders and the preachers of bolshevism and violence the new congress can be depended upon to provide it promptly," said Mr. Mondell.

Former Speaker Champ Clark, in an address at a fraternity banquet, said: "Although Democrats and Republicans may divide on questions of tariff and the like, the sensible men of both parties will unite and will go after the anarchist to the limit."

3 WOMEN, 7 MEN INDICTED FOR PRIMARY FRAUD

Grand Jury Denounces Election Board; Judge Scully Says 'Joke.'

Seven men and three women were named in indictments returned yesterday before Judge Kavanagh by the March grand jury, which made a special investigation of vote frauds in the February primary.

Nine of those indicted, including all of the women, were judges and clerks of election.

Those named are:

George Van Lent, said to have voted illegally in the Eighteenth ward.

Peter Hennessy, same.

Mary Kennefic, judge in Fourth precinct, Fifth ward.

John Dart, same.

Mary O'Brien, judge in Seventh precinct, Fifth ward.

Ellsworth Parker, same.

William C. Krumbine, same.

Lillian Voss, clerk in Seventh precinct, Fifth ward.

James B. Downey, same.

Mr. Lindheimer Involved.

An eleventh indictment was voted by the grand jury, but afterwards withdrawn when assistant state's attorneys convinced the members of the panel that there was not evidence enough to warrant a hope of successful prosecution. The man named in this indictment was described by the grand jurors as a "prominent politician, living on the south side." Later this man was identified by Assistant State's Attorney John Prystalski as Jacob Lindheimer, assistant county treasurer and Democratic leader in the Third ward. He was not accused of fraud, but of having given false testimony before the grand jury.

Denounces Election Board.

Accompanying the indictments was a report which was a scathing denunciation of County Judge Thomas F. Scully, his election commissioners, and the entire election machinery. Judge Scully was not mentioned by name, but was identified as "the present candidate judge," who "has attempted to discredit the work of this body and its efforts to bring to justice those who would debauch our franchise."

The jury also attaches responsibility for the frauds to the regular Democratic organization.

"The fact that in every case where there was a discrepancy the organization slate benefited by the error showed conclusively that there was an organized conspiracy to defeat the will of the voter and to give the election to the organization slate regardless of the desire of the voter," the report says.

Scully Defies Jurors.

These and other charges made in the report provoked a hot rejoinder from Judge Scully. He defied the grand jurors to prove any of the charges made in the report, and added that they were "actuated by ulterior motives" and "had allowed themselves to be made a joke by the state's attorney's office."

Judge Scully also pointed out that T. Frank O'Connell, chairman of the grand jury, was a close business and political associate of Thomas Carey, defeated candidate for the Democratic nomination for mayor, at whose instance the vote fraud investigation was started by the grand jury.

The indictments actually voted were based on discrepancies between the actual vote and the tally sheets in the two precincts in which the election officials indicted acted. In the Fourth precinct of the Fifth ward it was charged the tally sheets showed 220 votes cast, whereas only 200 ballots were placed in the box. It is charged that votes were added to the totals for Robert M. Sweitzer and Harry Olson in this precinct and subtracted from the vote cast for Thomas Carey and Mayor Thompson.

The same transfer of votes from one column to another is charged in the Seventh precinct of the same ward, although no more votes were tallied here than were actually cast. The grand jury also investigated conditions in other precincts.

Attacks Vote System.

The report opens with an attack upon the system by which the precinct captains of the regular organization are permitted to select judges and clerks of election and upon the provisions of the election law for registration and protection of the ballots.

"Under the present election laws as at present administered," it says, "the 'organization' by the use of dishonest methods is enabled to control the election machinery and perpetuate itself in power."

Some of the Abuses Found.

Then the report deals with abuses which the grand jury declares it discovered. They are enumerated as follows:

1. Placing of hundreds, possibly thousands, of names on the registration books illegally, including men and women who did not live in the precincts, the names of dead men, fugitives from justice, and fictitious persons, and the failure of clerks of election to erase these names after their canvass.
2. Failure of judges and clerks of election to challenge persons known to them as illegal voters.
3. Erasure of the crosses placed before the names of one set of candidates and substitution of crosses before the names of others, to such an extent that in some precincts no votes were left for anti-organization candidates although witnesses appeared who swore that they voted for them.
4. Falsification of the tally sheets returned to the election commissioners to swell the votes of certain candidates and decrease the vote of others, in some cases more votes being returned than were actually cast.
5. Employment of the "endless change" system of voting to such an extent that in some instances all ballots cast in a precinct were marked by three or four persons.

Suspect Men Higher Up.

Then the report continues:

"In view of the greater number of discrepancies in the counting of the ballots, the palpable frauds in counting and certifying the vote and the large number of illegal votes cast, we cannot escape the belief that those higher up in the election machinery are implicated."

Then the report deals with the election commissioners.

"Two of the three men on the election board appeared before our body and, comparing these men with our idea of what an election commissioner should be, made a very unfavorable impression. They did not seem to be conversant with the duties of their office, nor impressed with their responsibility, but appeared to be satisfied to hold the position and draw the salary, leaving their duties to be performed by the candidate judge who appoints them or by others of his appointees."

Favors Jury Plan of Selection.

The report concludes with a recommendation that the election law be changed so that judges and clerks of election can be selected in the same manner as members of grand and petit juries and that it should not be necessary that judges and clerks of election should be residents of the precincts in which they serve.

The action of the grand jury in the Lindheimer case was based on testimony given by Lindheimer when he appeared before the grand jury. John Busch, a clerk of election in the Thirty-second precinct of the Third ward, had admitted to the grand jury that he was under indictment in the federal court for stealing from box cars.

Owen Has Indictment Dropped.

Lindheimer was called to ask if he had recommended him for appointment as clerk. He replied he did not remember and did not know that Busch was under indictment.

Another witness testified that Lindheimer knew Busch's record and had endeavored to get bail for him.

Then a true bill was voted charging Lindheimer with perjury. Assistant State's Attorney John Owen then appeared before the jury, told its members the evidence against Lindheimer was insufficient to warrant the hope of a successful prosecution, and the jury withdrew the true bill and voted a "no bill."

Judge Scully's Reply.

Judge Scully's reply to the report of the grand jury was to point out that the selection of clerks and judges was under the control of Henry Niestadt, who was appointed by Judge Orrin N. Carter twenty-five years ago.

"The list of officials of election is published before the names are approved and every citizen has a right to file objections to them," he said. "Judges and clerks are not expert accountants and are likely to make mistakes, but they are public spirited, honest men and women whose mistakes are not the result of desire to commit fraud.

"This grand jury has gone out of its way to criticise. They devote pages to an attack upon the election officials and ignore the crime that is being committed in the city. The county judge and judges and clerks of election are just as intelligent and as patriotic as any member of the grand jury. There is no ground whatever for its criticism.

Would Discard Grand Juries.

"The whole gist of the report shows the jury was actuated by ulterior motives—that the jury was used for one particular purpose—to attack and criticise.

"The grand jury system is archaic and the grand jury a relic of the past. It should be discarded as an institution. Now it is used only as an instrument for political purposes."

MAYOR ASKED TO UNITE FACTIONS FOR GAS FIGHT

The special gas litigation committee of the council put the bringing of unity in the city's fight with the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company by the council and the administration officials backing up the committee and their attorney, Donald R. Richberg—squarely up to Mayor Thompson in a letter framed at a meeting yesterday.

The letter, reciting the whole history of the litigation, asks this question of the mayor:

"What steps do you suggest should be taken to bring about united support of the committee in this litigation? What methods do you believe should be pursued?"

Donald R. Richberg and representatives of Edward R. Bemis, the special engineer in the litigation, were present at the meeting, presided over by Chairman Capitain.

The letter, which is to be sent to the mayor, follows announcement by Attorney Richberg that he must have united support both of the council and the administration to carry the litigation to a successful conclusion, and offering to step out if that cannot be brought about.

Food in Germany a "Fright," Say These Children of Chicago Hotel Man, Grown Up Since He Last Saw Them Six Years Ago.

Charlotte and Otto Eitel

'NOT SO BAD IN GERMANY,' BUT THE FOOD—ACH!'

Karl Eitel's Children, "Grown Up," Glad to Be in U. S. Again.

Karl Eitel, proprietor of the Hotel Randolph and the Marigold gardens, had a surprise when he met his two children, Charlotte and Otto, who arrived in Chicago yesterday after a stay of six years in Germany.

"They grew up!" he said as he introduced the two tall and good looking young persons who stepped off the New York Central train. "You see, when they went to Germany they were little boy and girl. Now we have a young man and a young woman. I did not know my children."

Charlotte is 19 and her brother a year or so younger. Both are stanch Americans, in spite of having spent six years in Germany.

Like America Best.

"It certainly was good to see that old statue of Liberty," said Otto. "We like America best of all. It wasn't so very bad in Germany, though. When the war with America came it was a great surprise to everybody, and, of course, at first they were strict, knowing that we were Americans. We had to report to the police every day for about three months. Then it got easier. Of course, if we went anywhere we always had to get a permit, but that was easy. Things are in bad shape over there now, though, and everybody is uneasy."

"But the Food—Ach!"

"But the food, ach!" said his sister, and made a face. "We lived on potatoes, with maybe a little one inch piece of meat once a month. It was terrible. We have been in Paris for the last two months and there it was better."

"These two appreciate America now," said their father as he put his arms about the two. "They will clean their plates now, you bet."

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Eitel, and the uncles, Otto and Max Eitel, were at the train to meet the young people.

—then a Cup of Cocoa!

JUST as you leave the theatre, you realize you're hungry. Nothing tastes as good as a delicious cup of Bunte's. You can make it yourself at home in a moment and sleep the better for drinking it. Tea or coffee will keep you awake, but cocoa satisfies without exciting.

Delicious—Any Time

Often just before going to bed you feel the need of something to drink. When friends drop in for a game of Bridge or a neighborly call, give them Bunte's to drink. An impromptu "spread" is better enjoyed when you can sleep well afterward—not pay with a wakeful night.

Then, too, the delicious chocolate flavor of Bunte's—the most popular in America—makes it a special treat. All who taste it, like it.

The Blend That Gives the Chocolate Flavor

In the cocoa bean are all the properties essential to chocolate and cocoa, but the chocolate flavor that delights the palate is not produced by inferior beans or inferior blends—by beans that are ground up with their own shells and kernels, or adulterated by foreign products in cheap methods of manufacture. In Bunte's only the highest grade beans are used, and the blend is a rare perfection which is the true secret of the chocolate flavor.

Bunte's Dutch Process

The absolute purity of Bunte's is proved by its rare chocolate flavor and also by the fact that there is no waste—no loss. The Dutch Process takes out the bitter center of the cocoa bean, removes the bitter shell—and gives you the pure meat—100% soluble.

Cook with it—Bake with it

Let Bunte's Cocoa take the place of chocolate for all cooking purposes. You'll save time and money, and get better results. Chocolate must be grated. Cocoa comes ready for use. Drink Bunte's frequently yourself, and give it to the children every day.

BUNTE BROTHERS Established 1876 Chicago
Makers of World Famous Candies and Cocoa

How to Make Cocoa
For each cup mix thoroughly one teaspoon of Bunte's Cocoa and one teaspoon of sugar and make a paste with cold or hot water. Add one-half cup of boiling water and boil three minutes. Add one-half cup of hot milk and serve. Add a Bunte Marshmallow if you want to.

MANN'S SWATTING BEATS PIRATES IN 11 ROUND BATTLE, 2-1

KENTUCKY DERBY OF 1919 DRAWS GREATEST FIELD

BY R. E. DUNDON.

Louisville, Ky., May 3.—[Special.]—The greatest race in the history of the [illegible] is the confident forecast of local [illegible] observers in speaking of the 1919 Kentucky Derby, to be decided next [illegible] at Churchill Downs. They [illegible] their view on the quality of the [illegible] entered. Now here and in [illegible] for the event are some of the [illegible] notable thoroughbreds that ever [illegible] been entered in a 3-year-old [illegible]

Interest naturally centers in Eternal, J. W. McClelland's game and speedy son of Sweep-Hazel Burke, which has been the winter favorite for the race. With his stable companions, The Wanderer and Sailor, Eternal has been given for the past fortnight a careful course of preparation over the Downs course. Trainer Patterson has been grooming this trio of runners with the exclusive aim of annexing the Derby.

Two From Whitney Stable.

Trainer Jimmy Rowe, of the H. P. Whitney establishment, who brought to Kentucky in 1915, the wonderful filly Regret, the only representative of her sex ever to annex a Kentucky Derby, is represented by two grand looking colts in Vindex and Blue Laddie.

Blue Laddie, a gelding by Cylgad-Blue Girl, won three out of his five starts as a 2-year-old, the only serious blemish on his record being a defeat in heavy going at Saratoga. Vindex, however, has the better qualifications to date, having conceded weight to Foreground, a good older horse, and defeated him at Havre de Grace a few days ago.

Naval Commander Enters.

Another entry of which much is expected is that of Commander J. R. L. Ross, of the Canadian navy. He is represented by Billy Kelly, Sir Barton and War Pennant, but the first two are the ones which are expected to go. H. G. Bedwell, trainer of the Ross stable, has been conditioning Billy Kelly by sprint races, while Sir Barton, which is the most formidable nonwinner in the stakes, and is entitled as a consequence to the ten pounds maiden allowance, which puts him in with 112 pounds, has not been sent to the post in a race this year.

Futurity Winner a Stayer.

P. A. Clark's chestnut colt Dunboyne, [by Celt-Workmaid] is favored by many Eastern critics. Dunboyne has all the points of a stayer. His record as a 2-year-old was of the best. He made his first start at Jamaica, where he was a 3 to 2 favorite, The Wanderer, at 8 to 5, beating him three lengths. In his second essay, he was more fortunate, defeating Grimalkin, American Boy and Terentia and running five furlongs over the straight course at Belmont Park in :59 2-5 seconds.

On the occasion of his final start of the season, in the Futurity at Belmont Park, he beat Sir Barton, Purchase and The Tramp with ease, carrying 127 pounds.

Career of Billy Kelly.

Reverting to the Ross entry, however, there is much to be said in favor of Billy Kelly, who has been beaten only three times in his life, having won sixteen races, fourteen of them as a 2 year old.

Making his first start at Lexington, he was a 10 to 1 shot, and beat Col. Livingston and Col. Taylor a neck in a driving finish. He was again at good odds in a succeeding start, when he again defeated Col. Taylor. He won his third race at Lexington, then scored at Churchill Downs. His one bad race followed, when he finished sixth in a stake race won by Senning's Park.

Then they took him to Saratoga, and he won at 10 to 1. He won his next start, included in the field he vanquished being Eternal. At even money, carrying 133 pounds, he was unable to outstay Star Hampton the next start.

Seven Victories in Row.

Then followed seven successive victories, a defeat by Eternal, in which Billy Kelly was only a head back of the winner, in the $10,000 Red Cross handicap at Laurel, and another victory at Pimlico. In his last twelve races the best odds Billy Kelly has been at was even money, eleven of his races finding him an odds-on choice.

Like Billy Kelly, Eternal has a great record, but was not raced so frequently as his doughty rival. He has two defeats charged to him, one at Aqueduct and one at Saratoga.

Remember Pat Dunne?

Pat Dunne expects to start Under Fire, which has had a great winter campaign at New Orleans and Hot Springs, and has beaten older horses on more than one occasion.

Bert Brannon and his friends expect St. Bernard to make a good showing. The chestnut gelding by Ivan the Terrible—Beatrice K. has won both his starts there in rather easy fashion, beating Under Fire a few days ago.

This year the infield at Churchill Downs will be a part of the paid space for sightseers. It is expected that [illegible] 5,000 more persons can be accommodated than in former seasons. [illegible] of the boxes have been sold, and hotels report reservations of practically all their rooms.

FIRST POST-WAR RACES IN FRANCE OPEN TOMORROW

PARIS, Friday, May 2.—The resumption of racing on French tracks after nearly five years of interruption is helping Paris realize that the fighting is at an end. The racing season will open Monday at Maison-Laffitte.

The bookmakers already are busy along the boulevards and in the cafés, and the conversation in these places is divided about evenly between retrospective references to the riots of May day and to anticipation of the resumption of racing Monday.

The French government hesitated before authorizing the track holders to resume business. Premier Clemenceau displayed the utmost indifference, but Victor Boret, the minister of agriculture, championing the cause of the breeders, finally prevailed upon the premier to permit the race.

Boon for Dressmakers.

Fashionable dressmakers along the Rue de la Paix and the Avenue de l'Opera have been busy for weeks preparing gowns, and the scene at Maison-Laffitte on Monday, weather permitting, is expected to surpass many of the famous displays at the racetracks before the war. The milliners and dressmakers anticipate much business from fortunes made in the war.

The last race run in France before the war was on July 29, 1914, at Chantilly. Racing at that time had attained a high degree of prosperity in France. Many American stables, including those of Vanderbilt, Duryea, and Hitchcock, competed for French stakes, as also did several prominent English stables. In 1914 the stakes which would have been disputed had the war not come amounted to more than $2,000,000.

At the morning trials this week the scene was not dissimilar from those at Belmont Park and Saratoga. Jockeys, trainers, and "railbirds" were in evidence, and English and French predominated in the languages spoken. O'Neill, Stern, and other famous jockeys were in evidence. O'Neill has grown stout during the war.

War Takes Toll of Horses.

The number of horses in training has diminished greatly, owing to the insufficient supply of oats and fodder. Five thousand horses were trained in 1914; now only 1,300 are being tried out.

Betting booths are being built in anticipation of heavy business. In 1913 the total amount wagered at the various Paris tracks was more than $5,000,000.

The Grand Prix de Paris, worth 200,000 francs, will be run at Longchamps, in June. The Paris grand steeplechase, at 100,000 francs, also will be revived. The present schedule calls for ninety days of racing, between May 5 and the last of July, chiefly at Maison-Laffitte and St. Cloud.

Rothschild Stable a Favorite.

The stables of Capt. Cohn and Baron Maurice de Rothschild are great favorites with the clockers. Baron de Rothschild, who has several candidates for the Grand Prix de Paris, told the correspondent today that he hoped to win again this year. He captured the last Grand Prix in 1914 with Sardanapale, bringing in more than 500,000 francs to the owner.

Martin Nathanson Back from Cuban Race Meeting

Martin Nathanson, formerly secretary of the Harlem track when racing flourished in Chicago, has returned from Havana, where he acted as racing secretary and was in the judges' stand at the Cuban race meeting. He will remain in Chicago with his family for a few weeks while a decision is awaited on the Canadian turf situation.

CANADIAN SHOT CAPTURES TITLE AT CLAY TARGETS

New York, May 3.—With a score of 197 out of a possible 200, J. E. Jennings of Todmorden, Canada, won the national amateur trapshooting championship at clay targets over the traps of the New York A. C. at Travers island today. This is the first time in the history of the event that the title has been won by a nonresident of the United States. Jennings scored 100 straight "breaks" in his second round, establishing a new record for this shoot.

F. S. Wright of Buffalo, who won the New York state championship earlier in the week, finished second with 195. C. A. McCarthy of Philadelphia, a former national champion, took third place after shooting off a tie with Mark Arie of Thomasboro, Ill., and J. B. McHugh of Wilmington, Del. Each of these had a score of 194 and finished in the order named in the "shootoff." Five others tied for the remaining five prizes. Following is the order of the ten prize winners, together with their scores:

J. E. Jennings, Todmorden, Ont., Canada, 197; F. S. Wright, Buffalo, N. Y., 195; C. A. McCarthy, Philadelphia, Pa., 194; Mark Arie, Thomasboro, Ill., 194; J. B. McHugh, Wilmington, Del., 194; M. S. Hootman, Hicksville, O., 193; J. Clarke Jr., Worcester, Mass., 193; W. H. Yule, New York A. C., 193; J. B. Johnston Jr., Pittsburgh, Pa., 193; C. Burmeister, Chicago, Ill., 193.

Ever Hammer to Battle Murphy at Camp Grant

Frankie Kick of Rockford and Frankie Jumatti of Chicago will appear in a second fight card this month.

UMPIRE BILLY EVANS EXPLAINS STATUS OF 2 MEN ON ONE BASE

BY BILLY EVANS.

OFTEN in a ball game two runners are standing on the same base at the same time.

This play, as a rule, comes up at third base. The runner on third is caught between third and home, while the runner from second advances to third. In many cases the runner caught between third and home manages to get safely back to his base, so that it is held by two runners.

Many think the moment the runner coming from second touches third base the runner originally on third is forced to go home. That is erroneous. A force out can be made only when a baserunner legally loses the right to the base he occupied by reason of the batsman becoming a baserunner, and he thereby is obliged to advance.

In all other cases the base belongs to the original occupant and with two men on the base the original occupant is the only one exempt from being put out. The other runner has a right to return to his base, if he can get back in safety.

Another play in which the force out is confused is the following: There is a runner on first. The batter hits a ball to an infielder, who first makes the play to first base, retiring the batsman.

The supposition with many is that the runner on first must continue on to second. That is wrong. The moment the batsman is retired the force is removed and the runner may continue on to second, or return to first, according to what he figures his best chance to keep from being retired.

SOX HONOR DAY OFF DUE TO RAIN; TEAM HITS WELL

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Tears instead of smiles seemed more appropriate for "honor day" to the local weather doctor, consequently the skies wept so copiously they drowned out the game between the White Sox and Browns to which all soldiers and sailors in uniform were to have been admitted free yesterday.

President Comiskey of the White Sox announced the same rule would be in force tomorrow at the Sox park. The Detroit Tigers will be the visiting team on that date. The St. Louis team is booked to play here today and the game will start at 3 o'clock if the rain ceases long enough.

Gleason's Confidence Works Wonders.

No small credit is due the White Sox for leading the American league with only two pitchers in condition, and one of those mauled severely in Thursday's opening game here. They have won their six victories out of eight combats by slamming the ball, and their ability to do that is due largely to the confidence inspired by Manager Gleason in their ability to hit any old kind of hurling if they think they can.

The new Sox boss has introduced something similar to Christian Science into their style of attack. He has imbued them with the belief that unless a pitcher is unusually resourceful, they are going to solve his delivery before the game is over. Consequently a handicap of half a dozen runs does not take the pep out of them. That was illustrated in Thursday's game when the Sox, although hopelessly beaten and facing a pitcher who has had something on them since entering the league, kept on fighting and held the majority of fans to the finish.

Jump to Cleveland This Week.

The Gleasons are booked for only a brief stay at home this time. Today's game, if it is played, will wind up the visit of the Browns. Tomorrow the Detroit Tigers will be here for a series of three games. On Wednesday night the Sox will journey to Cleveland for a four day battle with the Indians, to be followed by a couple of open dates in the schedule.

It is possible the game postponed in Detroit last Monday may be staged in Deroit on one of those off days, as the Sox can stop off in the Michigan metropolis on May 11 on their way back from Cleveland, and the Tigers can make the jump from St. Louis in time to compete with the Gleasons on that date.

During the latter half of the month the White Sox will be at home almost continuously, defending the south side grounds against the invasion of the eastern teams. The Boston Red Sox, world's champions, will be the first to arrive, being scheduled to play here on May 14.

WASHINGTON U. WINS CREW RACE

Oakland, Cal., May 3.—Eight sun bronzed oarsmen of Washington university won today one of the most sensational races ever rowed on the Pacific coast when they flashed across the finish line winners by a few feet in the annual three mile triangular varsity race against the University of California and Stanford university, which finished in the order named. The times were: Washington, 16:44; California, 16:45; Stanford, 17:24. The record for the three miles is held by Stanford, which rowed the course in 1911 in 14:05.

California freshmen won their annual two mile triangular race. The time was 11:41 3-5.

Tie Score Three Times and Win Out Finally on Wheat's Third Hit.

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 3.—Brooklyn defeated Boston, 5 to 4, in thirteen innings. It was an exciting battle, featured by hard hitting and spectacular fielding. Olson tied the score for Brooklyn in the third by stealing home. Cadore relieved Mamaux in the seventh and checked a Boston rally. Keating went to Fillingim's rescue in the eighth after Brooklyn had tied the score again.

Riggert's home run in the twelfth put Boston in the lead, but Brooklyn tied it on a pass and Krueger's triple. Wheat's third hit of the game sent Griffith across for the winning tally.

GIANT RECRUIT BEATS PHILS, 4-3

New York, May 3.—New York Nationals again defeated Philadelphia, 4 to 3. The Giants broke a 3 to 3 tie in the eighth when Young opened with a two base hit, advanced to third on Chase's sacrifice, and scored on Doyle's sacrifice fly. The pitching of Winters, a New York youngster, featured. He was sent to Dubuc's rescue in the sixth with one run in, the bases full, and none out, and retired the side with only one additional run. Notes

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 3.—[Special.]—The Cubs departed tonight for Redville eager to get at the league leaders, but not well fixed for a pitcher for the first game.

Indications are that Speed Martin will be sent against Moran's high flyers for the opener.

A fine crowd was present at Forbes field, many more than saw the home opening yesterday. Something more than 10,000 paid to get in.

Two or three times during the game the Cubs found fault with the ball being hurled by Hamilton, and once Umpire Byron tossed one of them to the bench.

Grover Alexander put in another half hour pitching to the boys in batting practice, and looked almost ready for a regular game. Boss Mitchell predicted the big fellow would be in one in about a week.

Had Pittsburgh sent a right hander to the slab, Turner Barber would have stayed on the left field job. It looks now as if Mitchell may use Barber against right handers and Mann against the southpaws all the time.

If the Cubs hadn't won the game in the eleventh it probably would have ended a tie, for the game was to be called at 4:30 o'clock to enable the Pirates to catch an early train for St. Louis. The game began at 2:30 and it was 4:25 when it ended.

RUTH HURLS AND HITS TO SHATTER RED SOX JINX AT HOME, 3 TO 2

Boston, Mass., May 3.—Boston saw a home team triumph for the first time this season when the world champions, with Ruth on the slab, defeated New York, 3 to 2. Ruth's double in the fourth was the big factor in scoring two Boston runs, and Barry's double in the eighth was responsible for the third home tally. Score:

Thirty Tigers Face Morton, Indians Winning, 9 to 0

Cleveland, O., May 3.—Morton pitched his second consecutive shutout for Cleveland today and Detroit was beaten, 9 to 0. Only thirty Detroiters went to bat. Six reached first by reason of safe hits, but three of them died as victims in double plays engineered by Shortstop Chapman.

Morton has not been scored upon this year, as prior to the opening of the championship season he pitched eighteen scoreless innings against New Orleans and Milwaukee. Cleveland drove both Dauss and Kallio from the box. Score:

HERMAN SHADES PATSY WALLACE

Philadelphia, Pa., May 3.—[Special.]—Pete Herman, bantamweight champion, loafed through four rounds with little Patsy Wallace tonight, and it was only after Wallace had given him a good pasting in the fifth round that he exerted himself. In the last round he cut loose, and, disregarding Wallace's punches, he waded in and did enough fighting to earn the decision.

CRASHES TRIPLE IN LAST ROUND THAT WINS GAME

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 3.—[Special.]—Les Mann got back into his position of left field today and delivered a three base blow in the eleventh inning that enabled Big Jim Vaughn to win a pitchers' battle from Earl Hamilton, 2 to 1. A two bagger by this same Les Mann helped the Cubs to the tying run in the sixth, so Mr. Les Mann was whistling again tonight when the Cubs left for Cincinnati.

When Mann struck the staggering blow in the eleventh, one Cub was out and no one was on the bases. It was a drive to left center that bounded almost to the fence. With the Pirate infielders drawn in close, Dode Paskert scraped a single past second base that let Mann trot home.

Vaughn Has Better of Duel.

That one tally was the only run earned in the battle, an error by Hollocher in the third round paving the way for the Pittsburgh score, while a dropped fly ball by Bigbee in the sixth with two men out, let the Cubs tie the count. As far as pitching went, Vaughn had the better of the duel with the Pirate southpaw, allowing the home players only six blows, while the Chicagoans gathered nine from Hamilton.

While Mann deserves praise for his stick work, it might not have been a Chicago victory except for the sparkling fielding of Charley Hollocher. Not once but at least four times during the contest the little Chicago shortstop turned out thrillers, so thrilling that the big crowd of home fans had him doffing his cap almost every time he walked to the bench.

Digs 'Em Out of Dirt.

Once Zeb Terry smacked a line drive a bit to the left of Holly, and the Chicago youngster dived forward and caught the ball on the fly not more than three inches above the dirt. Two or three times he snatched hot ones in deep short and flung out his man, and once he skidded away over behind second base, dug a hot one out of the earth with his gloved hand, and nailed his man.

No one but Casey Stengel gave Vaughn much trouble and yet Casey had nothing to do with the production of the one run for the home team. He poled four of the six Pittsburgh hits, one being a three bagger over Paskert's head in the last of the sixth. Only one was out at the time and right there Vaughn experienced his most distressing spot. Cutshaw was next hitter and flashed the sign for the squeeze play. With Stengel coming in rather slowly, Cutshaw poked a bunt right at Vaughn, who snatched the ball and fired to Killefer in time to nail Casey at the plate.

Can't Do It Every Time.

In the fourth and again in the ninth, Stengel, first man up, led off with a single, but never was pushed far by his mates. When he came up in the eleventh for his fifth time the fans were hopeful, even if two were already out, but on this occasion Mr. Casey fanned.

The Cubs kept pegging away at Hamilton's curves, having many openings to do business before the eleventh, but not until that spasm could they follow up an attack successfully. In the first inning Flack and Mann got singles, but their mates proved helpless. In the third, a double play spoiled a chance and in all except three of the eleven innings they had at least one man on the runway waiting for some one to bat him around.

TOLEDO FAVORED FOR TITLE BOUT

Toledo, O., May 3.—[Special.]—When Tex Rickard left Toledo tonight for New York for a conference with his associates, it was all but officially announced that the Jess Willard-Jack Dempsey championship fight on July 4 will be held in this city. At a meeting of the Toledo boxing commission this afternoon Rickard did not formally ask to hold the bout here, but was assured by the commission that a permit would be granted if the request is made.

Rickard said that definite announcement of the site for the fight would be made in New York on Monday. He declared Toledo pleased him better than all the sites so far offered.

If the fight is held here, it will be under auspices of the boxing commission of which Mayor Schreiber is head. The site will be in Bay View park, overlooking Lake Erie. The boxing commission will get 7 per cent of the gross receipts.

WOUNDED HEROES OF ILLINOIS ASK FOR BOXING BILL

119 Soldiers at Hospital Here Send Petition to Springfield.

BY RAY PEARSON.

To a petition addressed to "The Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of Illinois" 119 soldiers who fought the battle in France have affixed their signatures asking for the passage of a bill which will legalise boxing in Illinois.

These returned soldiers now convalescing at United States hospital No. 32, Forty-seventh street and Drexel boulevard, quickly followed the lead of the soldiers at Fort Sheridan, who last week voted in favor of boxing and wrote to the senators and representatives of their various districts asking for passage of the bill now in the state senate.

Strong for Sport.

"We petition you to assist in passing the boxing bill," reads the petition, and, judging by the number of signers, the soldiers are not in accord with the recent declaration of an opponent of boxing at Springfield that the returned soldiers did not want boxing.

In hospital No. 32 there are about 400 convalescing soldiers. They come from several states, but the majority are Illinois boys. There are a few more than 119 Illinois boys in the hospital, which shows nearly all signed the petition in favor of the glove sport.

Chaplain Asks Boxing.

It is interesting to note that among those who signed the petition is an army chaplain, Clyde E. Heflin, a first lieutenant, whose home is Viola, Ill.

STEPHENS Salient Six

"That is salient which is strikingly manifest or which catches the attention at once."—Webster

FIFTY-THREE years of experience in the manufacture of fine coach work lend distinguished ancestry and a firm foundation to the Stephens Salient Six.

The body is of seamless steel, finished by the hand method traditional with fine coach work. Coat after coat of paint is applied and rubbed by hand until a mirror-like surface results. Every detail gives evidence of the most meticulous care and refinement in construction. The upholstery is genuine French pleated leather, and the interior woodwork is of selected walnut.

Of equally high merit is the chassis, grouped around a perfected over-head valve engine that combines every refinement known to gas engine design with several improvements that place it in advance of all other types. Throughout, the construction is of the highest order, blending coach work and chassis into a unit of topmost value and dependable service. The shrewd judge of motor cars is quick to recognize exceptional value in the Stephens Salient Six.

JORDAN

Prophetic of Imitation

Irresistible is the lure of exquisite lines and rich colors, caught and embodied in this newest motor car—the Jordan Silhouette.

Note the new French angle at the dash,—adding a touch that is at once different and prophetic of imitation.

Note the cocky tilt to the front seat cowl—the perfectly flat top-edge—the fenders distinctively different.

In the deep tonneau, there is a cordovan leather boot and saddle bag—a pleasant surprise for everyone who has grown tired of new fashioned things and craves the old.

The Silhouette is built for either four passengers or seven. And you have your choice between Burgundy Old Wine and Egyptian Bronze for the finish—either is good.

ERE'S A STUNT MADE 'SUCKERS' OF BOOKMAKERS

o Canadian Sprinters Work It, After Their "Races" Fall Flat.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Old time footracers did not confine their efforts merely to running races, they fleece the so-called "wise" sports. The old saying, "the wiser they are the easier they fall," well applied to those who followed sporting events of all kinds in the late eighties in Canada, especially around Montreal.

In those times some sprinting gentry had a number of steel tapes made. These tapes were one-eighth of an inch short in every inch. The sprinters and their managers would go from town to town wagering their runner could step a century in even time or better. Of course, the track was laid out with the steel tape, and the course was short. The sprinters always covered the 100 yards in ten seconds or better, but the ones who fell for this generally were the supposedly followers of the game.

Have Other Sidelines.

Sprinters had side lines from which they made money. Jim Quirk, one of the best sprinters of his day, owned game chickens in Brantford, Can., and he made money selling his best fighters or fighting them against other birds.

It was because of his success in this business that Quirk met his death. His birds had won so many important mains in that section of Canada that he decided not to sell his best fighters. Owners of birds which Quirk's chickens had beaten decided either to buy the fighters or steal them. One night Quirk heard a great commotion in his chicken loft. He went to the coop, and as he was climbing up the ladder to the loft he was hit on the head with a blackjack. He died two days later of a skull fracture. This happened about two years ago.

Previous to this time, Quirk and Billy Boyd, another great sprinter of those days, were partners. Boyd managed to save some of his money, enough to give him a start, and it is now worth over a million dollars. He owns several mines in Chatham, Can., and a steamboat line on the lakes in that region.

Suspicious Public Lulled.

After the people had become wise to the system of Boyd and Quirk they looked askance at any races the two were connected with. The pair were "hot" in Canada. They did not care to go farther than walking distance from their native heath, so they hatched a scheme which netted them close to $3,000 in one day.

The Bonnette racetrack in Montreal is a magnet for people living in and near the French-Canadian centers. Boyd and Quirk had some experience with the ponies, but never placed large sums on any race. They knew the ways of the owners and bookmakers, and determined to beat them at their own game. For the most part, the race track followers of those days were [illegible] bettors, and seldom placed their money unless they felt certain they would win.

Boyd was always a natty dresser. It is said he would go without meals to buy clothes. His appearance and ability to pick up acquaintances proved a valuable asset in the racing venture. On the other hand, Quirk was anything but a mixer, and it took little effort for him to act the part of a bum.

Bookies Fall for "Front."

By arrangement, Boyd sauntered into the lobby of the hotel across from the entrance to Blue Bonnette track, about two hours before lunch time. He was dressed in the height of fashion and carried a cane. He immediately attracted the attention of the horsemen and bookmakers gathered in the lobby waiting for lunch.

Boyd purchased a paper and picked up an acquaintance with a number of the men. He had made himself familiar with the names of the horses which were to run that day, and talked so intelligently on the races everybody thought he was some out of town plunger. Naturally the bookmakers tagged him for "fish" right off the reel.

Then Stranger Appears.

After Boyd had left a small group and sat down to read the paper, an unshaven, trampish individual entered the lobby. He approached the various horsemen and asked for fifty cents to buy a meal. He was always turned down, mainly because the price of a meal at the hotel was 25 cents, and the horsemen could not understand why he asked double the amount.

Quirk finally tackled Boyd. The supposed stranger pretended he did not hear him and Quirk again made his plea in louder tones. Still there was no reply. Finally Quirk hit the newspaper to attract Boyd's attention, and the latter listened to the pitiful plea of the down and outer who was starving.

Gives $20 Gold Piece.

At first Boyd turned a deaf ear, but as Quirk was going away, Billy dug down in his pockets and pulled out several twenty dollar gold pieces. He told the stranger he was sorry he did not have a half dollar in change, or anything smaller than a twenty dollar gold piece. Gazing on the despairing face of Quirk, he at last gave him a twenty dollar gold piece, with instructions to bring back the change.

Quirk disappeared and the horsemen immediately gave Boyd the laugh. Boyd stood the taunts as long as he could, but assured the men he had confidence the bum would be back. Finally one man offered to bet him ten to one the beggar would not bring back the change. Boyd put five dollars against the horseman's fifty. This money looked so easy to the other men in the lobby that bets at similar odds were made until the horsemen had posted nearly $2,000 with the clerk.

Horsemen Ask to Collect.

After lunch the turfmen congregated again in the lobby, and finally Boyd came out. It was getting near time to go to the track, and those who had approached Boyd and asked if he was willing to pay off. Suddenly Quirk walked through the door, picked out Boyd, and gave him $19.50. The horsemen looked on in amazement as Boyd collected the money at the desk and calmly walked out to meet his partner at an appointed place.

"TENT COLONY" AT OLYMPIA FIELDS

Here Is the First Batch of Living Quarters for Families Near Course, Solving "Golf Widow" Problem.

Olympia Fields Country club, the biggest golfing organization on the American continent, will this year boast the biggest tent colony in the history of the game in this country. One hundred families are expected to spend part of the summer under canvas.

On a high and well wooded section of the property, not far from the clubhouse, the tented structures are beginning to give the place the appearance of a Chautauqua camp. The tents, or, more properly speaking, the canvas houses, are the property of the members, who are charged $30 a season for the ground rent, this charge also including the erection and taking down of the houses and keeping the grounds in order.

SHOTS ON THE LINKS by JOE DAVIS

An eastern writer in discussing the longest drivers in the country mentions Jock Hutchinson, Walter Hagen, Gil Nicholls, and M. J. Brady as being the stars of the professional swipers. He overlooks Bob MacDonald of the Evanston Golf club, who can hit as far as any of them.

Hutchinson asserts Bob is the longest hitter and in this opinion is supported by Jack Croke of Exmoor, who says that in the tournament at Fort Myers two seasons ago, MacDonald was easily the best man from the tee in point of distance.

Lieut. Col. Hubert F. Miller, former president of the Beverly Country club, has returned home after two years' service in France and not having had a golf club in his hand for two years is "rarin' to hit 'em again."

In private life Mr. Miller is business manager of the Chicago Association of Commerce, from which organization he received leave of absence to do his bit in the world's war. He went over in 1917 and for four months was with the assistant chief quartermaster's department at Paris. Then for three months he was at Tours, and for the next eleven months was "up front" with the advance section. After the armistice he was at Regulation Station A and later attached to the staff department at Paris. He left Paris April 15 and was mustered out at Camp Dix April 26.

Among the golfers Miller met in France was Lieut. Howard Walton, champion of central Illinois in 1914, and later champion of the University of Illinois.

A former report that Ned Sawyer, former Wheaton player, had been placed at 2 strokes on the Metropolitan handicap list, is erroneous. He is on the 3 mark in company with John G. Anderson, A. F. Kammer, Max Marston, and Gardiner W. White.

Four former Chicagoans are in the 5 stroke list, Lee Maxwell and Roswell F. Mundy, formerly of Exmoor; F. C. Newton and Nathaniel Wheeler, formerly of Lake Geneva. Findlay Douglas, former national champion, and Archibald Graham, once runner-up, have been given a similar rating.

Art Sweet, former professional at the Edgewood club of La Grange, who went overseas with the Northwestern university medical unit has returned. While in France he had a game with Miss Vida Llewellyn of the La Grange club, western champion in 1909. Miss Llewellyn is with the Y. M. C. A. forces.

In a recent New York divorce suit the husband testified that his wife had used a diamond studded watch given her as a birthday present as a tee while learning to play golf at White Sulphur Springs. The judge took the evidence under advisement.

Leo Butler, professional at the Kankakee Country club, asserts that organization has the Rockefeller of the golf course workmen in its employ. He is a retired farmer reputed to be worth $80,000.

On a recent round of the Del Monte course in California, A. M. Day, Chicago veteran, who is 74 years old, made the last four holes in 16, one stroke over par.

The Edgewater club will hold its annual Get Together dinner next Saturday, when, weather permitting, a golf event will be staged in the afternoon.

Lacrosse Practice Today for Illinois A. C. Squad

The initial practice of the Illinois Athletic club lacrosse team, in preparation for its eastern trip, will be held in Grant park this morning at 10 o'clock. Capt. William Neely requests that all members and players dress on the gymnasium floor of the clubhouse.

MR. PLUVIUS TAKES THE JOY OUT OF LIFE FOR LOCAL GOLFERS

BY JOE DAVIS.

Soggy golf was the lot of the few enthusiasts who braved the weather yesterday on such of the courses as are playable. Prospects of an early start have been blasted by the rain of the last three weeks, and on many courses it has been impossible to play the full round.

The Bob o'Link club at Highland Park, which had its initial event scheduled yesterday, was obliged to postpone it, and other north shore clubs were in a similar predicament.

Skokie Marsh Now a River.

The Skokie marsh is now a river, and unless there is a letup in the rain there is danger of a big overflow. There was little play at Edgewater, Exmoor, North Shore, Lake Shore, and Onwentsia.

Conditions were a little better at some of the south side clubs, but it will take a full week of fine weather to put the courses in anything like normal shape and permit the ground men to get their mowers in action.

Lincoln Park players have been watching eagerly for news of the opening of the public course, but it looks as if they will have to wait for another week.

Change in Title Tourney.

Secretary Howard F. Whitney of the United States Golf association has announced a change in the program of the national open championship at the Brae Burn club, Massachusetts, June 9 to 11. Heretofore contestants qualified in two divisions, half the field playing thirty-six holes the first day, the other half playing the second day, sixty-four low scores qualifying for the final seventy-two holes of play.

This year all contestants will play eighteen holes the first day and eighteen on the second. The sixty-four low scorers and those tied for last place will be eligible for the final thirty-six holes of play on June 11. The two eighteen hole rounds and the final at thirty-six will constitute the seventy-two holes for the championship.

In case of a tie for first place eighteen holes will be played June 12. The new arrangement will cut the playing schedule one day.

Ridgemoor Opens May 10.

The Ridgemoor Country club will open its schedule May 10, with a blind bogey sweepstakes, and on the following Saturday there will be an event against par. A one day tournament starting at 9 o'clock is carded for May 30. Four players will qualify for the medal rounds. A mixed foursome will be staged at 1:15. The qualifying round for the director's cup will be played May 31. The schedule for women will start May 20.

President A. Semrad announces that through the liberality of a number of the members and the hard work of the grounds, road and transportation committee, the road from the end of the Lawrence avenue line to the club is now in fine shape. An auto bus will start making regular trips about May 5. Only a few memberships are left.

Rain Washes Away Purple-Chicago Tennis Net Match

Northwestern's opening tennis performance with the Chicago Tennis club yesterday was indefinitely postponed because of the rain. A sideshow match between the Purple second team and Lake Forest also was canceled. Northwestern and Chicago start their conference season on the Evanston courts on Wednesday.

CHICAGO-PURDUE MEET OFF.

Lafayette, Ind., May 3.—[Special.]—On account of rain and a wet track the Purdue-Chicago track and field meet was called off today.

NO CHICAGO-MICHIGAN GAME.

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 3.—[Special.]—The second game of the two day baseball series between Chicago and Michigan was called off this afternoon because of rain.

Tales of a Tee Box Tourist

Thirty-one years ago William H. Arthur won the amateur middleweight boxing championship of the west. The following year he repeated, and for the next two years won both the middleweight and heavyweight titles. Today he is a golf bug with aspirations for the championship of the Park Ridge Golf club.

In the intervening years between his last boxing success and his enlistment last season in the army of Col. Bogey, Bill played football with the Illinois Cycling club team, and for many years was one of the leading handball players of the city. By profession he is a lawyer, and a few months ago drafted one of the boxing bills sent to Springfield.

Until last summer Bill looked on golf as a pastime to be taken up after reaching the age when it is a waste of effort to chase a street car. Then Delavan Lake, Wis., proved his Garden of Eden, with Professional Jim Duncan as tempter.

Surveying Bill's massive shoulders the Scotchman suggested he try a drive. He was bitten instanter, and the next day borrowed a mashie which belonged to an Eve, and for over two hours practiced in a cow pasture. He took five lessons from Duncan and has been playing ever since.

Being of powerful build, Arthur decided that a club of bludgeon-like build was best suited for distance. His first driver weighed fifteen ounces and measured forty-four inches. It was a genuine war club, but results did not come to expectations and his next club was reduced to fourteen ounces and the length shortened to forty-three.

Driver No. 3 found another change to thirteen and one-half ounces and forty-one inches in length. His irons were quite in keeping with his wooden clubs, and in the light of later experience, Bill is satisfied they would have suited the village blacksmith. He became a collector of clubs, a welcome visitor to the loop stores. After disposing of some he found on taking stock he has thirty-three left, and these he reduced to two full sets, all hand picked.

After his five lessons Bill shot the Delavan Lake course in 53, and although he scored an 80 at Park Ridge last summer, he still believes that 53 was one of his best performances.

Asked to write a brief on golf, Mr. Arthur responded with, "It must be a species of mild insanity."

Leroy Jacobson, Unattached	1:05:00

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Running stride for stride until half a mile from the finish, Frank Kochanski, the promising freshman runner of the University of Chicago, defeated George Hankel, fleet Logan Square A. C. athlete, for first place in the annual nine mile run of the Sleipner A. C., held yesterday on North avenue, between California and Crawford avenues.

Despite the mud and water which covered the course, it was one of the closest road races in Chicago in years. The presence of two of the best long distance runners in the city drew a crowd of 2,000 persons to the starting point, despite the drizzle.

Two Leave Field Behind.

As the field of eight starters was sent away Hankel and Kochanski drew away. The Maroon allowed the Logan Square runner to set the pace for the first three miles, which was covered in 16:40. Kochanski was only a narm's length behind, while the remainder of the field was bunched two blocks in the rear.

Except for increasing their lead on the others, Hankel and Kochanski completed the six miles in the same positions, Hankel's time being 33:55. Kochanski at this point was not tired, while Hankel appeared worried because he could not shake off the Midway runner.

Hankel Quickens Pace.

Kochanski made no attempt to pass Hankel at the start of the last lap of the ground, but after they had rounded the flag at Crawford and North avenues for the straight away to the finish, one and one-half miles away, Hankel quickened the pace, hoping to lose his opponent.

In this effort he was taken by surprise. Instead of Hankel losing Kochanski, the latter by a Joie Ray burst of speed, passed the Logan Square runner. Hankel tried to hold on to the pace, but the Maroon, by use of his long, bounding stride, gradually pulled away, until he broke the tape a full block in advance of Hankel.

Ernest Freeman, who competed unattached, ran a splendid race in the one and one-half mile event for boys under 16 years. He went into the lead at the report of the starting gun and finished ten yards in advance of Victor Shiplock of the Sleipner A. C., who won second place by a stride from Andy Peterson, unattached. Freeman ran the distance in 9:33.

Eight runners started in the race and finished in the following order:

GOLF FEE PARTISANS CALLED SELFISH BY GARFIELD CLUB HEAD

CHICAGO, May 2.—[Sporting Editor Tribune.]—I believe that most of the discussions in favor of charging a fee on the public park golf courses is caused by selfishness. Some golfers believe that if a charge is made there will be fewer players and more opportunity for them to play. Isn't this the whole argument?

You don't see the golfer rushing into print to advocate increasing their personal property taxes, but they apparently do want to help out the park board.

The statement is made that a great deal of land is used for this purpose that many taxpayers receive no benefit from. How about the boulevards? We don't all own machines, but we do pay taxes on the improvement. No one advocates charging machine owners for each time they use the boulevard, their yearly license being considered enough.

Golf courses are an asset to the state in that they are health builders for men, women, and children, and everything possible should be done to induce more people to play the game. If the courses are too congested, isn't it the best evidence in the world that we should have more golf courses and not fewer players.

Where are our future golfers coming from if the game is made prohibitive to the children, and the man with a family would surely have to "dig" if they all played golf and wanted to play often, and a fee was charged for each day or each game.

If any fee is necessary, a yearly registration or locker fee is the best plan. Make the green grass free to all the people and induce them to seek it more instead of trying to drive them away.

MARSHALL W. MOREAU,
President Garfield Golf Club.

Stout to Run in Ten Mile Liberty Loan Race Today

Joe Stout, University of Chicago athlete, will make his debut today as a long distance runner by competing in the ten mile Liberty loan race of the Illinois Sportsmen's club over the streets of the west side. It will be the first time the Maroon has attempted to run in a contest over five miles.

INTER-ALLY MEET JUNE 22 TO JULY 6 IN PARIS STADIUM

President Wilson Gives Trophy for Winners in Track Events.

PARIS, May 2.—[Delayed.]—Representatives of twenty-one allied nations are expected to take part in the inter-allied games to be held in Paris from June 22 to July 6.

Gen. Pershing and the officers and men of the American expeditionary force are inviting all the allied nations to enter what is expected will be the greatest international athletic event since the Olympic games of 1912 at Stockholm. The events will be open only to contestants who served with the allied forces at any time between August, 1914, and Nov. 11, 1918.

The American army is erecting an arena, to be called Pershing stadium, with a capacity of 42,000 persons. The ground was given by the French government, the funds for the stadium are to be supplied by the Young Men's Christian association, and the contestants will be the guests of the American expeditionary force, which will defray the expenses of the games.

Seventy-One Events.

The program includes seventy-one events and nations entering the games are given the privilege of suggesting additional sports. The American advantage in the competition by reason of the small percentage of casualties in the war suffered by the United States in comparison with the leading allies is offset voluntarily, so far as possible, by the stipulation that there shall be no championship award for the nation winning the most events. The nation winning an event is to be considered the champion in that event.

Enthusiastic acceptance of invitations have come from Roumania and Serbia. Each of these nations has 150 soldier athletes in training.

Wilson Trophy to Track Victors.

President Wilson has offered a statuette, "Jason with the Golden Fleece" to the nation winning the track and field championship. Gen. Pershing has donated a trophy for the rifle team competition. Premier Clemenceau is one of the others who have given trophies.

TOO MANY COOKS KILL NEW YORK'S BOXING CHANCES

Fail When Legislature Is Stuffed with Bills to Legalize Recreations.

BY RAY PEARSON.

When too many cooks get busy the broth is sure to be punk; in fact, it is very likely to be cooked until there isn't anything left at all.

That little fact has been demonstrated in the state of New York, where all hope of the passage of a boxing bill to take the place of the Frawley law, which was killed, by Gov. Whitman, was "cooked" to the aforesaid nothing. All of which means there will be no legalized boxing in the Empire state, at least until another session of the legislature is held.

All Variety of Cooks.

The cooks referred to weren't all of the boxing type. Some of them were baseball gents, while a lot of others were motion picture fellows. They all wanted something, and to get what they wanted they jammed a lot of bills into the New York state legislature. The baseball gents and the motion picture fellows wanted laws that would permit baseball and the display of the films on Sunday. They got away with it all right, and the fellows who want boxing set up a howl that could be heard clear across the continent. The howl is still being heard, and chances are it will continue.

That boxing was sacrificed for Sunday baseball is the cry of the boxing men, who also point to the fact that the picture stuff also had a share in causing the boxing bill to be tabled for the time being.

Professional Rivalry.

But that doesn't help the boxing situation any. It would seem that the real complaint of the boxing chaps is that the baseball fellows didn't "lay off" at a time when there were enough bills in the legislature to keep that set of men busier than the proverbial bees. Jamming a legislature with "work" isn't anything new. It has been going on for a long, long time and probably will continue to go on.

It would seem that folks in baseball, boxing, racing, and other sports should establish some sort of an understanding, one sport to hold respect for the other and to act in harmony. For instance, why should these sporting fellows "scatter their fire," which means why should everybody try to get something at once? By taking them one at a time it would be much easier to accomplish the passage of desirable bills than by jamming up a legislature.

Sunday Ball Legal Here.

The situation in New York isn't one that will be repeated in Illinois and other states which have a boxing bill in the hands of the lawmakers. This is prevented by the fact that Sunday baseball is permitted in Illinois and other states. It is unnecessary for the baseball men to help in jamming up a legislature by introducing bills, and this should improve the chances of the ring sport becoming legalized in Illinois.

It is interesting to note that another state has swung into line for legalized boxing. This is Missouri. Both houses of the legislature in the "Show Me" state have passed a bill which will permit ten round bouts, and the only thing that now remains is to have the governor place his "John Hancock" to the papers.

Gophers Already Have Law.

The fact that Minnesota recently did not take favorable action on a measure designed to make state-wide boxing lawful is not given serious thought. Minnesota has a boxing law right now which permits three cities, St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Duluth, to operate, and it is the general opinion that the legislators believed that boxing in these cities was enough for Minnesota.

Woods and Waters by LARRY ST. JOHN

TROUTING TIPS.

If you go a-trouting now, take some flies with you. You may use them—you may even catch some fish with them, but if the trout are not rising we would suggest taking a can of worms along also. They may come in handy; you never can tell—"them trout is funny fellers," as Hank remarks.

If conditions are just right the trout will be feeding on or near the surface, and when that happy circumstance prevails we would use the feathers and be happy, but if it rains, either locally or near the headwaters, the water may be high and rolly with the trout hugging the bottom. Then a can of worms will be a shady rock in the desert (some metaphor is right) that will at least keep the skillet smelling of fish.

A writer in one of our big outdoor publications recently said that worms just as they come from the ground are good enough and that scouring them is a waste of time. In the light of our experience that statement is only half true. Fresh worms recently dug are good and will catch fish, but worms taken from the ground some days previous to fishing and kept in a can of mud are not good enough for us. They are soft and pull too easily from the hook and are dirty to handle; besides many of them, especially if they are big worms, die and rot.

Scouring worms was practiced by British anglers when no one but red men went trout fishing in America. Father Isaac himself scoured his worms and gives directions for doing it the right way in his "Compleat Angler." He learned it from men who learned it from their grandfathers.

To scour: Dig the worms about five days before leaving for the stream. Select the liveliest ones and put them in damp moss and set in a cool, dark place like the fruit room in the basement. After two or three days remove all the sick worms, again wet the moss, wring it out and replace. Then give the worms a feed of crumbs moistened with milk, corn meal or coffee grounds. Continue this feeding every other day and when you reach the stream, your worms will be of the proper color, free from earthy matter, tough, lively. Carry them in a can of moist sand or damp moss and they will be as clean to handle as an artificial. We recommend scouring most highly to trouters and not a few perch and bullhead fishermen claim that it pays.

Now for the tackle for worm fishing: Use what you have and if you are a fly fisherman your regular fly tackle will turn the trick nicely. The six foot and longer leaders, however, would be an extravagance. Three footers of medium trout size, unless you expect to connect with some old lunkers, will be about right. The bend of the hook doesn't make a lot of difference that we can see, but we are partial to rather large sizes for worm fishing, as we find that with a fair sized hook you are less likely to hook the kind that are embarrassing to have if a warden should come snooping around—sixes and fours are our pet sizes.

A nifty little trick in the hook line is the double hook built somewhat on the lines of a pork rind or trailer hook. A wee hook is lashed on the shank of a larger one, up near the eye, on which the worm is artistically "draped." With a little experimenting one can learn to hook them on just beneath the skin, at intervals along the body, in such a way that they have a most enticing little "wiggle." Don't forget split shot to pinch on the leader to get the worm beneath the surface properly.

Split shot have one advantage over large single sinkers: You can keep adding them until you get just the amount of lead you want, graduated to the weight of a shot.

With very dark and high water, fish the holes. Get on the upstream side of a pool, gently twitch your baited hook into the water, and let it roll down, following through with your rod. If you get a nibble, take in the slack; when he really bites whip back strongly and don't be afraid of breaking the rod.

For the clearer, swifter stretches use less shot on the leader and make your worming conform more nearly to fly fishing, even to the extent of removing all the shot and casting the worm upstream and letting it sink and roll down. Under the same conditions a Colorado spinner, metal or pearl, baited with two or three worms, and handled the same as you would a fly, in fairly fast water, often saves the day.

When using a spinner, either with a worm or fly, it is advisable to cast it downstream, so that it will be kept spinning by retrieving against, or partially against, the flow. Some lunker trout are often taken with spinners when the water is too discolored by freshets for maximum success with flies.

CUE LEAGUE RACE NEARS END WITH LEADERS BUNCHED

With four games to play Ernie Lundgren of Menk and Reading's is leading the Chicago league race with a half game margin over Pierre Maupome of Milwaukee, whose only remaining game is against Lundgren at Milwaukee. Ben Klatcher of Schuenemann's, with four games to play, is just as much in the running as the two leaders, but has a tough match against Morin this week.

Morin has been playing exceptionally well since recovering from influenza, and as he has six games left he has a chance to climb close to the top. Le Gros, with five games, also has a chance for top place, and has one protested game on which the league will take action this week. Following is the standing:

	Hdcp.	W.	L.	B.G.	H.R.
Lundgren	42	14	6	53	6
Maupome	60	15	8	50	11
Klatcher	50	13	7	55	8

Kieckhafer	60	7	13	61	10
Burton	42	8	15	58	7
Mannassau	44	6	16	66	9

Tomorrow night Capron and Conklin will meet at Mussey's Madison street room.

The first interclub individual three cushion championship will start tomorrow night, the schedule comprising twenty-eight games. Four clubs are represented, each having two entries. Four games will be staged tomorrow night, as follows: Woodward Holmes, C. A. A., vs. J. Walker, Union League, at C. A. A.; C. Earl Patterson, C. A. A., vs. Frank Hughes, at I. A. C.; W. B. Huey, I. A. C., vs. Henry Halsted, of G. R. Collins', at Hamilton club; W. Brewer, Hamilton club, vs. W. E. Bell or P. R. Clark, at the Union League.

Each of the clubs has promised to provide the best possible equipment, the cloth being new, or practically so, and the balls measuring two and three-eighths full.

SPEEDY RUSH TO COACH CORNELL

New York, May 3.—John Harland (Speedy) Rush will act as head football coach at Cornell next fall, according to private advices received from Ithaca today. Rush has been named by the Cornell athletic council to succeed Dr. Albert H. Sharpe, who recently accepted a similar position at Yale. It is thought that Rush's formal selection by the Cornell football authorities will follow shortly.

RANDOLPH BLUES GIVE THOSE PINS A RAGTIME DIP

Roll Into Lead in State Bowling Meet with Total of 2,879.

Randolph Blues closed the first week of the Illinois Bowling association 1919 tournament by rolling into first place in the main event with a grand total of 2,879. J. Lawlar and E. Lafferty did the best work, the former with 605 pins and Lafferty with 602. The Illinois Steel company five, after a strong bid, quit at 2,836, third high to date.

The 1,217 made by Tim Densen and George Ahrbeck early in the week is the top mark in the doubles. The mark was not even threatened yesterday. N. Snyder and J. Barker were the highest with 1,173. In the singles Shields was the day's best performer with 618. Scores:

HOPKINS WINS AT LACROSSE.

Baltimore, Md., May 3.—Johns Hopkins defeated Swarthmore at lacrosse, 8 to 2.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

By A. R. METCALFE

One of the greatest charms of auction is that situations continually arise which are governed by no rule whatever. An excellent example from Lake Forest is given below:

THE HANDS.

North:
S—A, K, 8, 5, 3, 2.
H—K, 8.
C—Q, 9.
D—A, 7, 3.

West:

South:
S—Q, J, 10, 6.
H—J, 9.
C—7, 6, 5, 2.
D—10, 6, 5.

Score, 0—0. North dealt and bid two spades, east three clubs, south three spades, west four hearts. North doubled and the bidding closed.

The bid of west was all and, of course, incurred the danger of considerable loss; only the inferences drawn from the previous bidding made it possible. The only certainty was that east was very short in the spade suit. Whether the bid of three clubs included some red strength or was merely a very long club suit, west could only guess.

The bidding was straight, there being no underhand conventions, such as the three club bid indicating an established suit or six in some suit other than clubs.

West had only probabilities and these would indicate some strength in the red cards which would justify the bid of four hearts. As it was, west easily secured eleven tricks.

North doubled in order to frighten the opponents into a five club bid, but there seem to be no players left who are caught by such crude tricks.

West secured six tricks only.

West should have led the king of clubs at trick two. He knew, of course, that south held both the club and diamond aces, but hoped to find the queen of diamonds with north. Having apparently discovered that one more lead would clear the diamonds, the declarer saw a chance for game provided he could exhaust the trumps in three leads.

The feature of the deal was the play of south at trick two in refusing to win the ten of diamonds, although holding both ace and queen. By using the rule of eleven, south perceived that his partner's heart suit was entirely cleared on the first round. It would be impossible to play hearts, however, while there were any trumps in dummy. He hoped, by refusing the trick, to tempt the declarer into a trump attack and in this he succeeded.

When south discovered that west held but four spades he modified his plans. By leading his last trump at trick seven south made it certain that the heart suit could not be interrupted.

Although this coup by south finally resulted in the loss of the ace of diamonds, it gained four tricks in hearts.

The next deal shows the occasional necessity of shortening up trumps:

West secured nine tricks.

Had east switched to clubs he would have made a small slam. A bid of four clubs was too great an effort for that player, however, and west was left with his troubles.

When the ace of diamonds was disclosed in dummy the declarer realized that north must have doubled on trump strength exclusively. Without this information west undoubtedly would have tried to extract the trumps and play for the club suit.

It being impossible to extract the trumps, west could only make his contract by securing three tricks in diamonds, one in clubs, and five trumps. Also, by shortening up his trump suit he would force north eventually to lead up to the ace and queen of trumps.

This program was carried out successfully. Had west held the ten of trumps he would have secured ten tricks by forcing north to lead to him twice.

North used poor judgment in doubling despite or perhaps on account of his splendid holding in hearts.

SOCCER TEAMS IN SEMI-FINALS

The tenth annual competition for the P. J. Peel soccer trophy has narrowed down to the semi-final round, which will be played today at Bricklayers' field, Thirty-fifth street and Wentworth avenue. At 1:30 the Scottish-Americans will play the Swedish-Americans II, and at 3 o'clock the Lincoln Parks will meet the Swedish-American first team.

CHICAGO YACHT CLUB BUSY RUSHING PLANS FOR A RECORD SEASON

After several seasons of patriotic inactivity the Chicago Yacht club is preparing to resume its place at the head of the city's organizations devoted to promoting the use of Lake Michigan, and particularly the encouragement of sailing. Under the leadership of Commodore Charles H. Thorne and Vice Commodore Godfrey H. Atkin, plans are being made for an active season.

It is proposed to give more attention than ever before to power boating, as it is realized the gasoline craft are continuing to grow in importance and numbers here and are entitled to consideration as well as the sailing yachts.

Big Events to Be Revised.

The more or less classic events held annually prior to the war by the Chicago Yacht club, including the race for the Mackinac cup and the Nutting cup races, are scheduled this season. Old timers are predicting a gratifying resumption of the game that did so much to prepare men for active service in the United States navy during the last two years.

The club has reason to feel proud of the splendid record made by many of its members during the war. Many of the men are returning to Chicago and their presence will help enliven the club's social affairs, as well as refill the gaps which have existed during the last two seasons in active sailing membership.

Clubhouse Overhauled.

The clubhouse is being overhauled and refitted. This year's house committee is headed by Guy Scouler, who is energetically at work. The club proposes to reserve some of its guest rooms for out of town members, an innovation it believes will be appreciated.

The chairman of the regatta committee, Harry G. Wilson, plans to encourage small boat racing, and the fleet of eighteen foot "pups" owned by the club is being prepared for a busy season.

All in all, members of the club are promised a season replete with activity, which will make them forget the depression of the last few years and again impress them with the attractiveness of our great inland sea.

The Real Leaders in BASEBALL UNIFORMS

The fact that Thos. E. Wilson & Co. have outfitted the two premier teams of the National and American Leagues affords unquestioned evidence of Wilson leadership in baseball uniforms.

CUBS and SOX Wear Wilson Uniforms

In addition to the above we have also outfitted many of the City League teams.

Read What Chas. A. Comiskey Says:

"The baseball uniforms furnished the White Sox Ball Club by your company the past three seasons, including the special World's Series championship suits, merited my reordering them from you again. They are well constructed and gave excellent service."

Read What Fred F. Mitchell Says:

"This letter is to confirm my verbal order for the home and traveling uniforms of the Chicago Cubs, as well as the sweaters, for the 1919 season.

"It has never been my pleasure to inspect finer uniforms than those which you showed me, and I am certain that the Cubs will be splendidly garbed this season."

Baseball Managers—ATTENTION!

Notwithstanding this has been a tremendously busy season, we have the most wonderful selection of patterns and can make deliveries in 10 days to two weeks from day the order is placed.

Miller Cord Tire

Cradle Your Car On Miller Uniform Cords

These dead-weight blows of the load below the springs are what shatter cars to pieces long before their time.

Double your speed and the blows are many times harder; it's a problem that motor car engineers can't solve.

Here is a way that practically masters this evil—the Miller Cord Tire—buoyant, over-size, elastic. Thousands of cable cords as strong as bow-strings, floated in new, live rubber, layer on layer.

It gives and takes as it rolls on the rough of the road—it neutralizes shocks—you ride with bird-like ease.

Over 99% Uniform

Miller Cords, like Miller Fabric Tires, are Uniform in mileage—tire after tire. That is because of our system of Uniform workmanship—because all Miller builders are trained to a championship standard.

Each builder is rated on every tire he makes. If one comes back, his standing is penalized. But instances of that are less than 1 in 100.

Geared-to-the-Road

Uniform Millers are the only tires Geared-to-the-Road. This tread of many caterpillar feet engages the ground like cogs—the scientific way. That means positive traction, full power ahead and safety.

Maxwell
—a car having every luxury except one

THAT luxury is brutish bigness, which means weight, which means a large gasoline tank and filled often, and large tires, and several sets a year.

Maxwell is neither a big car nor a small car. The biggest car made is less than 4 feet longer, and costs around $10,000 to buy and $5,000 a year to run.

Most cars are just a foot or a few inches longer.

Nor do they cost, on the average, less to run.

Gas mileage is very nearly the same. Tire mileage is very nearly the same.

But where Maxwell earned its crowning reputation has been in its ability to run and run and never quit.

That means repair bills are amazingly low.

You therefore never get mad at a Maxwell—it's the best friend your pocketbook has. And when you stop to think of all those little points of luxury in a Maxwell you're almost sure to whip out your check book and write a check for one.

The 300,000-all-alike idea behind the Maxwell thus, you see, is sound.

PROFIT SHARING PLAN SUFFERS IN LEAN YEARS

Many Firms Explain Why They Quit "Splitting" with Workers.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Like everything else, profit sharing experiments have a reverse side. Not all the plans have proved successful. A number have been abandoned in recent years and the reasons for their discontinuance have been varied. In some instances the scheme blew up because the "wage dividend" or the "bonus" was considered by both management and force as a substitute for higher wages. In others there was dissatisfaction because shirkers shared equally with the industrious workers in the profit sharing. Others went to smash because at the end of the year there were no profits to split.

Three years ago the federal bureau of labor interviewed twenty-six employers who had abandoned profit sharing systems. They were asked the reason.

Eight reported that the plan did not satisfy the employés.

Five said they discontinued profit sharing because the men went on strike.

Five said the men preferred an increase in pay.

Four stopped the plan because it did not increase interest or efficiency of employés.

Two said their plan benefited undeserving employés.

One said it did not increase the stability of the force.

One stopped profit sharing because of the upward trend of wages and competition.

Wide Variety Found.

There is such a wide variety in the various profit sharing plans that it is rather difficult to find a common thread running through the unsuccessful schemes. It is hard to find a typical case. But an analysis of the failures, points to a few general principles, which are recognized in the more recently launched plans.

To be effective, a profit sharing system:

1—Must begin with the payment of full going market wages or salaries. The "wage dividend" is not to be considered in making wage adjustments.

2—Must contain the prospect of a substantial payment, if business is normal.

3—Must have an esprit in the establishment; must be based on a mutual understanding, upon a genuine spirit of partnership between employer and employé. Mutual welfare is the key.

4—Should have provisions by which length of service has some weight in the distribution of profits, and by which shirkers are not put on a plane with the industrious.

These, mind you, are only a few principles that seem to be fundamental, judging from the failures and the causes for their abandonment. They are by no means exhaustive, and even they do not guarantee success.

Preferred More Wages.

Several of the plants which discontinued profit sharing report that the men preferred increased wages to a dividend; they wanted the extra money in their weekly envelope. The Chatfield Milling and Grain company of Bay City, Mich., in 1906 put in a plan by which employés were given a share in the net profits after expenses and 6 per cent on the capital had been paid. It writes that it discontinued the plan except in its office and sales force because "the laboring, operating, and delivery departments preferred flat salaries." In this company's plan the profit distributions were made among the employés according to salary but not length of service.

The Huron Milling company of Harbor Beach, Mich., operated in 1909-12 a bonus system based on length of service. The man who had worked a year or less got a bonus of 5 per cent of his annual wages; two years, 6 per cent; and so on up to the man who had been with the company six years and got 10 per cent. It was established with a view of stabilizing the force, which had about a 30 per cent change annually. It was abandoned because it failed of this purpose, the percentage of "float" remaining about the same.

Inquiry showed the employés regarded the plan as a sort of annuity and took the view that they were earning more than paid for in wages, and they preferred to get it in their weekly envelopes. It was also reported by the company that looking forward to the bonus tended to make the employés "more extravagant."

"This was too much for us," wrote the president of the company to the National Civic federation afterwards. "We immediately raised wages so no man should lose anything by the loss of the bonus and eliminated the bonus. We have had no complaint since."

Not Real Profit Sharing.

This, it will be seen, was not a real profit sharing plan by which the amount to be distributed to the employés was governed by the amount of profits, higher when business was good and lower when not so good. The "bonus" did not depend upon profits; the men regarded it simply as a deferred part of their wage, and with one-third the force transitory they wanted it paid weekly. This seems to be quite a common experience among "bonus" firms which have found their plans unsuccessful—in fact, one of the chief objections raised by organized labor has been that market wages are not always paid where a bonus distribution is made and that a fixed wage scale on which the man can count is preferable. Some houses have sought to surmount this by combining the element of thrift and shareholding.

Lean Years Make Trouble.

The Elder & Johnston company, merchants, of Dayton, O., discontinued a profit sharing plan because:

"In season of prosperity, when the profits and earnings were large, the employés thought it a fine thing; but in the off years, when the company's earnings were reduced by business depressions or some other causes which come to all business concerns, the employés could not see any advantage, and it always resulted in dissatisfaction."

By contrast with this and some similar plans, which failed because of lack of profits to share, the projects in successful operation as surveyed by the bureau of labor in 1916 showed that about one-third of the establishments reporting paid profit sharing dividends of 10 per cent or more on the annual earnings of the participants, one-third paid dividends of between 6 and 10 per cent, one-third paid less than 6 per cent dividends.

One defect that appears to be common to the more recently discontinued plans is that they were established in most instances simply as a stimulus to increased production, efficiency, and economy and to stabilize the working force. Equitable distribution of profits as a matter of justice does not appear to have entered measurably into the motives of the plant owners, which is in high contrast with the angle from which the question is being approached in these times.

HE SMILED, SHE SMILED, CUPID SMILED; MARRIED

Now that the conductor has conducted her to the altar the story comes out.

MRS. W. J. KERCHER

Mrs. Helen Hughes La Noir, 3207 East Ninety-first street, a young widow, started for her home in South Chicago on the 5:15 one day last November. She was a supervisor for the Western Union Telegraph company. She dropped her ticket as she handed it to Conductor W. J. Kercher. He picked it up. He smiled. She smiled. He smiled again. She smiled again.

That's how it started. They were married last week.

A WAVY LITTLE TALE OF WOMAN'S CROWNING GLORY

Find Few High School Girls Show a Love for Marcelles.

BY LUCY CALHOUN.

Buns, French twists, puffs! It sounds like bakery goods, but it's hair. The other night a solemn person stopped me in the office and said he, "I hear the high school girls are spending all their time in the hair dressing parlors, getting Marcel waves put in their hair. Find out about it. I think it's a crime."

Crimes interest me so I hastened to the hair dressing rooms of Madame.

"Not in my rooms," she said emphatically in answer to my question. "Why, those poor children! The very idea! Of course we have many young ladies who come with their mamas to get their hair shampooed, but Marcelled? Never!

The Water Wave.

"Now a water wave, is gr—rand! That doesn't hurt any head of hair. Permanent Marcels? Well that's terrible. They put your head in and bake it. Of course, the hair comes out. And it costs $25."

I asked about styles for spring and summer. "Off the ears, that's all we can tell just yet," replied Madame. "The French twist is still good, and the high coiffure is being worn a good deal."

No far from Madam's establishment is one of those small, exclusive little beauty parlors. Lights are shaded and everything is very refined. O, yes, very.

"Sh!" said Miss O, the proprietor, who emerged from behind a white curtain, beyond which I got a glimpse of a young girl's face with black hair falling about it. "Yes, I should say we do get in the high school girls, as many as thirty a week, and from 14 years up. They love to get marcelled. It makes them feel grown up."

More Hair Facts.

More hair facts were gleaned. Bobbed hair is very chic for the young miss. "It's being done in the east," said the hair artist, as if that settled the matter. "Some of the older women in New York are doing it, too," she confided, "and do you know, it looks rather smart for some of them. There'll be more false hair worn than ever this season. The war is over and the women are thinking of how they look."

Buns over the ears are still worn, but will not last much longer, I was informed.

HUDSON SUPER SIX

The New Hudson Super-Six Is Now Here—Price $1975

Improved in the Ways Men Have Said Would Make It the Finest Car Built. Prompt Deliveries to Early Buyers

The new Hudson Super-Six is just such a car as you might expect.

Four years in development and 60,000 in service have resulted in a finer, more desirable Super-Six.

Many of the annoyances regarded as inevitable to all cars have been eliminated.

It starts easier, rides easier, and runs smoother. All the qualities that distinguish the Super-Six you know are retained—in many instances, enhanced.

Such High Development Possible Only to Hudson

Without the experience gained with 60,000 earlier cars, this new Super-Six could not have been so perfected.

Four years ago the Super-Six checked the trend to a greater number of cylinders because it gave all the smoothness sought for without sacrificing the simplicity of the six.

It increased motor power 72% without added cylinders or weight.

Then it proved in hundreds of record tests, an endurance surpassing all previous performances. It became the largest selling fine car.

Perfected by Those Who Designed It

Each year has seen the emphasis of some new quality.

The greater range of power and performance was no sooner established than it became famous on every speedway, in every endurance test.

Then it took the lead because of its beauty. Its various body types are accepted standards. They accurately forecast motor car design. The world accepts the Hudson as its most famous fine car.

The men who designed it are for the most part the same who have brought it to its present high degree of perfection. They have observed its career with the one thought of higher accomplishment. And into this new Hudson, they have put the fullness of their experience.

They have made it their attainment—the Super-Sixes you know are but promises of that which they have now accomplished.

Prompt Delivery Now The Price is $1975 (F.O.B. Detroit)

Mid season has always shown a shortage of Hudsons. Four months after the first Super-Six was announced, ten thousand buyers were waiting their turn for delivery.

Every year has been a Hudson Super-Six year. Practically no Hudsons have been available for months.

Now the new car is ready. Factory production is large, but only the first buyers can expect prompt delivery.

When these added qualities become known the demand must be greater than ever before.

Even with no change in the Super-Six, there would have continued a demand for it equal to the increased factory output. But with the Super-Six as it now is, we see a shortage situation surpassing any previous year.

So we urge you to see the new Hudson so you can place your order at once and thus get earlier delivery than will be possible if you wait.

OPINIONS VARY ON CHICAGO'S NEGRO PROBLEM

Eye Witness Seeks Views of Leading Men of Two Races.

BY EYEWITNESS.

1. Merely Preliminary.

For a week I have been wandering amid persons and printed matter, trying to assemble something that should be at once concrete, human, and illuminating about the situation of the colored people in Chicago and the problems confronting them, and confronting us in our relation to them.

I have talked with, or, rather, listened to, colored lawyers, pastors, labor leaders, government officials, publicists, social settlement workers, politicians, soldiers, and one cook. The cook, a woman born in slavery, self-educated, and commanding in her old age large wages, was perhaps the cheeriest optimist and the most temperate talker of all to whom I listened.

Not one overvehement word fell from her lips, and her vision seemed singularly clear.

Supplementary to these talks, I have read reports, governmental and otherwise; pamphlets, editorials, legislative bills, and private letters.

Incidental to that reading, I dipped, for the sake of the background, into such books as Frederick Douglas' autobiography, a favorite tale of adventure with me since boyhood; into some of the writings by and about Booker T. Washington, and into the venerable Maj. Lynch's "Facts of Reconstruction."

Reading Leads Nowhere.

And I'll say that, in so far as the listening and the reading got me anywhere in relation to the local situation, I never have studied a forlorner one, nor ever was intrusted with a sadder assignment.

A subject, I should think, for the utmost caution in speech, temperateness of spirit, and great tenderness of heart!

Among the colored people I encountered a kind of chaos of ill-defined aspiration, quiet but deep resentfulness and mutual distrust. They said many sensible things, but the things they said that were illuminating were more suggestions than ideas.

Of the definiteness and coördination which propel suggestions and ideas into good sound, workable measures, there was almost no hint.

Almost everybody was fluent enough, but almost everybody also was groping.

I listened to white people, too.

That was the most disheartening part of the whole week's experience.

Among men like publicists and administrators of large affairs, who, when they discuss the problems and troubles of their own race, are wont to speak in a rational, or at least a mannerly, way, there was often an unfeeling kind of don't-give-a-damn cry when they talked on this subject that made one wonder how they had managed so well in maintaining a human and successful relationship with their white associates in business and with their employés.

Whites Inconsiderate.

I heard more, far more, insensate language from the lips of white men than of black men throughout the series of interviews.

The horrible part of that, to me, was that when a white employer more or less accountable for the well being of colored workmen, or a publicist entrusted with a pen that forms and directs opinion, had railed about "these damn niggers," they appeared to think they had said something rather gallant and decisive, for they would smile fatuously and expect acquiescence.

Even Dr. Carey, one of the premier colored platform gladiators of this community and a politician and preacher who combines in his vigorous style the histrionism of both callings, lacks the proficiency in vituperation which is demonstrated by certain local white men of affairs when they talk on Chicago and its Negro problem.

Sound Like Lunatics.

And more terrible than the language was the insensate state of mind such language betrayed. The only way one could avoid the suspicion that one was listening to a potential lunatic or a desperately stupid person without a human or a community sense was to allow much for the vehemence of the American tongue and to concede that these men don't mean one-tenth of what they say. If they did they would be fomenters of race wars.

And, granting that they don't they still engender a great deal of bitterness and make difficult the taking of counsel together and the coöperative action which of all things is necessary.

Of course, in a week's survey of this Chicago Negro problem—the problem of where and how the Negro is going to live—I could only touch its superficies, and not all of that, but still the survey was adequate enough to make me believe that the biggest problem that confronts the community is the one that receives the least careful, earnest and coördinated thought.

Some things I learned pretty definitely, and if they are far from being especially recondite things they at least are things ordinarily left out of the account when this problem comes up.

Perhaps the most significant of them is that the old racial consciousness of the colored people of America—which half a century ago was so elemental that it was hardly more than an anxiety and a willingness to be looked after—is being, and to some extent has been, replaced by a social consciousness which demands for the race the right to look after itself and to take care of itself, and that, too, in no meager way.

This was one of three or four phases of the subject, all of which are so obvious that it would be banal to mention them except that most white persons who consider the problem at all are wont to talk as if those phases could be brushed aside, or as if they did not exist.

Negroes Coming North.

First of all, these colored people who are trooping north in increasing numbers and to Chicago especially, have got to live somewhere.

You can't drive them into the lake or colonize them amid the miasma of the Skokie marshlands. With growing economic opportunities awaiting them—opportunities created by our demands—and with growing capacity to meet those opportunities, they will come pretty near living where they want to. They like air and light, wide streets and commodious dwellings as well as you do and they can't find them in squalid factory districts or in slums that foreigners have abandoned. They still will live in those quarters, but they don't like them, and more and more of them each year are finding that they can pay for better.

A second phase of the situation, and the one that causes more inutile railing than any other, is the crowding into the street cars of colored people.

Well, they must ride on street cars, if only for the reason that most of them live remote from their work. Even the North State street line, that used to be considered the special conveyance for "the quality," has come to be known as the African Central. If you can't stomach it you'll have to walk. They won't.

Such are two of the fundamentals of the local situation. The Negroes are here and, so far as the street cars are concerned, you have got to come in contact with them. No amount of railing will eliminate or alter those two facts.

BRIDE OF 17 AND BEST MAN 'LOST' ON WEDDING DAY

William Porter, 49 years old, head of an automobile accessory manufacturing firm, was married February 21 to Miss Voilet La Bounty, 17 years old, of 2950 Cottage Grove avenue. The best man was Martin L. Enright, one of Mr. Porter's employés. Mr. Porter has reported to the police that his bride left him on the day of the wedding. Mr. Enright also disappeared, he said.

'BOOST CHICAGO; LET POLITICS ALONE'—MAYOR

"Forget politics and work for the advancement of the city's interests."

These were Mayor Thompson's instructions yesterday to his department heads. The mayor called in most of the members of his cabinet to tell them of his determination to adopt the "boost Chicago" creed.

"For the last four years it has been a case of fight for our political lives as well as caring for the city's needs," the mayor is reported to have said. "Let us forget politics for the next four years and give our undivided time to caring for the city's needs."

Suit Against Dolly Matters Is Dismissed

Judge Joseph Sabath in the Superior court yesterday dismissed the $50,000 damage suit brought against Anna Dolly Ledgerwood Matters by Mrs. Katherine Mellon in 1915 for alienating the affections of her husband, Charles Mellon, a policeman.

THERE is a reason for this preference for KNOX COUNTY COAL from Indiana on the part of these big concerns who know to a fraction of a penny how much value they get from every ton of coal they burn under their boilers. They don't "guess." They know!

They have tested all kinds and sorts and brands of coal. Their engineers—and many other fuel experts—and our own Fuel Engineering Department have been called into consultation during these coal tests.

BOY GRENADIER SLAIN BY TRAIN WHILE 'ON DUTY'

Was Waiting Return of Hero Brother; Dog Guards Body.

Private Rags can't talk, so we'll have to tell the story:

Ever since he heard his dad tell his mother that Henry would be home any day now, 13 year old Thomas Miller has constituted himself a Chicago reception committee of one for returning troopers.

Henry has been in France with the 108th infantry. He has been gassed and has three wound stripes. To Thomas, Henry was a bigger hero than Gen. Pershing.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company tracks run along the rear of the lot of the Miller home at 1357 West Fifteenth street. The right of way is comparatively wide and Thomas would assume his position on the side next his home. Henry, you see, had told him he would be on that side of the train.

Saluted Troop Trains.

The little grenadier, as neighbors and railroad men had come to call him, was a familiar figure. Wearing his khaki suit and his homemade Sam Brown belt, he would stand bravely at salute as the troop train passed, his tin sword in his right hand and a small American flag in his left.

We had almost overlooked Private Rags, the other half of the reception committee. Rags is a Skye terrier. On these occasions of state he would cease capering and sit on his haunches. Thomas had taught him to do so at the command, "Attenshun!"

There was a great stir in the Miller household Friday night. Pa Miller had confided to Ma Miller that "Henry may get in some time tonight; maybe on that 8 o'clock train." The folks decided they would go up to the tracks when the train passed.

Dies "On Duty."

They told Thomas he had better stay at home; it would be too dark and no place for a little boy. Thomas said nothing. They left him at home. When they returned he was not there. The night passed and no word from him.

Two track walkers early yesterday morning heard a dog whining alongside the right of way. They found a small, bedraggled Skye terrier, shivering from the chill and rain, standing beside the crushed body of a boy. It was Private Rags.

In the boy's right hand was a small tin sword, twisted out of shape by train wheels; in his left hand was a small, mud spattered American flag, torn to shreds.

The little grenadier had died on duty, at salute.

GETS AUTO HELD BY GARY MAYOR.

C. C. Dawson of 4428 Beacon street yesterday proved ownership and was allowed to drive home the automobile found in the possession of former Mayor Thomas E. Knotts of Gary. The car was stolen April 21. Knotts made no effort to retain it after Dawson had identified it.

MYSTERY WOMAN, POISON VICTIM, IS OUT OF HOSPITAL

"Louise A. Brown," the mystery woman poison victim, who swallowed bichloride of mercury in her room at the Grand Pacific hotel on Monday, April 21, and who has since succeeded in concealing her identity from the police and county hospital attendants, left the hospital yesterday evening without lifting the veil of secrecy which has shrouded her since the attempted suicide.

After spending a few moments in the office of Warden Michael Zimmer, she vanished.

After leaving the hospital she was seen to enter a taxicab and drive rapidly west in Harrison street.

Warden Zimmer disclaimed any knowledge of the mystery woman's identity or of her destination. He delivered a little sermon to her on the futility of suicide.

'PLOT' TO BOOST BREAD PRICE IN WAKE OF STRIKE

75 Jewish Bakers Agreed on Increase Today, Charge.

A decision to boost the price of bread by the Jewish master bakers has resulted in vigorous opposition by Abraham M. Liebling, publisher of the Daily Jewish Press. He announced last night that if the contemplated raise of 20 per cent takes place today he will lay the details of an alleged agreement to boost prices before State's Attorney Hoyne.

According to Liebling about seventy-five Jewish master bakers held a secret meeting in the Douglas Park auditorium last Wednesday evening, at which the alleged agreement was reached, and new rates for bread and rolls decided on. The new prices were to go into effect today. One master baker admitted the change in prices, but denied any knowledge of the meeting. A one and one-half pound loaf that has been selling for 13 cents would cost 15 cents, while a three pound loaf that sold for 25 cents will cost 30 cents and rolls would go up in proportion, according to the new rates agreed upon, declared Liebling and the baker.

Part of Big Plot, Claim.

The alleged plot, said to be part of a city-wide one that Commissioner Fred L. Feick of the department of labor is investigating, follows in the wake of the present bakers' strike, it is asserted. In the event the plan to boost the bread and roll prices all over the city succeeded, the blame was to be laid, it is declared, on the striking bakers, who are out for more money, less work, and the abolishment of night work.

While the majority of the master bakers are "holding out" against the striking bakers, the Jewish master bakers signed a new contract with local No. 237 of the bakers' union just before the strike was called on April 26. Since then the Jewish shops are declared to have been making money, but according to Liebling, they are not satisfied.

He says they have deposited $200 as a guarantee of good faith in "sticking together."

Blames Bakers' Union.

Philip Lasar, 1528 South Kedzie avenue, one of the master bakers, denied any knowledge of the meeting, but said he was going to raise the price of his bread today and that he didn't care what the other master bakers did. He was formerly president of the Jewish Master Bakers' association, but said that it no longer existed and alleged that "each baker is now bucking the other."

"I am going to raise the price of my bread from 13 and 25 cents a loaf to 15 and 30 cents a loaf," he said, "but the bakers' union is to blame. Just look at this contract I had to sign. I agreed to pay the foremen $37, the second hands $34, and the third hands $32, but none of them will work for less than $40 a week, and some of them want $50. They change every day or so and want more money. If I don't pay it they won't come to work. I have to put the price up. I don't know what the rest are doing and I don't care."

The contract he signed has a "clause" in it to the effect that not even the owner of a bakery can work in it himself between the hours of 11 p. m. and 5 a. m., he said.

Commissioner Feick has gone to Washington to lay before his superiors the strike situation here and also the alleged "plot" to boost prices all over the city.

Charles F. Hohmann, editor of the Bakers' Journal and one of the individuals directing the strike, admits that one-third of his men are not citizens.

For Your Complexion's Sake—Don't Use a Dry Powder on Dry Skin.

You May Get the Color Tint, but You Lose the Velvet Soft Texture That La Meda Cold Creamed Powder Always Gives.

There is only one complexion maker that is really in competition with Mother Nature—and that is La Meda Cold Creamed Powder. And there are mighty few—if any—complexions that wonderful La Meda wont improve.

La Meda Cold Creamed Powder leaves the flesh velvet soft, aglow with health and renewed vigor, and powdered so evenly that detection is practically impossible.

A La Meda toilet will remain perfect throughout the day—defying heat or cold, wind, rain or perspiration.

For the Face, Arms, Neck, Back and Bust, La Meda Cold Creamed Powder is the ideal requisite.

La Meda does not owe its superiority simply to the fact that it is a combination of cream and powder. It is the way they are combined—the patented process by which they are blended—that makes La Meda so far preferable to the use of cream and powder in separated form.

La Meda is beneficial to any skin, cannot promote the growth of hair, and is most agreeably pleasant and easy to use.

It banishes forever the necessity of frequent dabbing of powder puff—for no nose will be "shiny" for twenty-four hours after a La Meda toilet.

Any dealer can get La Meda Cold Creamed Powder for you, or we will send it postpaid upon receipt of 65 cents.

It is prepared in three tints—Flesh, White and Peachblow.

A sample will be mailed free upon post card request, giving your name, address and tint desired.

'LES TERRIBLES,' MIDWEST YANKS, ARRIVE IN U. S.

Vanguard of Michigan and Wisconsin Division Holds War Record.

BY C. V. JULIAN.

New York, May 3.—"Les Terribles," for that is what the French called the Michigan and Wisconsin national guardsmen of the 32d division, began arriving here today. The first unit of the 32d to reach here was the 119th field artillery, which came in on the cruiser Frederick. The 32d participated in practically every big drive and battle since America entered the war.

The warship was met down the bay by officials and home folks from Wisconsin and Michigan. Special boats were chartered by the delegations and the troopship was escorted to the army piers at Hoboken with cheers and music.

The 119th artillery is commanded by Col. Chester B. McCormick of Lansing Mich., who took it to France fourteen months ago. The regiment lost forty-four men killed and 200 wounded.

Unit in Big Drives.

On June 11 the unit was sent to the battle front on the Toul sector. It also went into action at different times at Chateau Thierry, Soissons and the Argonne. At the latter place the division made one advance of 65 kilometers against the Germans during a hotly fought battle. During the time it was in action the unit fired 180,000 shells against the enemy. On the last day of fighting 18,000 shells were fired.

The 119th made a unique record in the war. It backed up sixteen different infantry units at different parts of the fighting front. At one time, as part of the 57th artillery brigade, the 119th was credited with having advanced a greater distance and fired more shells against the Germans than any other organization of similar size in the A. E. F. The unit holds the record for the number of days it was in action.

Chaplain Wears Wound Stripe.

The regiment was particularly proud of having a chaplain with a wound stripe, the Rev. William A. Atkinson of the Church of St. Mathias, Detroit. His face was deeply scarred by the fragment of a shell which burst near him, Sept. 4, at Soissons. An orderly standing close to the chaplain was killed.

So beloved was Chaplain Atkinson among members of the 119th that they signed a petition to their commander asking that Chaplain Atkinson be accorded the thanks of the regiment and that he be retained as chaplain should the outfit continue to be rated as a national guard outfit.

Others on Way Home.

The cruiser brought fifty-five officers and 1,137 men of the 119th artillery, the 464th areo squadron, and several casual companies, a total of 1,613 men.

Maj. Gen. W. O. Haan, commander of the 32d division and the greater part of the 12th and 128th infantry regiments of the division, are due Monday afternoon on the President Grant, which is bringing Secretary of War Baker home from France. The ship has a total of 6,582 homecoming soldiers.

Nearly the entire 32d division is now on the sea and will land here next week.

The transport General Goethals from Bordeaux docked at the Bush terminal, Brooklyn, this morning, bringing home 1,417 troops under command of Maj. S. J. Rathborne of Montgomery, Ala. The units included the 323d field signal battalion and the 318th repair and salvage company of the United States tank corps.

Chicago Officers Arrive.

Among the Illinois officers who reached here today with the advance guard of the 32d were:

Lieut. John Sorarus, 5103 Kenmore avenue, Chicago.

Lieut. Walter Jenkins, 1236 Stewart avenue, Chicago.

Lieut. Ross W. Matthews of Marissa.

Lieut. John Conley of Wheaton.

Lieut. Sorarus, who is an expert accountant, declared that if any private corporation attempted to conduct its business along lines followed by the United States war department, the corporation soon would be bankrupt.

"Nearly every man in my regiment was months behind in his pay," the lieutenant declared. "Until very recently some of them had actually received no pay since entering the service."

"DRYS" WANT TO RUSH VOTE WHILE GOING IS GOOD

Springfield, Ill., May 3.—[Special.]—All pending wet and dry bills, including the search and seizure measure, will come to a show down in the house during the week of May 12 if the Anti-Saloon league managers get their wish.

The drys' program in the house, it is understood, is to get the search and seizure bill out of the temperance committee, to which it is likely to go Monday or Tuesday, so that it can be handled on second reading Wednesday or Thursday, and be ready for a final vote on third reading at whatever date may be selected.

GOOD ADVICE TO "HOME ALL OUR OWN"-DREAMERS

"Worth-while" husbands and wives are not satisfied with the "Home, Sweet Home" that is subject to the Rental Calls of the Landlord, but they let their "money slip through their fingers" while DREAMING about "A Home All Our Own" instead of ACTING when it is "within their reach.

"Just-Rite" Home for Everybody

Bruce's Tampa Highlands offers all classes WHAT THEY WANT for a quiet "Country Home" in an exclusive Residential District on a fine Brick Paved Road within 30 minutes' auto ride of 100,000 people in the booming city of Tampa and vicinity, or for raising Oranges, Grape Fruit, Vegetables and Poultry, or for General Farming and Stock purposes.

A Home "Within Reach" of All

Our prices per acre are less than the annual profits per acre made on improved land in the immediate vicinity with "Easy" Monthly, Quarterly or Annual payments on tracts of 10 acres and upwards.

NOTICE: Ex-Senator Bruce will "Chaperone" another party of Home-seekers and Investors to Tampa—leaving Chicago May 17, 1919. He invites you to make early reservations and join him on this 7 to 10 day trip through the truly "Great Southland."

HIGH CADETS RETURN FROM WEEK IN CAMP

One Hundred high school cadets, wind blistered from a week's training at Camp Roosevelt, arrived home yesterday morning at 7 o'clock on the steamer South Carolina. The cadets boarded the boat yesterday at Muskegon. On the eve of their departure from the Michigan city they were given a dinner in the auditorium of the Hackley High school by the Muskegon Rotary club.

The cadets were met at the docks by a welcome home party made up of the friends and parents of the boys. They were under the command of Capt. F. L. Beals, director of military training in the Chicago high schools.

The general inclemency of the weather during the cadets' stay at the camp, together with the consistent training maintained every day, served as a fair introduction to the rigors of army work, according to officers who assisted in the training of the boys.

CHICAGO TROOPS IN VIRGINIA PORT

Newport News, Va., May 3.—[Special.]—Heroes all, tried and found true in the Argonne and engagements which led up to this great thrust, several score Chicago veterans arrived today aboard the battleship Vermont and the transport Susquehanna.

Aboard the Susquehanna was a detachment of the 302d tank corps. These men did not see action, but Chicagoans in the outfit say it was not their fault nor the fault of their companions.

"We were ready and anxious to go at them, but the armistice cut us out of the chance for which we had trained and waited so long," said William Meller of Maywood.

The Susquehanna also had on board the 327th battalion tank corps and balloon companies 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 11, 17, 18, 42, and 43.

MILLION FOR MICHIGAN UNIVERSITY.

Lansing, Mich., May 3.—Gov. Sleeper today signed the Lennon bill giving approximately $1,500,000 to the University of Michigan. This is the largest appropriation ever made by the legislature for educational purposes.

HERE ARE UNITS REACHING NEW YORK FROM OVERSEAS

NEW YORK, May 3.—[Special.]—The cruiser Frederick and the transport Gen. Goethals reached here today. An abstract of the personnel on each follows:

FREDERICK—Fifty-five officers and 1,538 men of the 119th field artillery, 32d division.

GEN. GOETHALS—Ten officers and 433 men of the 323d field signal battalion, medical detachment, Companies A, B, and C, Camp Custer; detachments of 90th aero squadron, the 161st aero squadron, the 407th aero squadron, the 487th aero squadron, the 655th aero squadron, the 656th aero squadron, the 318th replacement and salvage company, tank corps, Camp Upton, and one casual officer.

CANADA PLANS RECONSTRUCTION OF ITS MILITIA

Winnipeg, Man., May 3.—Complete reconstruction of Canada's peace militia has been decided upon by the federal government. A commission has been appointed by the militia department at Ottawa to vist every military district and obtain material for the general reconstruction report.

Some of the leading phases of the American national guard reconstruction plan may be incorporated into the Canadian system. Units which made history for Canada at Ypres, Passchendaele, Vimy ridge, and other battlefields will have their fighting names conferred on units of the peace militia. No anouncement has been made regarding the size of the Dominion force.

Soft Coal and the Kewanee Boiler Solve the Coal Question

You big users of coal can upset the hard-coal monopoly if you want to and incidentally save 50 per cent on your fuel cost. The only reason there is a hard-coal monopoly is because you permit it.

The solution of the coal question lies in the boiler and not in the coal. You have never allowed anybody to prove that assertion. You have used hard coal for years and the habit has been too strong for you.

But if you will use soft coal in the Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler, you will save 50 per cent of your fuel cost without a particle of smoke or soot. Your dividends and profits will increase, of course, because soft coal costs just half.

The all-steel Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boiler is doing all these things for countless big industries in the West—for big buildings of all descriptions—for hotels, school houses, churches, office buildings, and what not.

If you will all install these Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boilers you will help to reduce the big freight traffic all over America. There will be mighty little hard coal shipped to the West. Your railroads will cease to be congested and the use of soft coal in the Kewanee Smokeless Boiler is the absolute solution of the coal question.

You can't use soft coal in the boilers you have, unless they are Kewanee Boilers, but you can use any kind of fuel in the Kewanee and with all the effect you can hope for.

Write to the Old Man Behind the Boiler, or send for a representative, and get all the details.

A Cadillac Is Worth Waiting For

Since the army began to come home from France Cadillac has experienced the greatest demand in its history.

For the Cadillac's wonderful performance has been noised about. Now, nearly everybody knows that the Cadillac in war service proved so superior it was made the standard 7 passenger car of the United States Army.

As a result, the demand for Cadillacs is greater than the supply; tho' the Cadillac factory is already back to its normal pre-war production.

If you want a Cadillac—and who doesn't—you must wait for it a week or two, or perhaps four months, depending upon the body type.

But all admit that the Cadillac is worth waiting for, so the waiting list continually grows larger.

Perhaps the body style which you want may be available soon. But, whatever the situation, the sooner you place your order the shorter the time you must wait.

100,000 MILES SERVICE SERIES

INDIANA OVER SIZE TRUCKS

4 Times Round the Earth

EIGHT years—over 100,000 miles—still in service every day. That, in brief, is the experience of the Interstate Grocery Company, Joplin, Mo., with its first Indiana Truck, one of the fleet pictured below.

Other Indiana trucks also have 100,000 miles service records. The first Indiana built is in use every day. Into each Indiana is built 112 per cent over-strength—this is the reason Indiana models carry more than competitors' trucks of same rated capacity.

Products today are bought on the confidence in the company that stand sponsor for them. Now judge the confidence you can place in this company; it is financially sound, with the highest credit rating given any company.

Indiana trucks are the product of an organization that spans America and it is the policy of the company to sell this product at a small margin of profit. Successful truck construction and passenger car construction, are as widely different as the locomotive is from the street car: we are heavy merchandise transportation specialists—we have never manufactured passenger cars.

For eight years the Indiana Truck Corporation has concentrated on truck transportation—nothing else. It has built up a field service organization providing facilities for quick and complete service. It has a corps of transportation engineers that covers the country inspecting Indiana trucks at frequent intervals throughout the year. Executives of this corporation visit different sections of the United States to see the different Indiana models in service in the hands of the user; all with the ultimate idea of giving the highest quality truck it is possible to build.

Indiana Truck prices f. o. b. Marion, Indiana, are—1-ton, $2150; 1½-ton, $2600; 2-ton, $2800; 3½-ton, $3450; 5-ton, $4600

Eight Factors of Profit

in Chowchilla, California

DOUBLE-CROP TWIN-PROFIT FARMS

Your first profit is assured immediately from the increase in the value of the Land when we transform the virgin soil into a cultivated, crop-growing, profit-earning Farm

We share the expense and divide the Profits

Where the land never sleeps—never stops producing

You could search all over the world and we do not believe you would find more fertile farm land anywhere than in the San Joaquin Valley in California—certainly not in any other section of the United States.

From the Atlantic Coast to the Sierras, and from Duluth to far below the Ohio River, early each October nearly ONE BILLION ACRES of Farm Land yawns and stretches and settles down into a sleep which lasts for nearly seven months—seven months out of twelve months each year. It is true that sleeping under the snow, in many acres of this land, there is a wealth of winter wheat—but at best it is a single crop produced during a period covering over seven months—while other millions of acres of this land remain absolutely idle and non-productive during the winter months.

Notwithstanding the handicap of cultivating land which can be farmed only about 40% of the year, these billions of acres are bringing profit and success to hundreds of thousands of farmers who raise grain, fruit, and vegetables.

Yet what would these same farmers earn in the San Joaquin Valley of California, where the land stays awake all the year round, admitted and proved to be one of the richest agricultural sections on earth? We invite you to visit Chowchilla in the heart of the wonderfully rich San Joaquin Valley, and see for yourself WHAT MIDDLE WEST FARMERS HAVE DONE AND ARE DOING—the annual profits they are making on DOUBLE-CROP TWIN-PROFIT Farms.

Fortunes to be made from California's virgin soil

Had the Forty-Niners only known it, in their mad rush to California they were kicking under their feet larger fortunes and more easily obtainable than all the gold ever mined in California and the entire United States.

For over half a century the top soil of the San Joaquin Valley land has been enriched by the thousands of grazing cattle—as late as nine years ago over 14,000 cattle ranged over Chowchilla.

With the ever increasing demand for Foodstuffs—with the populations in the city increasing faster than additional virgin farm land can be cultivated—land formerly used for cattle grazing—and especially in the rich, fertile San Joaquin Valley—became too valuable, many acres being required to furnish nutriment for a single beast. With the cry for more and more foodstuffs to feed the 46,000,000 people of the United States who live in the cities and towns, and the immediate demand for foodstuffs to help feed at least 300,000,000 hungry Europeans, the big, undeveloped cattle ranch is no longer profitable—these ranches must be converted into smaller, profitable farms such as you will find at Chowchilla.

This offers the city man who would like to increase his present income with the profits to be made from the business of farming, and to the farmer in One-Crop-a-Year sections, not an "opportunity," but a CERTAINTY.

In 1917 the average ANNUAL INCOME of farmers in one of the middle west states was in excess of $7,000. It was over $8,000 in 1918. The rural industries in this one state last year produced a value in excess of $1,500,000, and the people of this farming state, according to official Government Reports, are the WEALTHIEST PER CAPITA in the entire United States, their wealth being THREE TIMES MORE than the average.

Biggest profits go to those who "break in" virgin soil

In every farming community throughout the middle west there are families who own land worth anywhere from $150 to $300 per acre—whose forefathers bought this when it was virgin land for practically nothing, much of it at a price as low as $1.25 per acre.

This first profit in the increase in the value of the land, when the virgin soil is transformed into a cultivated, crop growing, profit earning farm, is exactly what we are offering you at Chowchilla today, as explained in our Book, "TWIN-PROFIT FARMS."

The big profit in farming is always made by the man who first breaks up the virgin soil, cultivates and crops it, provided the conditions are right. The market value of any land multiplies very rapidly immediately it is cultivated and cropped—and a still greater value is added when the adjoining land is put under cultivation—and at Chowchilla you will find the adjoining farms under cultivation, making the INCREASED LAND VALUE of your TWIN-PROFIT Farm a CERTAINTY.

The COST of putting land under cultivation and cropping it for the first time is very high, whether it be virgin land in the middle west, much of which had to be cleared, or whether it be land in California. How to reduce this FIRST COST? Simply turn these large tracts of land into many small farms and by co-operating through us with many individuals who would become the owners of smaller farms under our TWIN-PROFIT Farm system.

Gigantic Farming Operations at an amazingly Low Cost

Profits almost unbelievable to a middle west farmer or a city man who has been raised on the farm are obtainable at Chowchilla. The silt top soil is unusually deep and rich. California's unequaled growing all-the-year-around climate, California's perpetual sunshine, California's mild climate, make the profits from your DOUBLE-CROP Farm in the San Joaquin Valley assured. Remember, your Chowchilla DOUBLE-PROFIT Farm will grow two money-making crops each year, instead of one annual crop.

We farm your farm for you—we share the expense and divide the profits with you. Later, should you decide to move to California, we turn over to you a DEVELOPED, BEAUTIFUL, PRODUCTIVE Farm—a Farm Home, a profit-earning Farm, a permanent income bringing business—and the privilege of living in one of the Garden Spots of North America.

At Chowchilla The Daniel Hayes Company is conducting farming operations on a gigantic scale—proving that there is just as big an advantage in farming BY POWER in a BIG WAY as there is to any manufacturer who operates a big plant and uses labor saving machinery. For instance, the Farm Tractor represents one of the most important advances in farm methods since the business of farming was started. At Chowchilla you will find in daily operation a great Fleet of Holt Type Tractors—also a number of Killefer Chisels which work the virgin land to a depth of about 20 inches, cutting slots through the ground and completely breaking it up. One of the huge Holt Tractors will pull a sufficient number of Discs to form a total width of 60 feet. This dependable, experienced and thoroughly equipped organization makes an easy task of cultivating several hundred acres daily. The Hayes Farming Organization is the result of 64 years of successful experience—and is ready to prepare the soil for a harvest crop of dollars for you just as soon as you become the owner of a Chowchilla DOUBLE-CROP TWIN-PROFIT Farm. It not only SPEEDS UP the work, but LOWERS THE INITIAL COST of transforming virgin soil into profitable farm land.

Advantages enjoyed by Twin-Profit Farm owners

Compare, if you will, the cost of farming in the best farming sections when conducted by the individual farmer, as against the cost of farming operated on a tremendous scale by The Daniel Hayes Organization. At Chowchilla it is practical to use extensive equipment to break the land, level it for irrigation, seed it, cultivate it and harvest the crops under our "community of interests" plan—it is not only PRACTICAL, but is being done every day at a LOWER COST than it is possible for the individual farmer to do.

Under our system of beginning the development work of these TWIN-PROFIT Farms for the owners, we plow and cultivate many adjoining farms at the same time, and all in ONE OPERATION, planting and cropping at the MINIMUM COST.

We employ the highest class agricultural experts, whose services the individual farmer could not afford to buy—and whose services will be invaluable to the city men and women as well as to the farmers who locate on their Chowchilla TWIN-PROFIT Farms later.

The second year you will begin getting your share of the crop profits, details of which you will find in our Book, "TWIN-PROFIT FARMS."

Eight Factors of Profit Advantages

FIRST—You buy virgin land which is turned into a cultivated farm and the value of the land itself immediately increases.

SECOND—Your Chowchilla Farm will grow two crops each year instead of one crop, so you receive two profits annually instead of one profit.

THIRD—The use of big equipment means efficiency—LOW COST OF OPERATION—and therefore the BEST possible results under our Crop-Sharing Plan during the period we farm your farm for you.

FOURTH—Under our individual, localized Irrigation System, there is an unlimited water supply available at all times. Chowchilla is underlaid with an abundant water supply, so it is not necessary to bring water from a long distance at a great expense—and proper irrigation at the right time means BETTER CROPS and a LARGER YIELD.

FIFTH—Your TWIN-PROFIT Farm will be located in the center of the richest valley in all California—where an endless variety of profitable crops can be raised—Alfalfa, Cereals, Fruits, Vegetables, Livestock, Poultry, and also exceptionally large profits from Dairying.

SIXTH—These TWIN-PROFIT Farms come recommended to you by actual owners, those who have already purchased and personally inspected their land—including Farmers, Retired Farmers, Farm Renters, Farmers' Sons, Country Bankers, Big Business Men, Professional Men and Women, Investors, City Men.

SEVENTH—A rich Silt Top Soil of unusual depth which produces bumper crops and bumper profits.

EIGHTH—All that could be desired in the way of Transportation and nearby Markets which pay top prices for everything that can be grown on your TWIN-PROFIT Farm.

Come to Chowchilla—or have some one represent you

The prosperity on every side and the wonderful progress and development being made in every direction in the San Joaquin Valley around Chowchilla is an "eye-opener" to the first time visitor.

Chowchilla is situated on the San Joaquin Valley Division of the Southern Pacific Railway, 38 miles northwest of Fresno, a city of more than 50,000 population.

There are over 2,000 people now living at Chowchilla, about one-third in the city and the balance on the surrounding farms. Chowchilla is modern, up to date, with water works system, electric lights, concrete walks, about 50 business houses, a large hotel, to which a $40,000 addition is being made; a $60,000 high school, grain elevator, creamery, two national banks, churches, excellent school system, rural mail delivery, moving picture theatre, concrete boulevards for motoring—improvements and advantages of civilization are everywhere in evidence.

Coming down from Sacramento to Chowchilla, a distance of 38 miles, you will pass through 26 towns ranging from 1,000 to 80,000 population—most of these towns having developed during the last ten years.

Going south from Chowchilla, you will pass through a thriving, prosperous town at regular intervals of about five miles apart. This will give you some idea of the wonderful, rapid development of the San Joaquin Valley.

DICKSON PLANS REORGANIZATION OF STATE GUARD

Illinois Adjutant General Consults Washington Officials.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 3.—[Special.]—Plans for the reorganization of the Illinois National guard on a peace basis were discussed by Adjt. Gen. Frank S. Dickson of Illinois today with Maj. Gen. Jesse McI. Carter, chief of the military bureau of the war department. Gen. Dickson was accompanied by Col. S. O. Tripp, quartermaster general of the Illinois National guard.

Gen. Dickson said that Illinois intends to proceed with the reorganization of the national guard at once. He found the war department ready to cooperate, although present appropriations probably will make it necessary to start with a somewhat smaller number of units than existed previous to the war.

Plans for Future.

The tentative tables of organization being worked out by the war department for the reorganized national guard call for three or four regiments of infantry and two or three of artillery for Illinois at the start. That will furnish a nucleus which can be expanded in the future. This total compares with eight regiments of infantry, one of cavalry, and one of artillery which were in existence in Illinois when the United States entered the war.

While the national defense act provides that federal recognition shall not be given national guard organizations of a state unless the total number of men equals 800 per member of congress, an amendment to the act which was approved by the war department, but failed of enactment in the filibuster of the recent session, permits recognition on a basis of 200 men per member of congress. This would enable Illinois to start off with a guard of somewhat more than 5,000 men. The war department is expected to act on that basis, even though the legislation was not actually passed.

To Proceed Rapidly.

Reorganization of the Illinois guard will proceed rapidly, following the return of the old national guard troops. The old 8th regiment, composed of Negro troops, was the first of the former Illinois national guard units to return, and its reorganization is already under way.

The 149th field artillery, Col. Henry J. Reilly's regiment of the Rainbow division, which is now at Camp Merritt, N. J., and will leave for home next Tuesday, was formed with the old Illinois national guard artillery units as a nucleus. Steps will be taken at once to reorganize it.

FEWER KILLINGS BY AUTO; CREDIT GIVEN TO SPEEDERS' COURT

Automobile and motor truck fatalities in the first quarter of the current year have fallen much below the figures for the corresponding period in 1918, according to a report issued by Judge Stelk in the Speeders' court yesterday.

In 1918 435 persons were killed by automobiles in Chicago. In the first three months of 1919, 29 pedestrians were killed by autos, while thirteen pedestrians were killed by motor trucks. Trucks killed 82 last year. Persons injured, not fatally, in 1918, numbered 8,179—all struck by automobiles. Thus far this year the number injured by autos was 428, exclusive of those killed or maimed through their own or contributory negligence. Motor trucks injured 93 in the first quarter this year.

"There is not the slightest doubt in my mind but that the influence of the Speeders' court has done much to save lives and protect the public," Judge Stelk said. "Drivers now respect the rulings of the court, and the public—pedestrians—have become more wary. Much credit is due to the watchfulness of the several corps of motorcycle policemen employed by the city and the park boards.

"Credit is due, too, to the influence exerted by the Chicago Automobile club, concerns operating many motor trucks, the taxicab companies, and all organizations interested in public safety. Rules of the road are becoming better known and so are the decisions of the Speeders' court. But there is no excuse for fatalities if careful driving is the watchword. However, speed maniacs must and will be eliminated."

GRAND JURY'S REPORT FALSE, SAYS GEMMILL

Judge, Scoring "Ignorance" of Jurors, Hints at Criminal Action.

Demands for action and scorching statements came thick and fast yesterday from Municipal court judges, in answer to the March grand jury's report that the judges are conniving with politicians in behalf of criminals.

Judge Irwin R. Hazen, who was specifically mentioned in the grand jury's report, branded the jury's statement against him as a lie, and demanded a full investigation of the charges by the Municipal court judges in a body.

Judge Olson declared he will issue a demand to Judge Marcus Kavanagh, chief justice of the Criminal court, that the grand jury either follow their charges with indictments against the judges they referred to, or that the charges in the report be stricken from the record.

Might Arrest Jurors.

Judge William N. Gemmill asserted that a "warrant for the arrest of every member of that jury might well issue" as a result of the grand jury's charges.

"The grand jury's report is criminal libel," Judge Gemmill charged, "and a warrant for the arrest of every member of that jury might well be issued on proper application. Grand jurors can do only one of two things—either indict or refuse to indict. If the evidence is sufficient it is their sworn duty to indict. If it is not sufficient it is their sworn duty not to indict.

"If a man is indicted he can go into court and prove his innocence. If he is not indicted, but simply besmirched by an ignorant grand jury he has no remedy. Grand jurors are both civilly and criminally liable for statements of the kind contained in such a report.

Expose Dense Ignorance.

"The grand jurors in that report exposed their dense ignorance concerning crime and its sources in this city. Twenty-two per cent of the criminals held by the judges of the Municipal court to the grand jury for crimes are discharged by that body without indictment. Thus thousands of criminals are turned back upon the community by this agency to continue their depredations.

"Grand jurors hear only such evidence as the prosecutor wants to present. If the prosecutor wants a fellow released he passes the buck to the grand jury, instead of passing the evidence, and the job is done.

"The wholesale condemnation of the parole system is also silly. It reflects only the opinion of the prosecutor. Of course, there are abuses. But that is no excuse nor license for besmirching public officials who are doing their duty."

ALL CHINAMEN LOOK ALIKE TO THE DETECTIVES

Joy Wing, alias Sing Wack, demonstrated yesterday that his feet are as fleet as his fingers are dexterous. And he has taken asylum in a Chinese laundry and the South Chicago police can't find him.

Mr. Wing is wanted on a forgery charge. With a white woman, Edna Meyers, he is said to have cashed 100 checks for a total of $3,000 since March 1 on banks in Illinois and Indiana. He was seen leaving Roseland on a street car yesterday and the police there notified South Chicago.

Detectives in an automobile trailed the car. Wing saw them and jumped off. They pursued him into the laundry and surrounded it. They were figuring out how to split the reward when they entered. They found seven Chinese, but they were unable to identify Wing.

All the Chinese looked alike, they reported.

Replete With Adventure, Intrigue, Heart Interest, Daring Escapes, Rides to the Rescue, Gorgeous Landscapes, Beautiful Sea Views, Love Stories, Thrills and Suspense

The developments of human interest are rooted in authentic historical data which has a bearing of deep significance upon current events. The following will reveal the application brought out after a year of painstaking research:

FOREWORD

—In Holland, just outside of Germany, ex-Kaiser William II. stops—and waits.

—His grandfather, William I., when heir to the throne, likewise fled to England—and waited.

—Only twice during five centuries' rule have the Hohenzollerns been obliged to flee.

—Both times the upheaval resulted from causes forcing themselves upon Germany from the outside world—In 1848 it was the French Revolution! In 1918 it was the Allied Victory!

—This story deals with the events of 1848.

—Then, as today, a William of Hohenzollern fled abroad—and waited.

—Then, in 1848, the first William returned.

—With his army he struck down the Parliament.

—Without resistance, the people bowed again to the iron rule of their divine-right kings.

—And out of this the first William and the second builded unthinking armies, which, at their command, set out to conquer and scourge the world.

—Now, as in '48, the Allied Victory has forced Germany to another experiment with liberty.

—Now, as in '48, the second people's Parliament arises in Germany.

—But now also, as in '48, the second William is waiting—just outside!

—Will History repeat itself?

DANGER!

There is danger that higher prices for coal will prevail the coming fall unless the Public gets into the market and considers seriously the problem of getting in their coal early. The mines require orders NOW so as to keep the miners at work, and secure as nearly as possible an even distribution of production during the summer months, thus avoiding the "rush" period and car shortage in the late fall. Every one can help the situation by buying as early as possible.

We are well prepared to supply GOOD domestic or steam coal. "Will you talk to us?"

TATE BUREAU O AMERICANIZE ALIENS IS URGED

putation to Springfield to Ask Appropriation for the Purpose.

Creation of a state commission or ureau to promote making of American ens out of the alien population is to urged upon the state legislature. At Union League club yesterday the nois state Americanization committee decided to send a deputation to ringfield to try to get the work rted. An appropriation of $100,000 the purpose will be asked.

Methods to be followed, it was urged, can be worked out once the commission is established.

Suggests Registration.

An Americanization conference is to be held in Washington May 12-15 under the auspices of the bureau of education, and out of this are expected to emerge some general plans which states may use for guidance. Suggestions as to how Americanization can best be advanced were entirely tentative yesterday. Many organizations are trying to work out the problem. Judge Edmund K. Jarecki suggested that it might be well to require aliens to register and to report to the authorities every six months.

Urges Pay for Teachers.

Edward Tobin, county superintendent of schools, said a minimum salary for country school teachers is one requisite in the general program.

"Half our schools are rural schools," he said, "and any slip of a girl just out of high school can teach country school. Fifty dollars a month is no inducement for young men and women to spend years of preparation. They prefer to take a course in a business college and make more money as stenographers. Yet these rural schools teach one-half the rising generation. To get teachers who can teach Americanism as it should be taught we've got to have decent salaries for rural teachers."

THE HONEYMOON EXPRESS IS HELD UP—BY PHONE!

Newlyweds, Speeding to Station in Auto, Are Arrested.

The fast train on the Chicago and Northwestern, bound for San Francisco, was held up last night. A couple of honeymooners in a stranded automobile held it up.

The train was held up by telephone at that.

You see, Arthur C. Haubold of Glencoe, manager of the Orange Judd Farmer, had just married Luella Elizabeth, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Bowes, 7317 Dorchester avenue, and they had arranged to go to Honolulu and thence to Japan. The train for Frisco was due to leave at 7 o'clock. The taxi was supposed to arrive at 6.

It didn't. It came at 6:20. It ran three blocks and then ran out of gas. W. M. Springer, a friend of the honeymooners, saw another automobile and got it. H. A. Schneider, the owner, consented to drive it.

He went along the boulevard at forty miles an hour. There was no time to waste. Then, O! Motorcycle cops. They pinched everybody, and took their names, and time was flying. Five minutes to make that train!

Five minutes! And the bride and bridegroom were at Thirty-fifth street and Drexel boulevard, miles and miles away. So Springer went into the telephone booth, got the train dispatcher on the phone, and held up the train five minutes. Yes, the honeymooners caught it. And Judge Steik in the auto court when he heard the story yesterday let Schneider go without a fine.

FATHER WANTED $50,000, FIANCEE OF RICH MAN SAYS

Nineteen year old Agnes Bangs, governess and reported fiancée of the rich A. B. Collingbourne of Elgin, had something to say in her own behalf yesterday, anent her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Bangs. It was:

"I left my home in fear of my life. My father had a revolver. At one time he said he had visited a certain lawyer, who advised a settlement for $50,000. So far as the money is concerned I am not interested."

Mr. Collingbourne also came through with a statement that "Mr. and Mrs. Bangs approved and consented to my engagement to their daughter with full knowledge of her action as governess in my home."

Asked when the nuptials would be performed, Mr. Collingbourne said he thought some time next December.

For they are aware that behind each National is a record of eighteen years of successful manufacture. They know that in the hands of their friends Nationals have always performed reliably. They know that National cars do stand up under long and arduous service. Therefore they buy National Motor Cars confidently, believing that one of these cars bought today will serve them well many years from today. HOYNE FRICTION? 4 AIDS OUT; ONE SWEITZER FRIEND

Prosecutor's Assistants Resign; Deny Any "Dissension."

Rumors that dissension and friction are upsetting the state's attorney's office were insistent yesterday about the Criminal Courts building and in official circles, following the announcement of the resignation of four of State's Attorney Hoyne's chief aids.

Those who have quit the state's attorney or announced their intention of so doing are Assistant State's Attorneys Henry Berger, John F. O'Connell, Hayden Bell, and Edward J. Fleming, secretary to Hoyne. The four have frequently been intrusted with the most important cases in the office. Their sudden announcement of withdrawal from the state's attorney's staff constitutes the biggest shakeup in the department since Mr. Hoyne took charge.

Deny Friction Rumor.

Denials that either differences or ill-feeling prompted the changes were made, both by the state's attorney and the resigning aids.

Only in the resignation of Mr. O'Connell did there appear verification of friction. O'Connell's withdrawal did come about through politics. O'Connell is a member of the Sullivan Democratic organization, and during the recent mayoralty campaign openly was a leader in behalf of Robert M. Sweitzer in his ward. Aids close to the prosecutor admitted this had considerable to do with O'Connell's parting from the staff.

One of the most insistent stories regarding the shakeup was that the Hoyne mayoralty campaign funds had furnished a basis of some dispute and led to a "split." In this connection several recent visits by James S. Agar, who was Mr. Hoyne's campaign manager, to the prosecutor's office were mentioned.

Letter Lands Him.

Assistant State's Attorney Berger's resignation is to become effective following the settlement of the Hoyne-Scully vote fraud controversy, which he has been handling for Mr. Hoyne. Mr. Berger says he will return to private practice and be identified with the firm of Levinson & Hoffman.

Mr. Berger's resignation was received by Mr. Hoyne some time ago and was to have taken effect May 15, but because of the vote fraud imbroglio, he has decided to remain longer if necessary.

That the resignation of Mr. Berger is not the result of dissension is manifest in Mr. Hoyne's letter of acceptance. It reads in part:

"I wish to take this opportunity to tell you how sincerely I regret seeing you leave this office, which you entered at my request and without any solicitation on your part. You are one upon whom I always relied during all my terms of office. You were always willing to undertake any task, no matter how disagreeable or laborious. You have always been resourceful, reliable, and industrious."

Says It's Up to Hoyne.

It was said at the state's attorney's office that Edward Fleming's resignation was to take place in August. Mr. Fleming, however, asserted there was nothing certain about this.

"My resignation might come any time between now and the end of Mr. Hoyne's term of office," he said. "On the other hand, it is likely that I will be here with Mr. Hoyne until the last day."

TOLD TO STUDY FERMENTATION; PROVES TOO APT

Tank Corps Veteran Goes Astray 'Midst Bright Lights.

Earl Kyle, son of Frank Kyle, head of the Domestic Bakeries company of Urbana, Ill., bore an excellent reputation when he came to Chicago. He had a wife and a 9 year old daughter; he had been top sergeant in company C, 342d tank corps, and had been honorably discharged, and he didn't know a bartender or a lounge lizard, and had no idea what a cabaret might be.

Today he's in a cell at the detective bureau, charged with passing a number of checks on hotels and saloonkeepers. He has been on a month's spree, the police declare, and his wife has been frantic with worry.

He had come to Chicago to take a course in fermentation, so he could aid his father in the scientific management of the bakeries; then he went to Menominee, Mich., and made a lot of money installing a bakery plant.

And when he came back he met an old tank corps chum, and took a new course in fermentation, joined a new tank corps. He spent $1,000 the first two nights, according to Detectives Bermingham, McGurk, and Mulvihill.

He got his wife on long distance yesterday, and, after listening to what she had to say, asked her to tell dad and have him fix it up.

When You Buy a Waltham Watch You Own the World's Leading Railroad Watch

There are more Waltham Watches in use by the railroads of the world than all other makes of railroad watches combined.

This fact alone proves with certainty that the Waltham Watch possesses distinctive and superior mechanical and time-keeping merit or this assertion could not be made to-day.

You will remember that the horological commissions of the world's leading nations, one and all, chose the Waltham Watch. That they did not decide on any other watch is of great value to you in choosing your watch. If they had decided on any other, it would have proved diversity of opinion, and you would not have had this valuable help to guide you when making the decision—what watch to buy.

These commissioners were trained watch men. They were chosen by their respective governments because they knew the works of a watch. They were not to be misled or guided astray by a fancy golden case that might hide a poor movement. Oh, no—they knew.

These watch men took the works of the world's watches apart—they laid the various pieces side by side—they tested the materials of which they were made. They noted the principles of their construction—how one maker did this, and another maker that. And after these watches were built up again they tested them for time-keeping.

That's what you buy a watch for—time-keeping—dependable time-keeping, year in and year out. And that is just what these wise watch experts were after. They knew that the works were the watch, not the case that held them. Clothes may make the man—but it's the works that make a watch.

Then, after these watches had run awhile, they discovered that the Waltham Watch gave certain results which placed it first in comparison with the other watches. It met the test in a supreme way. It did not excel in one particular at the expense of another. It was of such uniform high rating that it defeated its competitors in everything, and the decision was unanimous in favor of WALTHAM.

These horological experts were from different countries, and they fulfilled their tasks of finding the world's best railroad watch at different times.

Please remember that in these tests Waltham defeated every other watch. There are many people who imagine that the Swiss watch is supreme. And there are thousands upon thousands of people who wish they had never bought one.

These skilled watch experts saw how Waltham Watches are made, what they are made of and in what scientific respect they are different from all other watches in the world.

Waltham Watches have now been made for nearly three-quarters of a century, and American genius and mechanical skill have discovered how to do things better than they are done abroad.

One instance will suffice. The balance wheel of a watch is a vital part of its time-keeping. It must keep its sphericity and its size. It is well known that metal expands and contracts in response to heat and cold. As a watch is carried into varying temperatures it is important to offset this resultant danger.

Waltham horologists designed a balance wheel of brass and steel, so forged, hardened and tempered that the static principle of one metal counteracts, in exact ratio, the elasticity of the other—that is one reason why Waltham Watches are such noted time-keepers.

We are giving the public a series of inside facts in the national magazines about the material and mechanical superiority of the Waltham Watch—facts that no other watchmaker in Europe or America can equal or deny.

And it's never been done before—but there is no reason why a man should not know something about the "works" of his watch just as he does about the mechanism of his automobile.

One thing is certain—when you buy a Waltham Watch you not only buy the world's leading railroad watch, but a watch which in material and mechanism possesses fundamental superiorities which insure you a watch to be proud of now and for many years to come.

Go to any Waltham dealer—and that means the leading jewelers in this city—and he will show you Waltham Watches ranging in price, for gentlemen, from the Cadet Strap Watch, with gold covered back, at $22 up to the Waltham Premier Maximus at $530. And, for ladies, the Jewel Series from $31.50 upward to that exquisite watch (its movement is actually smaller than a dime in diameter) which sells from $150 to $1,000 or more—according to the case.

BIG CHANCE FOR MEXICO'S TRADE OFFERED TO U. S.

Must Be Prepared for Keen Competition, Official Says.

BY S. W. RIDER.

(President of the American Chamber of Commerce of Mexico.)

Mexico City, April 20.—This is the age of organization, of coöperation. Trade associations are active everywhere. Strength and influence are found in union. The Chamber of Commerce of the United States is a confederation of 1,000 commercial bodies in our country. The movement is spreading abroad and American chambers of commerce are found in many foreign countries, affiliated with those in the United States.

The American residents of Mexico City in November, 1917, incorporated the American Chamber of Commerce of Mexico. Its original membership, eighty-five, is now nearly 400, and is steadily growing. Present accessions are coming from leading business houses and banks in the United States. It is expected that the membership will be doubled this year.

The chamber affords a practical and reliable channel of information and assistance to those in the United States who are interested in Mexico and its future. They need just this service.

Mexico a Coming Country.

In area Mexico, with 15,000,000 inhabitants, is equal to western Europe with 200,000,000. One-half of the country lies within the zone of the tropics. Every product of the globe is found or can be produced here. The country is naturally rich in silver, gold, copper, petroleum, fiber, sugar, coffee, rubber, fruits, tropical woods, and all plantation and ranch products. The United States imports of tropical products for food and manufacturing now exceed $1,000,000,000 yearly, and Mexico if developed could supply them all, in exchange for American manufactured goods.

"Ought to Lead Again."

Ten years ago Mexico led all the Latin American countries both in volume and percentage of trade with the United States. It ought to lead again.

In future the United States must be prepared to meet keen competition. British, French, Spanish, Italian, and Japanese steamship service is being resumed and trade emissaries have appeared in numbers since the armistice was declared in Europe. Inducements are being offered in prices and credits in certain lines. The Americans must be active and efficient.

Mexico is naturally American trade territory rather than European. If the Americans do not hold this large and growing trade it is their own fault. But they must organize and go after it.

PROWLER SCARES MIDWAY CO-EDS; COP IS WANTED

Co-ed residents of Greenwood hall on the Midway have been terrified recently by a Negro who prowles about the Midway at night.

Protests have been registered by the residents of the hall to the Daily Maroon. A communication from one of the women asks why the watchman no longer patrols the Midway between the hall and the university library. The letter adds:

"It is necessary for many of the residents to cross the Midway to the library every night between 7 and 10. It is a dark walk and is quite unsafe for a woman to walk alone.

"Tuesday night a Negro accosted one of the women and tried to grab her arm. Fortunately she was able to free herself and ran screaming back to the dormitory. This occurrence has terrified the residents of all the women's dormitories, for this is an illustration of what can happen in that deserted place. Why not station a policeman at the corner of Greenwood avenue and Sixtieth street?"

Three Detective Sergeants Transferred by Garrity

Chief of Police John J. Garrity, in a special order yesterday, transferred three detective sergeants to the detective bureau, the changes to take effect at 7 o'clock Monday morning. John Howe, who for three years had been detailed at the United States marshal's office, is shifted from the Gresham station to the detective bureau. John Quinn was sent from the Hyde Park station to the bureau, and James Call from the new city station to the bureau.

Here's a Privilege that Victory Has Brought Back to YOU!

WHEN the U. S. Fuel Administration was inaugurated, we had to discontinue shipping Tecumseh Coal direct from our mines to the homes of the thousands of people who had learned to rely upon us for coal of finest quality at prices that meant a big cut in the annual coal bill.

We gladly placed our mines under the command of the Fuel Administration. We knew that it was a necessary War Measure. But now the bars against direct shipments from our mines to your homes have been lifted. This privilege the War took away from you has been brought back to you by Victory.

Again You Can Save 25% of Your Coal Bills

You get this guaranteed quality coal at mine prices, fresh from our mines, near Vincennes, Ind., in the famous KNOX COUNTY COAL field. All pure coal, clean, free-burning, free from clinkers. Coal so extra good that we absolutely guarantee it to prove out 13,400 B. T. U.'s (heat units) per pound lump—an unusually hot coal. Only 9 per cent ash and 9 per cent moisture. Think of the save big saving that this plan of buying your coal means to you! Suppose, for instance, you could buy your sugar direct from the sugar refineries at the price per pound that the big jobbers pay. Wouldn't that cut your family sugar bill in two? Or, if you could buy the shoes, the clothes, the hats, the furniture for your home, at the same price the big wholesalers pay the factories, think how much of the money you are now paying out that you could put right back into your pocketbook! So, now that you can again buy your coal direct from the "factory", the mine, now that

The U. S. Gov't says: "The War Is Over!" You can buy your

GRAIN TRADING LIGHT; CLOSE AT BEST PRICES

Shorts Are Uneasy and Cover Owing to Wet Weather.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Trading in coarse grains and provisions was lightest of the week. Most of it was evening up commitments. There was little news, but shorts were uneasy and in covering owing to the wet weather made a close at nearly the best prices, with corn 2⅝c to 3⅛c and oats ⅞c to 1c higher in Chicago.

Corn in the southwestern markets closed 1½@2⅝c higher and oats ⅛@⅝c higher. Oats in Minneapolis were 1c higher and in Winnipeg ⅛@1c higher. Rye futures in Minneapolis gained ⅝@⅞c and barley ⅝@1⅛c.

In the face of the wildest fluctuations in corn known to the trade the last week closing sales Saturday were at gains of ⅛@1c, with May leading. Oats were ⅛@1½c lower for the nearby deliveries, with May weakest, while September gained 1¼c. Pork is 35c higher for May and 15c lower July. Lard 15@52½c higher and short ribs 5@7½c higher than a week ago.

Weather Market in Corn.

Wet weather prevailed over the greater portion of the corn belt, and, with showers predicted over Sunday, combined with light offerings except from profit takers, an advance was easily made and maintained, the finish being at the top to ¼c under, with May at $1.71, July at $1.68⅞ and September at $1.64⅜. While sentiment was generally bullish, there was rather liberal selling on the bulges by commission houses, while on the breaks offerings passed into strong hands, and there were numerous sharp fluctuations which kept the local element on edge from the start.

At the top prices showed 17¾@18c above the inside figure of Wednesday, making a fluctuation of around 38c for the week on all deliveries. Trade in the May was light, and it gained ½c on the July for the day, due partly to the limited arrivals, 45 cars, in the main the result of the heavy rain. Primary receipts were smaller than the previous week and last year, but local arrivals of 2,023,000 bu were 1,200,000 bu in excess of shipments.

While planting will undoubtedly be considerably delayed by the rain in the more northern sections of the belt, there is still plenty of time to put in a large acreage. Sample values were 1@3c higher, with the close at the best figures of the week and about the highest on the crop. Eastern demand fell off materially, with a total of 25,000 bu for the day. Deliveries were 38,000 bu on May contracts.

Light Trade in Oats.

Bulk of the trade in oats was of a local character, with fluctuations a reflection of those in corn. Wet weather was also a factor, and there was some buying of September that looked like for country account, as crop prospects are none too favorable in some sections, due to the persistent rains and lack of sunshine. Closing trades were within ⅛c of the top, with May 70⅞c, July 72⅜c, and September 70⅝c. There was no change in the May-July spread.

Eastern demand for the cash grain fell off as rapidly as it picked up the previous day, and sales were only 45,000 bu. Sample values were 1@1½c higher. Omaha, however, reported a good demand. Receipts 54 cars. Local receipts for the week of 1,672,000 bu were 575,000 bu in excess of shipments. Last year receipts were 2,917,000 bu and shipments 2,412,000 bu.

Rye Market Firmer.

Rye was dull, but firmer, with light offerings and a fair demand. Spot was ½@1c higher, with a sale of No. 2 at $1.72. Futures were unchanged to 1c higher. Deliveries on May contracts 1,000 bu. Receipts 24 cars. Milwaukee was 1@1½c higher and Minneapolis ¼@⅝c higher.

Offerings of barley were not large, but weather conditions were unfavorable for judging the quality of the grain and prices were unchanged with sales at $1.10@1.22. Receipts, 22 cars. Milwaukee was unchanged to 1c higher and Minneapolis unchanged.

Timothy seed unchanged. Country lots, $8.00@11.00 per 100 lbs. Toledo, 5c lower to 2½c higher; September, $5.95; October, $5.77½ per bu of 45 lbs. Clover seed unchanged. Country lots, $25.00@38.00 per 100 lbs. Toledo, 50c higher to 15c lower; cash, $26.50; October, $19.75 per bu of 60 lbs.

Provision Market Higher.

Higher hogs and corn, combined with light offerings most of the time, made a stronger market with fair gains, pork finishing 10@15c, lard 12½@15c, and short ribs 15c higher for the day. Trading was not large and the feeling uneasy, there being little outside speculative interest. Shipments of lard and meats for the week were 27,363,000 lbs, against 27,275,000 lbs the previous and 20,315,000 lbs last year, the gain being largely in lard for the week. High prices checked buying by exporters, although a good business has been on during the week. Selling of lard by some of the largest buyers of late was a feature. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Corn market is so nervous that a majority of the big local operators are letting it alone. They say it is too fast a market for them to try to guess and it is too dangerous to have extended lines on either side. A fluctuation of nearly 40c for the week is something unknown to the corn trade. Surroundings are regarded by the bears as favorable for a break in the price should the weather conditions of a change for the better be verified the coming week. It is a good deal of a two sided market, with neither bulls nor the bears having a decided advantage.

Sentiment in oats is divided. Some of the larger operators are disposed to sell on the bulges. They do not take the reports of reduced area seriously, as the acreage last year of 44,400,000 was the largest known and a 10 per cent reduction would leave 40,000,000 acres, while the five year average from 1912-'16 was 39,456,000. Those who are friendly to the buying side argue that oats put in the ground when it is exceedingly wet do not grow well, but there have been years when oats seeded under conditions equal to the present have made a good crop. A point made by an advocate of purchases of oats is that they are a dollar under the price of corn.

Corn receipts at Chicago last week were the largest of the season, being 2,023,000 bu, or 445,000 bu over the previous week and 158,000 bu in excess of last year. Nearly one-third of the corn came over the Illinois Central, showing that it came largely from Illinois. The Wabash had one-half that of the Illinois Central. Total arrivals of all grains were 4,771,000 bu, or 18 per cent increase for the week, but 7 per cent short of last year and 12 per cent over the five year average. Oat receipts were 1,245,000 bu short of last year, while wheat increased 272,000 bu.

Barley interests have decided to recommend a change in the contract grade and in the method of grading and trading, favoring that in force in Minneapolis. They had a meeting Friday, and will ask the Board of Trade directors to make No. 2 the contract grade, with No. 1 deliverable at contract price and No. 3 at 5c discount. This will put the Chicago barley market on the same level with Minneapolis and encourage spreading between the two markets.

Argentine corn was offered in New York yesterday, shipment by July 15, at 20c under Chicago September.

Shipments of 822,000 bu of barley were made by the Grain corporation from Chicago last week by lake to Buffalo. Milling interests shipped 561,000 bu wheat to Buffalo and there were 75,000 bu corn shipped to Canadian points. There were cancellations of 65,600 bu of barley in public houses Friday.

Board of Trade memberships sold yesterday at $8,750 and $8,875 net to the buyer, the latter being the highest on record to date and was made by A. V. Booth.

Julius Barnes, president of the Food Administration Grain corporation, will talk to Board of Trade members Tuesday, May 6, from 12:10 to 12:30. The board will recess during that period.

Weekly forecast was for generally fair weather throughout the belt, following local rains in the region of the great lakes Monday, with temperatures below normal. Some frost is expected.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

Milling demand for cash wheat here and in outside markets was somewhat better, with sales of around 10,000 bu at Chicago. A car of fancy No. 2 red sold at 3½c advance, while No. 2 northern was up 4c. A car of smutty No. 1 red at $2.75 was 49c over the basic. Minneapolis was about unchanged, while hard winter at Kansas City was up 1@3c and red at St. Louis 3c. At Omaha the market was stronger, with No. 3 hard sold at $2.65, No. 1 northern at $2.72@2.75, and No. 2 northern at $2.70. Receipts here 5 cars.

Demand for cash corn was less urgent, but receipts were small, due to the heavy rains, and prices advanced 1@3c, with No. 2 grades May to ½c over, No. 3 at May to ½c under, and the No. 4 grades at 2½c under the May. Offerings in outside markets were light. St. Louis advanced 2@4c, Kansas City 1@2c, Omaha 3@5c, Peoria 4@5c, and Milwaukee 4c.

Offerings of oats were small in all markets and premiums here were well maintained, with standards at 1½c over the May and No. 3 white ½@1c over. Sales showed 1@1½c advance. St. Louis was up ½c, Kansas City 1c, Omaha ½@1c, and Peoria and Milwaukee 1½c. Cash grain prices in leading markets follow:

COTTON TRADE NEWS

NEW YORK, May 3.—Favorable weather over the cotton belt, the absence of Liverpool cables, and smaller estimates of the reduction in acreage by New Orleans interests made a rather bearish feeling in today's cotton market. This created week end profit taking and lowered values, but the finish was at losses of only 7 to 12 points.

Latest estimates on acreage are for a reduction of 11.7 to 12 per cent. Despite the weakness there is a disposition among traders to buy the distant deliveries on the breaks, as they are regarded as selling at too great a discount; at the same time the bulk of the losses for the day were in those deliveries. Prices follow:

Shorn stock at $2.00@3.00 discount.

With only 4,000 hogs received Saturday, the market ruled 10@25c higher than previous day, putting the price level on the highest basis since Monday. It was largely a local demand and although the close was strong about 4,000 were carried over at the close, holders anticipating a short supply and a better market Monday.

Top hogs at $20.75, being 15c above high point of previous day. Average price for the day at $20.50 was 15c higher than Friday, comparing with $20.83 previous Saturday, $17.43 a year ago, and $15.64 two years ago. Week's average price figured $20.45, against $20.80 the week previous, when the average was highest on record, $17.35 a year ago, and $15.75 two years ago.

Estimated average weight of hogs for the week at 232 pounds equal the previous week, being as heavy as any week since February, comparing with 241 a year ago and 217 lbs two years ago. Eleven markets received 34,000 hogs, against 40,000 the previous Saturday and 42,000 a year ago.

With only 1,000 cattle received and part of them direct there was little to the market, prices being nominally steady.

Quality of cattle during the week was very plain. One load sold at $20.00 at the start, but comparatively few went above $18.00. Average price of steers at $15.70 was 10c below previous week, but 30c higher than a year ago, which was a record to that time.

Sheep house receipts totaled around 2,000, but packers had about half of this number forwarded from other markets. Loads offered for sale went at unchanged prices. Four loads of shorn Idaho wethers averaging around 109 lbs which sold at $13.50 formed bulk of market stock.

Aged sheep averaged $13.80 for the week, being $1.30 lower than the previous week, being due to the common quality of offerings, as the general market, quality allowed, was little different for the week. Lambs averaged $17.40, against $17.80 previous week and $18.50 a year ago. Lamb quality was also poorer, with shorn lots more plentiful.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 18,000 cattle, 41,000 hogs, and 18,000 sheep, against 15,115 cattle, 42,247 hogs, and 10,436 sheep corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's estimated receipts, 56,000 cattle, 140,000 hogs, and 64,000 sheep.

WABASH REPORT SHOWS LOSS IN GROSS EARNINGS

New York, May 3.—The report of the Wabash railway for 1918, which has just been issued, shows a gross income of $6,130,511, compared with gross in 1917 amounting to $10,846,399, while total deductions from gross decreased to $3,495,266 from $6,619,294 in the preceding year. Net income for the year was $2,635,285, as compared with $4,227,105 in 1917.

The foregoing income figures were based on the average net railway operating income in the three year test period ending with June 30, 1917, which was $5,867,269. Because the road was in the hands of receivers during the first sixteen months of the test period the company has asked for an increase in standard return.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Cotton good markets today were quieter with prices firm. Yarns were in better demand. Raw silk was firm. Burlaps were firm with business larger. Linens were scarce and high. Foreign trade prospects were better.

NATIONAL DEBT ESTIMATED AT $24,824,345,000

Washington, D. C., May 3.—The public debt of the United States government was reported today by the treasury as $24,824,345,000.

Most of this represents Liberty bonds of the first, second, third, and fourth issues, but the Victory Liberty loan is not included to any great extent. The addition of the Victory loan bonds will be largely counterbalanced by redemption of outstanding certificates of indebtedness. No deduction is made for the $8,852,000,000 loaned to foreign governments. Consequently the net debt would be approximately [illegible]000,000,000.

The treasury plans to issue other bonds later this year and next year to meet the fag ends of war expenses, but in the aggregate these are not expected to amount to more than $5,000,000,000, so that the gross public debt of the United States is expected by treasury officials to be in the neighborhood of $30,000,000,000 when the period of war financing ends.

Either a Help Or a Dead Drag

YOUR stationery can pull new business and retain old customers—or fail to. It rests wholly with you whether your letterhead, invoice, check, etc., represents you and your business, what you stand for and what your ideals are, adequately and in the best possible taste.

It is partly a matter of paying enough—but more so a matter of finding the right concern to produce such stationery. Our work won a medal at the London Exhibition of 1914. May we serve you?

LOCAL FEDERAL RESERVE BANK'S LOANS EXPANDED

Chicago Members, However, Decrease Obligations During Week.

The weekly statement of the local federal reserve bank shows a further increase in the amount of bills rediscounted for other federal reserve institutions. The expansion last week was $9,277,300. There was also a considerable gain the previous week, bringing the total now to above $60,000,000. A few months ago this item was a negligible one.

Meanwhile borrowings of member banks in the district are moderately steady, though last week there was an increase of $2,118,595. Bills bought in the open market increased $1,749,414. There was a fairly large expansion in notes, or money, issued, the gain being $3,388,085. Government deposits increased $12,309,150.

Chicago Banks Not Concerned.

Chicago banks, the larger ones, have been reporting decreases in their obligations at the bank, so that a good part of the enlargements of discounts comes apparently from other members in the district. Comparative figures follow:

Big Expansion in Loans.

The New York bank statement showed a large expansion in loans, over $117,000,000. This was one of the largest noted in weeks. The total loan account has crossed the $5,000,000,000 mark by $20,632,000. Loans as a whole exceed total deposits by $935,142,000.

There was considerable decrease in reserve, $5,298,000, which, with a gain of $3,445,000 in deposits, caused the excess reserve to decrease $8,743,720 and bring it down to $36,744,180.

The treasury, however, increased its deposits with the banks $89,624,000. The money was of some benefit in the call money market, which earlier in the week displayed a firmer tone, advancing to 6 per cent, though the ruling rate on Friday, the day on which loans are made to carry over, was 5½ per cent.

Corporate financing in April was comparatively light. The railroads issued a total in bonds and notes of but $3,285,000. Industrial concerns put out $11,000,000 in bonds and notes and $24,400,000 in stocks. The big stock item was $15,000,000 of preferred issued by the Endicott-Johnson corporation. Public utilities put out $8,159,000 of bonds and notes, but no stocks.

For the month the total was $48,244,000, about 10 per cent of which was for the purpose of retiring maturing securities.

TALK OF THE STREET

Business on the New York curb has become so large that specialists are refusing to be responsible for open orders. Some of the more conservative houses are calling attention to the "wild" speculation in new and untried issues. There appears, however, to be public avidity for anything offered, and so long as this frame of mind exists the worthless stocks will advance with the good ones.

Some of the purely speculative interests in the street are reported to be switching their commitments from oil securities to other features. Certainly the enthusiasm for oil stocks has continued for a considerable period, and so far as statistics furnish a reason for buying it still exists. High prices continue for both crude and gasoline. An occasional reduction is announced in heavy crude petroleum, but such reductions are not general, but appear to be made to meet some specific situation. With all the new oil findings in Texas there is no question of overproduction.

Some reasons that on their face appeal to the public to buy railroad shares are developed. Among them is the crop outlook. Also the coming session of congress is expected to provide for deficits caused by government operation and to take measures looking toward the return of the properties. Based on current showings, however, there is not much to induce speculation.

The copper shares are beginning to show a firm undertone, though trade reports do not indicate an increase in business. The longer, however, stagnation lasts the nearer comes the time when activity will be resumed.

PROFIT TAKING FAILS TO SLOW PACE OF STOCKS

New Buyers Eager to Take All Shares Offered.

The New York Times

New York, May 3.—[Special.]—The trading pace in stocks slackened not at all in today's short session, and despite heavy outpourings of profit taking sales further progress forward was made by specialties and a number of the standard shares.

Considering the incentive many speculators had to realize their profits, the day's business in point of price movements was exceptional. All week the prophets of reaction had been issuing their warnings, and, naturally, the advice to corral paper profits was accepted most generously as the week end approached.

The trend of the market showed, however, that there were plenty of new buyers ready to take the offerings of the retiring traders. Confidence in the advance revealed no weak points, and the trading element had to support the more cheerful reports from manufacturing and distributing trade lines than had appeared before since the armistice was signed.

Steel Stock Watched.

The markets enter the new week with the possibility of learning in a few days something of the early future of the steel market. The producers are expected to consult with representatives of the railroad administration over prices, and out of the conference should come a definite development. Whether it will entail a practical semi-regulation of quotations or a complete reversion to an "open" market, no one may say.

Sentiment in the street fails to reflect any sharp division of opinion between the two methods for enlivening the demand; what the street hopes for is a decision potent for freeing the steel market from its inertia, whether controlled prices are involved or not.

Other Lines Involved.

As the business situation stands now textile, lumber, leather, and other lines are moving forward, while the steel industry, usually respected as one of the foremost leaders, is hanging back. The unshackling of steel and the expansion of domestic buying before the peace treaty is signed are matters devoutly wished for by finance and industry, as a broad demand at home would be likely to have a profound sentimental effect on the demand from abroad.

United Cigar Stores Co. Increases Stock $35,000,000

Trenton, N. J., May 3.—The United Cigars Stores Company of America filed with the secretary of state here today an increase of capital stock from $30,000,000 to $65,000,000. Of the new stock $5,000,000 is 7 per cent cumulative preferred and $30,000,000 common.

CHICAGO STOCK TRANSACTIONS

The packing house shares were about steady, with a considerable volume of trading. There was not new buying sufficient to inject enthusiasm in the list. Cudahy common made the best price record, advancing 2 points to 123.

Sears-Roebuck was up better than a point on limited buying, while Commonwealth Edison declined 1 point. Pneumatic Tool was in a little better tone, as was Union Carbide, which closed at 70. Mitchell Motor stock advanced to 40, presumably on the belief that the worst is over for the company and that it is now in a position to profit by the general automobile situation.

In the bond department Connecting Railways 5s made an advance of ½ to 42. The announcement that the company is earning its interest may be accepted as authoritative, and so far as friends of the company can see the turn that has taken place in earnings suggests no further difficulty about interest.

And One Turned to Gold

HE was baptised there. We older ones of the congregation remember how he shrugged his tiny shoulders and smiled up at the minister when the drops of water trickled from the downy head to his baby nose. The gold star's for Jim—and for those of us who loved him well, there's a gold star in our hearts for him.

The blue ones? Bless your soul, they're half of them back and the rest of them coming soon. For every one of those blue stars we'll give thanks forever.

What are the blue stars worth? They're worth smiles of solid contentment, they're worth all the heart-aches and tears that never happened, they're worth a world of thankfulness.

What are they worth in money? That could never be estimated.

But we're lending our dollars to pay the bills that kept the blue stars from turning to gold, with thankfulness in our hearts. We're willing to make any money sacrifices to pay, in a small way, for the lives saved by the early ending of the war.

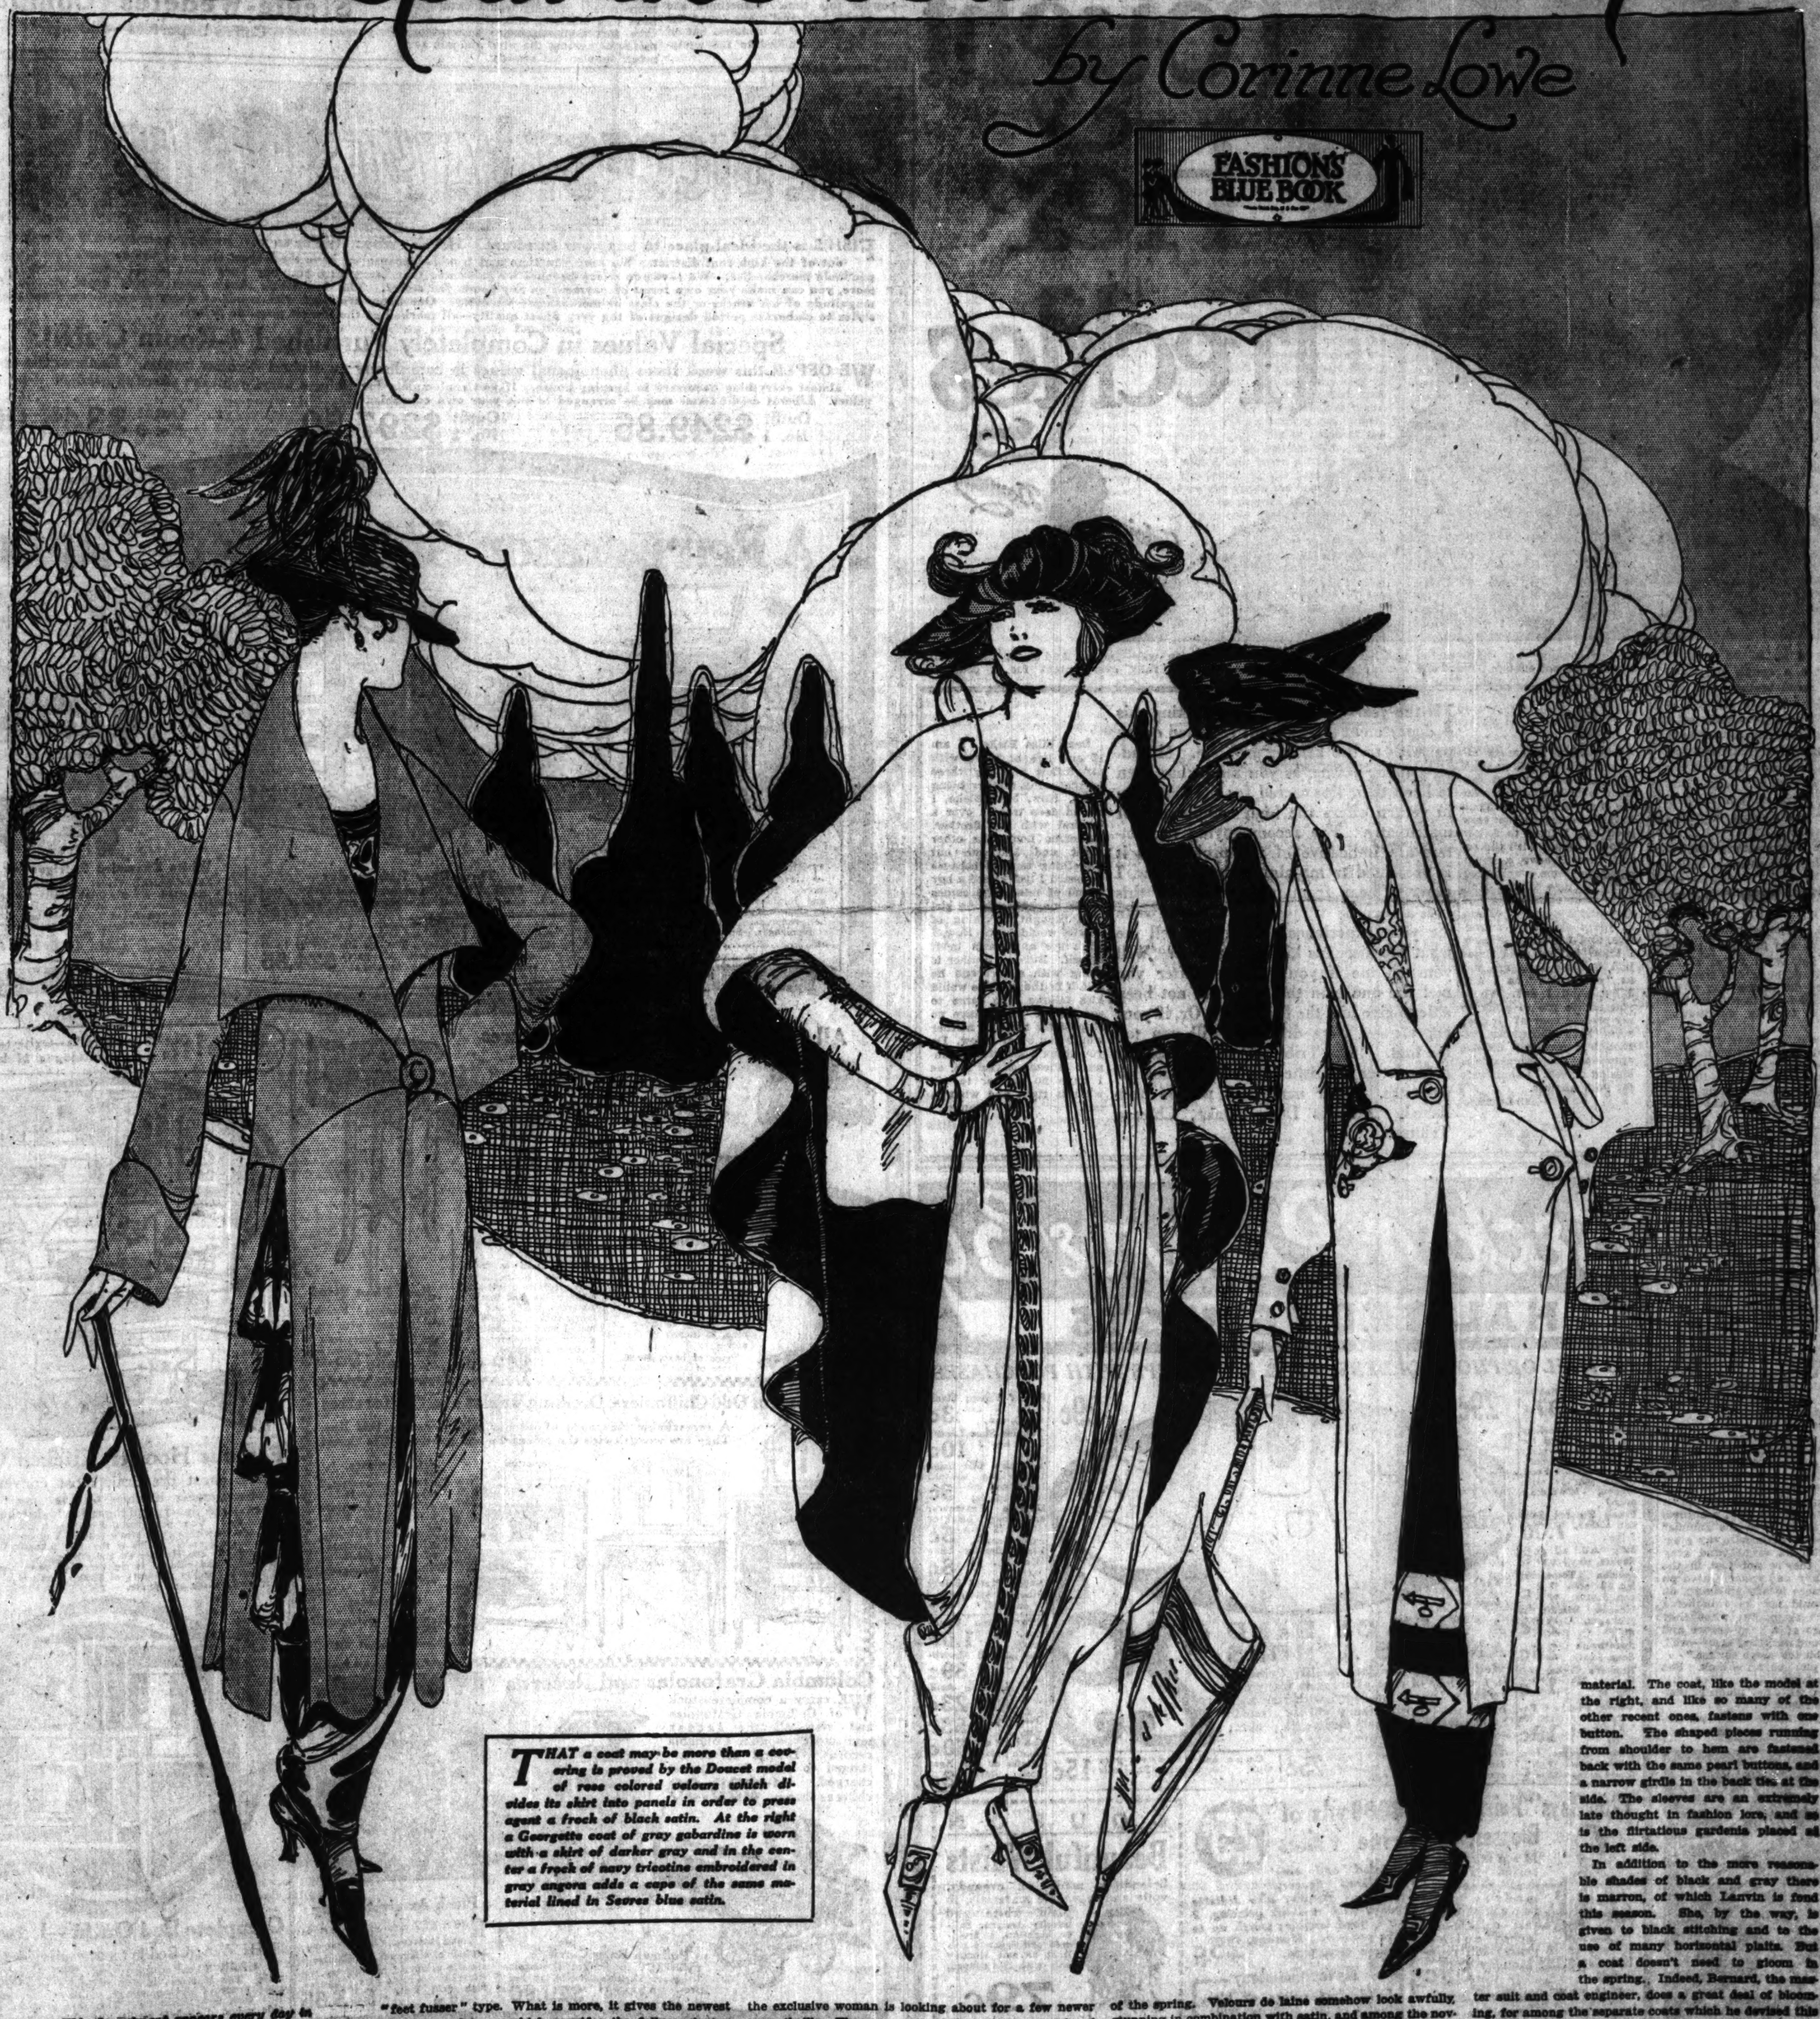
PART 6

The Separate Coat Vs. the Cape

by Corinne Lowe

FASHIONS' BLUE BOOK



THAT a coat may be more than a covering is proved by the Doucet model of rose colored velours which divides its skirt into panels in order to press agent a frock of black satin. At the right a Georgette coat of gray gabardine is worn with a skirt of darker gray and in the center a frock of navy tricotine embroidered in gray angora adds a cape of the same material lined in Sevres blue satin.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—In the middle of the page we are showing one of the smartest of the new cape dresses. It was born to blush—not unseen, but most spectacularly—in the shaded groves of a Fifth avenue specialty shop, and it was afterwards selected by one of the best dressed women in New York.

This frock is of navy tricotine, and its trimming is embroidery of gray angora wool. Made on long, slender lines, the skirt is, of course, what one man calls the "feet fusser" type. What is more, it gives the newest silhouette—the one which provides the fullness just a little below the knees.

The cape which goes with this is one of those operatic tenor models of cloak which make the most prosaic and housebound sister of us feel as if she were ready for all the adventures of the three musketeers. This is partially lined in satin of Sevres blue, and the high, rolling collar is a feature you must not overlook.

Of course the practical cape, the one that everybody is wearing, is the navy blue engineered. So heavy have rolled the fashion seas about this garment, however, that the exclusive woman is looking about for a few newer cape thrills. These are provided in lovely models of silk jersey, and here, by the way, the most popular shades seem to be gray, taupe, or beige.

We are showing at the left of this page a Doucet model of rose colored velours de laine with a number of new features. One of these is the long waist line curving up to the front, finished with deep revers, and ending in a skirt which is divided into panels. These panels provide artful glimpses of a black satin frock.

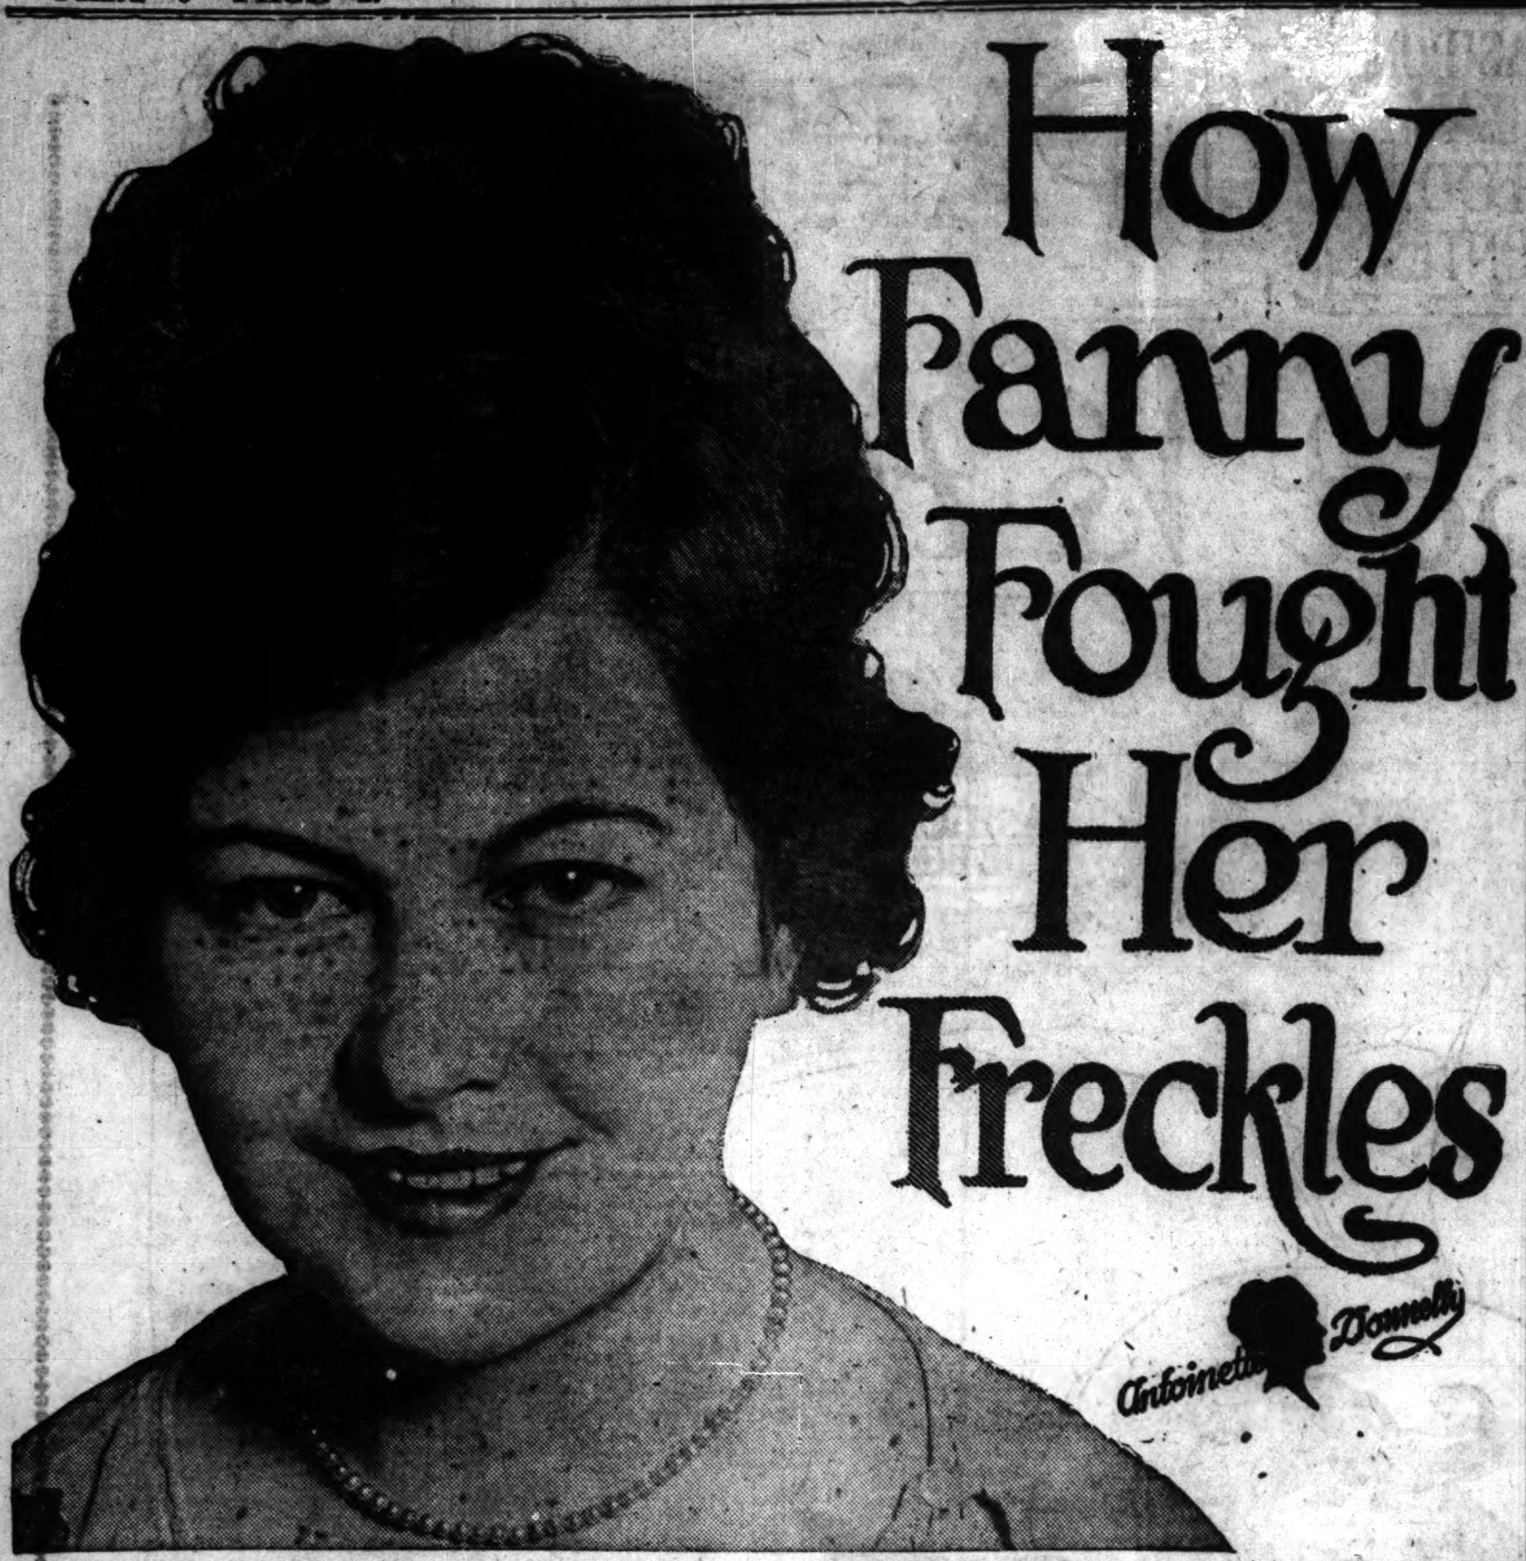
This coat is of velours de laine, which competes with satin and gaberdine in being the favorite coat material of the spring. Velours de laine somehow look awfully stunning in combination with satin, and among the novelties of the season are those French frocks which unite satin skirt with cassock of velours de laine in contrasting tint.

Gaberdine is, of course, always a favorite material for the separate coat. Gray gaberdine is especially liked, and Beer, whose separate coats are always excellent, makes practically all of his models of either gray or black. The coat which we are showing at the right is a Georgette design of gray gaberdine, and it is worn with a skirt of darker gray, trimmed with bands of the coat material. The coat, like the model at the right, and like so many of the other recent ones, fastens with one button. The shaped pieces running from shoulder to hem are fastened back with the same pearl buttons, and a narrow girdle in the back ties at the side. The sleeves are an extremely late thought in fashion lore, and so is the flirtatious gardenia placed at the left side.

In addition to the more reasonable shades of black and gray there is marron, of which Lanvin is fond this season. She, by the way, is given to black stitching and to the use of many horizontal plaits. But a coat doesn't need to gloom in the spring. Indeed, Bernard, the master suit and coat engineer, does a great deal of blooming, for among the separate coats which he devised this year we find Parma violet and Sevres blue and old rose. He makes most of his coats of napped serge or of velours de laine, and trims them most frequently with stitching or with fringe. One of his cutest ways of ragtiming a collar is to make it of black patent leather and stitch with white.

As a last word, let us say that capes are a body of fashion almost entirely surrounded by woman. Not quite, however. For the separate coat has served us too faithfully ever to quite lose its place in our [illegible].

How Fanny Fought Her Freckles



Antoinette Donnelly

FANNY grew up in the country, along with a couple of young freckled faced brothers and sisters. She took her freckles in the same spirit as she took the color of her eyes and the shape of her nose. And they bothered her not. She had no more of an allotment than had her brothers and sisters, and consequently there was no wrangling in the family about any one member cornering the freckle mart.

The modern farmerette protective measures against the so-called beauty destroying possibilities of life on the farm were city fiction to Fanny, fiction she didn't bother her head with. So she went unsunbonneted, with arms and hands and face bare to the operations of Sol, Wind & Co., wholesale dealers in tan, burn, and freckles. And what they did in the way of attention would lead one to suspect that she was their favorite distributing point.

But, as was said, Fanny just took them for granted and went on mowing her hay or, less figuratively speaking, picking her strawberries, blissfully unconscious of a new suitor lurking (since new suitors must lurk) in the background.

An opera singer, so it is told by Fanny's neighbors, was riding joyously by, as opera singers are supposed always to ride and do when the tide rides with them, when fate provided for Fanny that the songbird's car should stub its rubber toe out in front of Fanny's father's farmhouse. Fanny, happy though freckled, was singing lustily. Least the neighbors might call it lustily, but the songbird stopped and listened while the chauffeur went a-tinkering and a-mending of the car. And she said: "That girl has a voice."

Well, the consequence was that Fanny found a friend. And, Fanny being willing, she went to the city, carrying along with her freckles and her tan and her sunburn a wholesome ambition to get on. And get on she did. With the result that in two years' time she was getting concert engagements and making good at them.

As is the way of feminine progress, Fanny began to take more notice of her looks. Appearance being 50 per cent of stage genius at least and mostly more, naturally there came a time when Fanny's freckles were being looked into and the cause and effect being investigated. As Fanny argued: "They were all right in the summer time when I wore them with my ginghams, but with an orchid and gray chiffon gown they're not just in the picture. If they had concentrated on my face or, more locally speaking, on my nose, I would not have bothered trying to rout them, but when they take advantage of a good nature and spread over your neck and arms—well, that's just a bit too much for me."

So Fanny planned an attack. She tried some advertised remedies just willy nilly and with not much persistency, and less result.

With a bigger future and more formal evening gowns ahead of her she realized gradually that half-hearted measures were not enough. Some one told her the lemon juice and glycerin remedy was a staple old remedy. It was—and is. And she applied it faithfully every night for a couple of months. It blotted out the lighter freckles, but the big chocolate brown 'uns remained and loomed larger as a consequence.

Some one told her she could touch the big ones with carbolic acid and remove them, but she decided against that treatment for fear they would take part of her along into the freckle limbo. There is some virtue to this treatment, but it takes a steady hand to apply the remedy. But the day of reckoning finally came for the "stickers" when she fell upon this paste, known as Nunci's paste, a good old remedy with medical indorsement. And it proved the thing that routed them successfully. This is it: Oxychloride of bismuth, 1 drachm; calomel, one-sixth grain; peroxide of hydrogen, one drachm; lanolin and vaseline, four ounces each.

In the meantime Fanny, when the winds blew warm and freck-ily, prepared herself with a dash of cold cream rubbed gently into her face, surplus cream wiped off, and then another dash—powder this time. Sometimes she wore a veil, but mostly she found the cream a protector. A brimmed hat on sunny days was added to the equipment.

The skin of Fanny's neck was a "mean skin," according to Fanny's own description. If she were in the wind or sun ten minutes it got red and tan. In fact, Fanny felt she was heir to all the ills that neck and face and arms make possible.

So finally Fanny decided what protective measure was good for her face was good for her neck, and so she creamed the neck with a good cold cream again, wiped off the surplus stuff, and powdered with a good rice powder. Sometimes it was necessary to wear a bit of tulle about her neck to protect the dress where it cut that high, but a bit of tulle is becoming to any neck, and it served a double purpose with Fanny in this case.

Of course, Fanny didn't get rid of her freckles overnight. It took months to accomplish her present unblemished state of skin. But, of course, she had a long standing crop to make warfare on.

Another girl whose freckles were of more recent growing would naturally have less difficulty and, if she would take just common sense preventive measures against the wind and sun so much simpler the remedy.

IN the years I have been conducting this department the most oft repeated query pertains to the kissing problem. My advice to the young, as you know, has been to keep their lips sacred for the man who in return offers the high compliment of matrimony. The accompanying two letters are indicative of the problem as it is presented to me almost daily. Now, I want to hear from my readers on this ever-absorbing subject. Will you write me your experience? Will you tell me what promiscuous kissing cost you? Will you tell me if you regretted after you met the one man that you had not been able to give him the first kiss? Or, if your experiences were different, will you tell me that. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every letter published on your kissing experience. Your name will not be published. Address Doris Blake, Chicago Tribune.

Dear Miss Blake: I always read your column, and have noted what you say about a girl's kissing a man she is not engaged to. Your advice seemed to me very good and I tried to follow it to the letter, with the result that I have a great many lonesome evenings at home because fellows don't enjoy beauing round a girl they call a "prude." I am 21 years old, fairly attractive, and I see lots of girls I know having good times just because they are not as "squeamish" as I am. What shall I do? Would you advise me to stick to my present course? It does seem hard sometimes, although I certainly do not approve of promiscuous kissing myself. I shall wait for your answer.

LUCIE.

Dear Miss Blake: I am 17 and live at home with my father and my three brothers, my mother being dead. Now, Miss Blake, I am in deep trouble over a quarrel with my brother. He came home the other night and laid me out something terrible because he heard I had kissed a boy friend of mine who comes to see me. He said no girl who thought anything of herself would do it. Now, I don't see any harm in it myself. But my brother is going with a girl and he said if he thought she would kiss fellows who came to see her he would have no respect for her and neither would any other fellow. Do you think I am such a sinner? Please advise me, as I have no mother to tell what is right and what is not.

MERINGUES WITH FRUITS.

A MERINGUE is really a baked icing. The icing so baked may be the uncooked, or what is more technically called the royal icing, or it may be the cooked icing. Meringues or icings shaped and cooked, if well dried, keep well in a box away from any moisture, and are accessible for a short notice dessert in which are combined the small fruits and whipped cream.

The combination of strawberries, meringues, and whipped cream is more delicious, more delicate, more wholesome, and more sightly than strawberry shortcake. A large following for the large meringue called a kiss torte, filled and garnished with strawberries and whipped cream, was gained last year when it was described in this column. This is a large, six egg meringue baked in a spring mold, which is a round baking tin with higher sides than a layer cake tin, which sides may be loosened with a spring and removed entirely from the bottom. A meringue of this sort is harder to dry out than smaller ones and so is not a good one to begin with if inexperienced in baking such sweets.

It is better to start with two egg whites and one-half cup of confectioner's sugar. When making a royal icing take a little of it when it is whipped to the right stage and bake it for a meringue as an experiment, or try baking it at different stages. Another experiment of the same sort is to take a half of a cooked icing and make small meringue shells of it, baking them in the oven as it has cooled after the cake baking. The half should be taken just short of the marshmallow stage of the icing.

The reason why the making of meringues might be a good way to learn cake making is that a meringue is a flat failure if the whipping of the egg, and then of the egg and sugar, is not sufficient and to the right stage, while a cake may be passable when it has been put together rather poorly. Also the getting of experience of the sort required in baking or drying meringues ought to be most worth while to the woman who would ultimately make the finest sorts of cakes.

We may put a tiny pinch of salt in our egg whites, which are cool and fit for whipping to a stiff snow—the two. The test as we all know of stiffly beaten dry egg white is that it will point as you lift the whisk or beater out of it. This test is also an accurate one for the mass of egg white and sugar beaten to the meringue stage.

Some recipes direct that two-thirds of the sugar used be whipped in and the rest folded in. If this is done in such a way that the point stage is farther and farther departed from a good deal of patient beating will finally be necessary to bring it up to that stage. The reason is that the water of the egg dissolves the sugar, and the mass is too sirupy. If we should try to bake it at that stage each meringue would leak a white sirup, as meringues often do when they are taken from the oven too soon. Two things, then, may cause that undesirable behavior.

The best way it seems to me, and the one requiring the least of patience, is to first whip the eggs to a stiff snow, and then add a little sifted confectioner's sugar at a time, beating after each addition until the mass will point, before adding more. If this is done, each bit of sugar sifted over the mass and folded in and then whipped, the original egg mass is not broken or wet down for more than a second or so. There will then be a larger mass and there will not be necessitated that discouragingly long beating at the end, which we must do if the sugar put in is hardly more than dissolved, before more is added. Another test of the mass besides the fact that it points, is that it may be cut with a knife.

The work is as simple and easy as possible if we will but take heed of these small points. It will always seems complicated and hard to women who will not master these details. Such women are likely to buy meringue shells at ten times what it would cost to make them.

The important thing in getting icing, or a meringue mass, or mashed potato, out in nice shapes from a pastry bag or cone, is to keep the point down close to whatever the material is being pressed out on. The moment you hold a point high you get a rope or ribbon which will squirm unless well controlled, as in border work, in which case the learning to control is like learning to write or draw nice lines.

For rose shapes or round cakes the necessary thing is to hold the point low and keep gently pressing until enough has come out to make a cake of desired size. If a peak is desired a quick twist up, but not too quick, will give that. Too slow movement in breaking the rope will stretch out the end till it will have to drop.

A cooked icing when baked is called an Italian meringue. This is more difficult to put through a point and work with it must be much faster. Also, in beating it, you may get it to the marshmallow stage before you know it. At this point all is not lost. Simply set the bowl over hot water, and as the sugar begins to melt beat it until it is of the right smoothness. The Italian meringues are heavier and rockier than the plain ones.

Another difficulty in handling this preparation with a somewhat closed point, like those for flowers, is that it will not come out when you are ready. Therefore a precaution to take when handling this is to have a saucepan of hot water on the stove. Dip the point into this quickly and the sugar will commence to flow at once, wipe this off and press out the material on the baking tin.

Two pairs of hands are far better than one in filling a pastry bag, but one can do the work. It is essential that the material be massed compactly toward the point. In pressing it the guiding left hand must merely guide. If it requires much pressing that hand instinctively helps and a twist may be made just over the tin point so that the mass above is entirely shut off.

The old directions for baking meringues on strips of wet paper tacked on a board made the work seem more exacting in that one bit of the preparation than it need be. I have found that a china plate which is not injured in a cool oven wet off with cold water will do satisfactory work; also the bottom of an inverted aluminium baking tin is all right.

The baking must be about as slow as possible. The oven really needs to be cooler than we can make some ovens heated by gas, for when the fire is turned desirably low the front may go out. In that case we must have more fire and the oven door may be left open a little. The temperature which is good for drying fruit and vegetables is what is required, and, as in the case of these things, it may be raised at the end.

If one likes a light brown meringue, a fawn color instead of a dead white one, the drying process may be continued for three-quarters of an hour and then the fire increased for the last fifteen minutes of the required hour. If the meringues have not been flavored this browning gives flavor in the shape of a nice toasted taste.

When stiff enough, take from the oven, allow to cool, remove from surface, and if the forms are shells punch in the bottom and dry further on the top of the oven. A meringue with even a small wet mass inside will not keep well, but when the shells are to be used on the day made this need not be dried. Most people will like it all the better for being soft. The shells of the shops are so dry as to be chalky. Meringues that have the leastbit of chew to them are more like confectionery and need not be tough. Overbaking may make meringues tough.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

Banana Fritters.

Remove the skins from four firm bananas; cut them in halves lengthwise; cut halves in two pieces crosswise. Sprinkle with powdered sugar, one tablespoon of lemon juice, and a few grains of salt. Cover and let stand thirty minutes. Drain, dip in batter, and fry in deep hot fat, then drain on brown paper. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve with roast pork.

A batter for fritters is made as follows:

Sift together one cup of flour and one-fourth teaspoon of salt; add gradually two-thirds cup of milk, stirring constantly, then add the well beaten yolks of two eggs and one tablespoon of olive oil. Beat whites of two eggs until stiff, then cut and fold them into the mixture.

This batter may be used for bananas, apples, pears, peaches, and pineapple fritters.

Baked Bananas.

Arrange the required number of bananas in a shallow pan, cover and bake in oven until skins are dark, almost black; remove skins and serve hot, sprinkle with powdered sugar and a little lemon juice. Serve with rolled or standing rib roast of beef.

Cream Pie.

Cream four tablespoons of butter or other shortening, add gradually, while stirring constantly, one-half cup of sugar. Beat one egg until thick and lemon tinted; add to first mixture. Sift together one and one-half cups of flour, two and one-half teaspoons of baking powder, and a few grains of salt; add to mixture alternately with one-half cup of milk. Add one-fourth teaspoon each of lemon and vanilla extract. Beat thoroughly and turn into buttered and floured square layer cake pans, and bake fifteen minutes in a hot oven. Remove from pans and spread between with cream filling. Sprinkle top of pie with powdered sugar.

Frozen Chocolate.

Put one quart of full milk and two and one-half squares of unsweetened chocolate into a double boiler. When the milk has scalded and the chocolate has melted, add one and one-fourth cups of sugar, a few grains of salt, and one tablespoon of vanilla. Chill. Turn into a freezer, packed in ice and rock salt, using three measures of crushed ice to one of salt. Turn crank slowly at first to chill the mixture gradually, then increase the speed and continue turning until mixture is frozen.

The freezing process will be materially shortened if the ice is finely crushed. A heavy canvas bag and wooden maul are the best utensils for crushing the ice and is less "mussy." Serve the chocolate in coupé glasses with garnish of whipped cream sweetened and flavored delicately with vanilla set above. Sprinkle cream with a few finely chopped nut meats.

Cream Filling for Pie.

Sift together three times one-third cup of flour, one-half cup of sugar, and one-eighth teaspoon of salt. Then add two eggs slightly beaten, mix well, and pour on gradually one cup of scalded milk. Cook in double boiler fifteen minutes, stirring constantly until mixture thickens, afterwards occasionally. Remove from range and add one-fourth teaspoon each of lemon and vanilla. Use as directed.

For chocolate cream filling use recipe for cream filling, adding one square of unsweetened chocolate, melted over hot water, and three-fourths cup of sugar instead of one-half cup. Flavor with one-half teaspoon of vanilla in place of the combination of lemon and vanilla.

When chocolate filling is used between the layers of cake, cover the top with whipped cream, sweetened and flavored delicately with vanilla. This will prove a "time saving" dessert for the busy housewife. The cake may be baked the day before (Saturday when used for Sunday dinner), also the filling. The latter should be reheated over hot water, then cooled before using. It will then spread more evenly, as all such mixtures thicken as they stand. Of course, these mixtures are at their best when fresh made, put together at once, and then served as soon as cool.

Chocolate Popcorn Balls.

Put one and one-half cups of sugar into a sauce pan; add one-third cup of glucose and two-thirds cup of water; set over a slow fire and stir until sugar is melted. Wash down the sides of the sauce pan with a small brush dipped into cold water (this is to prevent sugar from crystallizing on sides of pan). Cover pan and let mixture boil three minutes. Remove cover and continue boiling without stirring to the hard ball degree (the mixture will become hard when a small portion is dropped into water). Add one-third cup of molasses and three tablespoons of butter, stirring constantly until it becomes brittle when tested in ice water; remove from fire and as soon as bubbling ceases, add three squares of unsweetened chocolate melted over hot water. Add one teaspoon of vanilla, stir until chocolate is well blended with the other ingredients. Pour over four quarts of fresh popped corn well salted but not buttered, mixing it evenly through the corn. Butter the hand and shape into small balls, pressing the mixture just enough to keep it in shape. Have both corn and bowl in which the mixing is done warm. Shake the fresh popped corn in a croquette basket and the unpopped kernels will fall through. Chopped pecan nut meats may be added if an "extra touch" is desired.

Stuffed Cabbage.

Finely shred one medium sized head of new cabbage. Season with salt and pepper. Butter a tube pudding mold and fill compactly with alternate layers of cabbage and ground lean veal or pork (there should be one and one-half pounds of meat) mixed with three eggs well beaten and seasoned with salt, pepper, and a few grains of nutmeg. Cover closely and steam four hours. Turn from mold on a hot serving platter, reserving the liquid that may be drained off. Surround mold with buttered new carrots and serve with a sauce made by browning two tablespoons of butter in a saucepan; add three tablespoons of flour mixed with one-half teaspoon of salt and one-eighth teaspoon of pepper and continue browning, stirring constantly, then pour on gradually the strained liquid; there should be one and one-half cups. Add one-half teaspoon of soup and sauce flavoring and stir until smooth. Serve in a hot sauce boat. The recipe will make six portions.

Boiled Corned Beef.

Select a piece of corned beef with a little extra fat; the fancy brisket is considered a good cut with a fair proportion of fat. If very salt, soak in cold water several hours, changing the water twice. If not very salt, simply wash it and cover with boiling water, bring to the boiling point, skim, reduce the heat, and simmer (closely covered) until meat will fall in shreds and liquor is well reduced. Let partially cool in the water in which it was cooked, then pack in an agate brick shaped bread pan, letting the long fibers run lengthwise of the pan. Mix in some of the fat that it may be well mottled. Cover meat with a thin board a trifle smaller than the inside of the pan and set a heavy weight above the board that the meat may be pressed into a compact loaf. When cold, thinly slice and surround with peeled tomatoes cut in halves crosswise and serve with cold horseradish sauce, placing a teaspoon of the sauce on each half of tomato.

To make the horseradish sauce, mix thoroughly one-fourth cup of fresh grated horseradish with one teaspoon of fine table vinegar, one-fourth teaspoon of salt, and a little black pepper. Then fold in one-fourth cup of triple cream beaten until stiff. Serve with cold boiled corned beef, ham, boiled fresh, pickled, or smoked tongue, sliced tomatoes, etc.

A FRIEND IN NEED

Sally Joy Brown

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Using Sachet Powder.

"Is there any way of using sachet powder except by putting it in silk bags or bags of some fancy material? I like to have my clothes delicately scented, yet to provide silk bags for all my things would be too much of a task, as I have little time for sewing, so I am looking for a better and a cheaper way. Rosa M."

Prepare a number of squares of tissue paper and inclose the powder in these. Fold them up neatly, fastening the ends with tiny pins, and lay among the articles you wish to perfume. When the odor evaporates, the useless papers may be thrown away and new ones take their place.

Cleaning Reed and Willow.

"I should like to know how to clean my reed and willow baskets. "Mrs. F. K."

Reed and willow baskets are best cleaned by rubbing with a stiff brush. If the basket is not waxed it can be scrubbed with soapy water, rinsed, and dried. Do not use as stiff a brush for raffia baskets.

Grateful to All.

"I do not want to seem ungrateful after all the pretty and useful things I received, but one package with a blue and white dress was so badly damaged it was impossible to make out the name, so I take this opportunity to express my gratitude to all who have been so kind to me. B. H."

Represents a Golf Girl.

"I think my request is rather odd, but would be pleased if some of your readers could help me. I am to represent a golf girl in our high school play, which is to be given some time in May. Has any one a golf outfit they would loan me for the occasion? I would take good care of it and return it immediately after the play. I am 20 years old and take 36 size. "G. K."

Campers Want a Tent.

"We are a few boys who are fond of camping, and cannot afford to buy a tent. If anybody has an old tent they don't use, will they please be so kind as to let us know? We are willing to pay express expenses or call for it personally. H. A. S."

I shall be pleased to give the address of this boy to any one wishing it.

Odds and Ends of Silk.

"I would appreciate it greatly if some readers would be kind enough to send me silk pieces—old silk blouses, petticoats, stockings, or any odds and ends. I am knitting table runners and I have no more pieces. I would also be much pleased to have any one send me old black cotton stockings. No matter how badly they are worn. I can use them, as I make these old fashioned braided rag rugs to sell, which helps me keep my little ones in shoes and stockings that cost so much these days. Mrs. N. A."

I want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy, and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be only too happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to "The Tribune," but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

There are sure to be pieces of silk left over from the spring dressmaking which could be used to good advantage by Mrs. A.

Shine on Silk.

"Would you suggest something I might do to remove the shine from my black silk dress? Frances J."

To remove shine from black silk, stretch the silk smoothly over an ironing board. Wrap a damp cloth over a hot iron and pass this slowly over the silk; be careful not to touch the goods, but hold the iron so close to the silk that the steam will reach it.

Enough to Fill a Book Shelf.

"In breaking up my home I find a good many books that cannot be kept. Possibly they might prove of use to some. The list comprises: "Plane and Solid Geometry," "Practical Lessons in French Grammar," "French Fairy Tales," "Le Grief Polonais," French first book, Greek first book, Greek grammar, Greek prose compositions, "Xenophon's Anabasis," "Authorship Truth Gospel," "Student's Life of St. Paul," and a dozen other similar books. "Mrs. M. H. R."

I advise early application. There will be many calls for a share in this generous donation.

Fittings for Boys' Club.

"I have been watching and reading your column since its beginning with increasing interest and appreciation. I think you are in a way of helping to relieve a distressing situation. In our little town of 300 we have some twenty or twenty-five boys whose only congregating or clubbing place is at one or the other of our two poolrooms, but it is the best the boys have. I organized for them last week a Boy Scout society and for want of clubroom have given them our upstairs to hold their meetings; but that isn't enough. They need good books to read, etc. Now, if you are persuaded that we are worthy and you know of any one who has discarded or second hand usable athletic material, in short, anything for boys, I would be only too glad to pay transportation charges for it. F. D. M."

It will be a pleasure to send the address to any one who can contribute something to the boys' club and help to provide clean, healthy amusement for them.

Strange Weddings Contest.

All at Once.

I attended a wedding of a young girl friend and it was a gorgeous affair. They had arranged a bell full of rose petals, and hung it above the bride and bridegroom. The opening was controlled by a black thread. The best man was supposed to pull the thread gently and the petals were to fall lighly upon the bride and bridegroom, during the ceremony. Everything went all right until it came time for the rose petals to fall. The best man pulled and pulled until every one began to notice him. Then he gave one hard pull and the whole mass of rose petals fell at once upon the couple. The best man was mortified beyond measure, while the rest of us enjoyed his mistake immensely. H. F.

No Honeymoon Trip.

I attended a wedding of a dear girl friend whose father was a well to do farmer. After the ceremony we girls crowded around the blushing bride and she was asked where they expected to go on their honeymoon trip. She replied, "We aren't going to take a trip, for the money we would spend will buy a nice cow." L. S.

Caught in the Register.

An incident at a recent wedding I attended was rather funny to all but the blushing bride. The bridegroom had entered at the chancel door and was waiting for her at the altar. And he had a long wait, for half way down the aisle the bride's heel caught in the register. After twisting and turning to no avail she was forced to kneel down and remove her pump. P. S.

Tell us about the strangest wedding you have attended—and the funniest. There's scarcely a wedding but has some humorous details. Tell your experience and that of friends. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on strange and humorous happenings at ceremonies. Manuscripts cannot be returned. Write on one side of the page. Address Strange Weddings Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

More Fun for the Guests.

The newlyweds had finally escaped from their friends after much rice throwing, etc., and were speeding on their way in a taxi. But alas! the bridegroom discovered that he had left every cent of his money behind and they had to go back for it, much to the merriment of the wedding guests, who had not yet departed. R. M. P.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes Most Women Can Have

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well Known Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women as well as men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep in the pink of condition. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

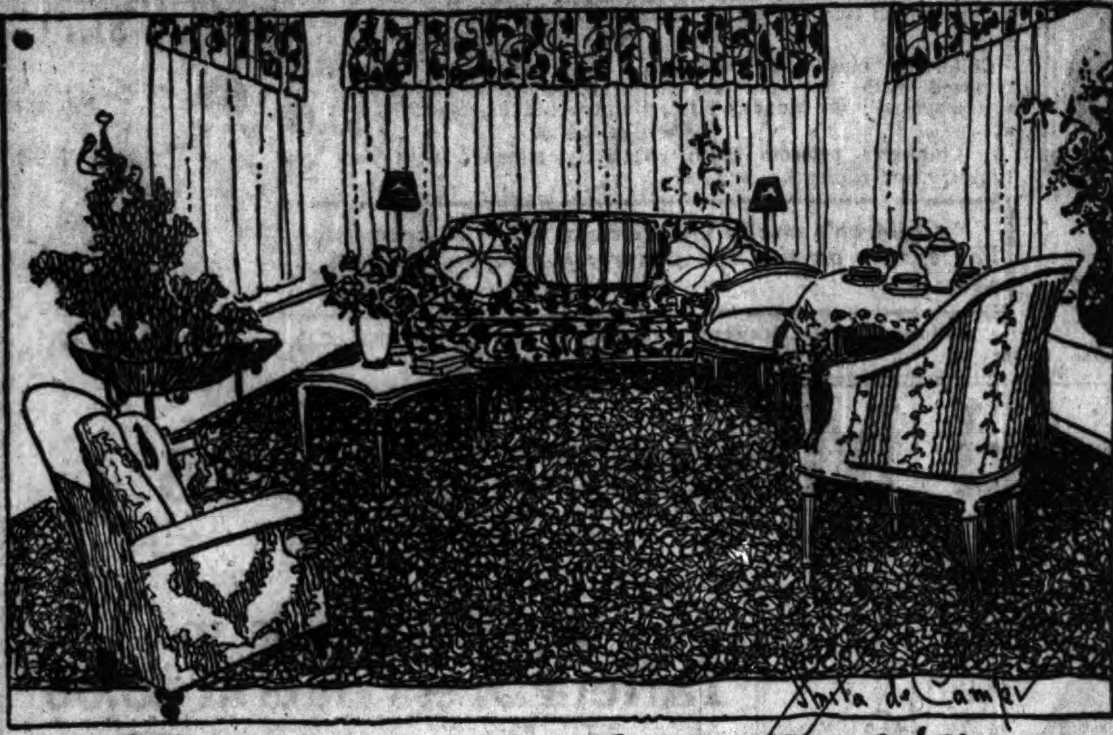
The HOME HARMONIOUS

By Anita de Campi



Continental Breakfast In Any Bright Corner

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

"WHY," asks the family cricket, "write about breakfast dishes and breakfast things when there's no such thing as a breakfast any more? I'd as soon read 'Jane Eyre' as to eat a brace of buckwheat cakes, and as for dallying with ham and eggs, country style, I fancy daily well I couldn't do it."

That is the point exactly.

Nobody wants to eat breakfast, or to look at breakfast, or to know particularly anything about breakfast. Therefore, one must be served a perfectly perfect collection of china ware and table linen, along with appropriate flat silver. One then goes through the ceremony of making oneself believe that a meal has been consumed. Not being bright or perky in the early chapters of the day, this bit of deceit can easily be achieved. Fool yourself as others fool you!

Well, well! What's to be done? For the mistress of the home, blessed with that precious relic of a past age—the well trained servant—the real joy is breakfast in bed. If the appointments of the tray are beautiful, the coffee clear, and the toast crisp, we allow as now the day will start off at a canter. There is so much to think of in the morning. The bright scintillations one might have delivered the night before! The resolutions of a new day as if it were a new life. The worries to be faced, or the worries at which one makes a face! Indeed, if we talked to ourselves the breakfast tray would have a-plenty to tell.

The breakfast room has become a reality, and that is rather a nice idea too. In houses, it should properly be on the bedroom floor. Almost any bright sunny corner will do, in case the architect has made no special arrangements for it. The continental notion of eating in almost any part of the house is thoroughly delightful, and many Americans are trying the scheme out with satisfaction. The tip-tilted table and the drop-leaf affair, together with the tea wagon, compose a mobillary caravan that will hold a fine feast. And as for breakfast—dear, ah me, these appointments are so lightly lifted and so altogether convenient, you can chase the sun beams around with them. It's nothing at all to up and move. Any pussy that doesn't like her corner can pussyfoot to another and take her chair and table with her.

Many a small alcove, apparently purposeless, useless, and without meaning, can be made into something worth while in the way of a breakfast room. With window curtains of white muslin, ruffled all about, and overhung with bright colored chintz, with window boxes of blooming flower, table simple and comfortable looking, laid over with the new pebbled oil cloth, hand painted and set with coalport china in Indian tree design, the wee space can assume an affectation of charm and utility. With breakfast things removed and the table cleared, it all forms a reposeful nook in which to cut out a bit of sewing or play a game of solitaire.

Perhaps you have not seen or heard about the new oilcloth table covering? They are as jolly as a circus. The material is an edition de luxe of the old stuff we used to use as a cover for the kitchen table or as spreading manteaux for pantry shelves. It was used first for the nursery table, and the family cherub was at full pleasure to shuffle the blueberries or juggle the bread and milk, no matter what the result. Then the pebbled oil cloth came along, with its mottled surface, and this seemed so very foreign to the oil cloth cult that it was taken up for general use. Not for real breakfasts or luncheons, O no, we still have a few bits of linen left despite the Hun and his meannesses. But for the table set in the sun room, or on the veranda, or tucked away in such an alcove haven as we have described!

The table sets come in one large piece for the center of the table, and special plate doilies. They are decorated with oil paints, applied to form delightful, colorful borders, and center designs of fruits or flowers. Some of the designs for the nursery are more than amusing. The professional woman who prepares her breakfast finds the oil cloth art pieces more convenient and quicker than spreading a cloth.

In all arrangements for breakfast tray or breakfast table, gay and cheerful colors should be selected. The morning mood is brightened by china that partakes of vivid hues, just as it is cheered by sunbeams and the fine fresh breezes of an early summer day. English china decorated with peasant design is in great favor just now, as is American porcelain with gay little wreaths and festoons of flowers running around about over the surfaces of plates, cups, and saucers.

For the money flinger who cares not how recklessly or how ruthlessly she flings, there are exquisite sets of royal Worchester ware banded with gold and decorated in light delicate colors. Royal-Worcester also comes in solid colors—red, lavender, or green—with borders done in black and white. These breakfast sets look particularly charming placed upon trays of wicker with flowers in applique and cretonne spread beneath the glass.

Most men loathe breakfast in bed and so do many women, specially those busy ones who are alert as soon as they are awake and ready for the duties of the day. For th[illegible]e designed the most convenient a[illegible] utilitarian breakfast tables, just large enough for one. These may be on casters, after the manner and makeup of the traveling tea wagon, with spaces underneath for the electric toaster. Or they may assume the form of some quaintly cut old fashioned colonial table. Tables with oblong tops have open spaces at either end and can be carried about like trays.

You will be surprised when you start to outfit yourself with breakfast table or tray to discover how many interesting essentials may be added. For instance, there is the most convenient little combination of cream pitcher and sugar bowl. The sugar bowl is made with a metal rim at the top into which fits the silver pitcher. The bowl has a handle which carries both bowl and pitcher. It is a lovely thing, and even in sterling silver is not expensive. For the woman who prefers tea for breakfast there is the tea ball, swinging over a crystal bowl and swaying from a silver support. Funny little silver coffee pots are interesting, fashioned after Irish designs of the time of George II., and bearing quaint wicker handles.

Small compote dishes for fruit are of yellow Capri ware and very attractive. Yellow is a cheerful color; it reminds one of sunlight and gold, both of which are welcome in this more or less dull life of ours.

As a lastly, let us visualize for you a little makeshift breakfast corner tucked away in the bay window of an old fashioned apartment. The three wide windows are treated with silk tissue laid in folds against the panes. The over curtains, hanging straight at either side of the window, and arranged in a valance across the top, are composed of gay colored chintz in Egyptian pattern. The painted table and cottage chairs are decorated in cream, black, and green to match the coloring of the window fabric. A vase of parchment flowers stands upon the table and a bright red bird cage swings from the window casing. Table and chairs stand upon an old fashioned hooked rug.

For the dejeuner a deux, what could be pleasanter or more charming?

Answers to Inquiries.

N. N.: Your letter is so vague that it is difficult to answer. Won't you write again and be a little more specific?

* *

W. A. L.: No, rope draperies are not used. Use fine ecru net for your glass curtains with inside draperies of damask or sunfast matching your side walls.

* *

E. S.: Furnish your apartment throughout in simple, straight lined furniture in light brown wood. Use chintz draperies and Axminster rugs.

J. C. L.: Arrange your library table near the window. Match the rose color in your rug for your lampshade. I think if I could only have one piece of furniture in my house it would be a comfortable overstuffed davenport provided with several loose big pillows. It is a well known fact that ferns refuse to live if placed in a draft, so act upon this suggestion in arranging your fern stand.

* *

H. T. McL.: Antique mahogany is simply a name for brown mahogany. I believe that you will not make a mistake in selecting a bedroom set made by the firm you mentioned. Their work is of uniform excellence.

* *

L. I. G.: Select the lightest color that you can see in your linoleum and repeat this color for your side wall. Have linenized cretonne casement curtains in big bold check corresponding with the brightest colors in your linoleum.

* *

N. S. J.: Since your woodwork is oak, keep to your color scheme in various tints of yellow. This, grayed and neutralized, will become fawn color for the side wall. Italian filet lace is one of the most fashionable materials for buffet and table scarf.

Varied Activities of Women.

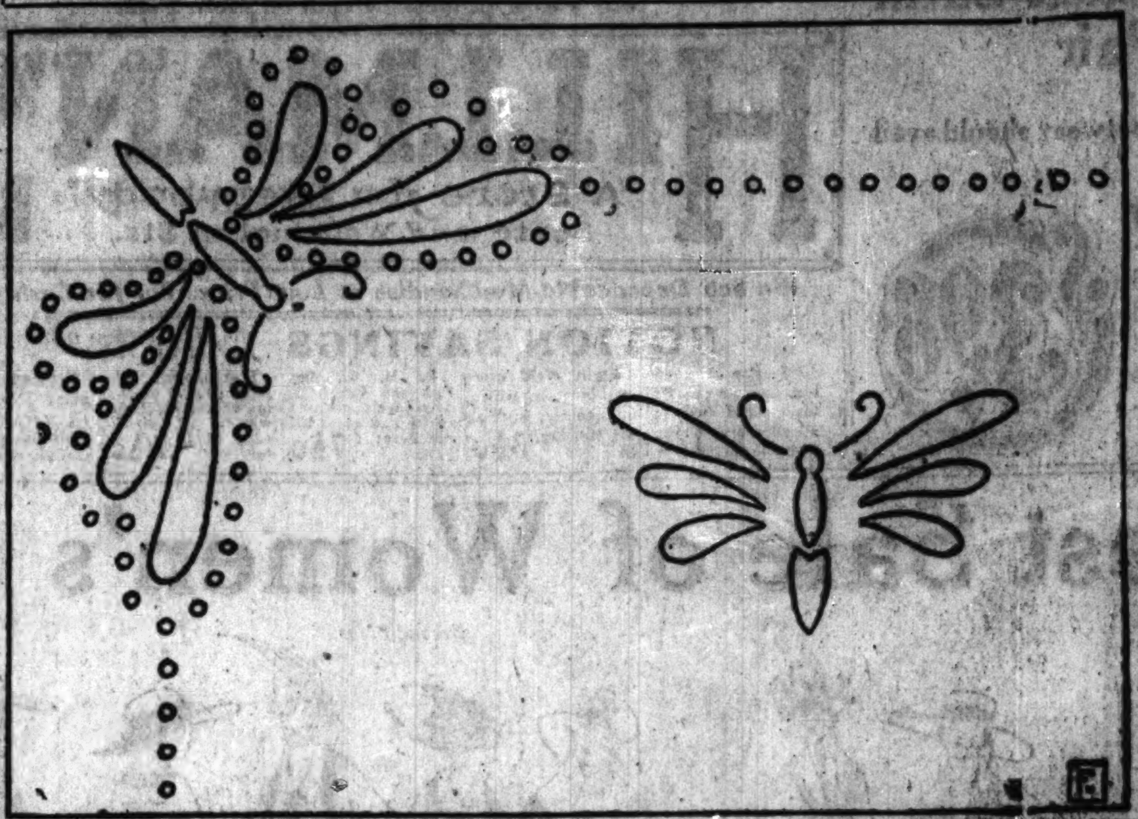
Three new bills of interest to women have been introduced in the Canadian parliament. One is to enable women to be elected to municipal office and another that farmers' wives may be eligible as members of school boards.

Miss Anna Holland of Decatur, Ill., is filling the position of a railroad crossing flagman.

The women members of the Sioux tribe, located at Standing Rock reservation in North Dakota, have organized a Red Cross auxiliary.

According to recent statistics there are at the present time in Germany nineteen women for every man.

Practical and Fancy Needlework. By Clotilde.



LUNCH CLOTH DOILIES.

This butterfly design is worked in French laid or solid embroidery.

Flat Satin Stitch—To do the French laid or solid embroidery pad with stitches taken lengthwise of the space a little inside the stamping lines on the right side of the material and then work over at right angles with stitches laid closely and evenly together.

Darning Stitch—It is a running stitch made in rows, the stitches on each row alternating with the last. Care must be taken to make all the stitches the same length.

Eyelets—For eyelet embroidery first run around the outlines with small stitches, then punch the centers open with a stiletto or cut them out a little with tiny scissors and work over the line of running stitches and the edge with binding on over and over stitches. When finished twist the stiletto around in the eyelet from the wrong side, thus making the eyelet raised and round.

The larger butterfly is for the luncheon cloth and the smaller one is for the doilies.

Camp Stories Contest.

Your son, your brother, your husband, or your sweetheart in the service undoubtedly has told you some amusing incident that has occurred in his camp. Undoubtedly, too, there are ever so many stories originating in camp that are still untold. This contest is especially open to the soldier himself if he has a good camp story to tell. It is open also to every one who has been told a good camp story of actual happening. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Camp Stories Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Trying to Kid Him.

Down at Kelly field an instructor left on a furlough and his cadets were assigned to other "flights" for their flying practice. By mistake one was attached to a "circus" squad.

When his turn came he climbed into the rear pit and the instructor took him up to 6,000 feet, swung the machine into a spiral nose dive, and waved his arms above his head to indicate that the cadet should right the machine.

When the machine had dropped to 2,500 feet, gaining momentum rapidly, the instructor became alarmed and looked back at the cadet, who waved his arms above his head and grinned. The pilot grabbed his controls and made a safe landing.

The cadet explained that this was his first flight and he thought the instructor was trying to kid him when he waved, so he pretended he wasn't scared.

Nothing to Worry About.

"Weren't you awfully frightened when you read that Joe's regiment was in the front line trenches?" I asked Joe's father.

"Frightened 'bout what?" he made answer.

"Lest something happen to Joe," I explained.

"Wall, I hain't thought much 'bout that. When our Joe gets inter a fight he ain't never the one that something happens to. It's always the other feller."

More Than One.

A colored girl noticed a white girl wearing a service star on her coat and inquired if her husband was in France. The white girl replied that the star was for her sweetheart, not her husband. The colored girl laughed and said, "Lord, Miss, if I was to wear a star for every nigger I have in France I would look like the star-spangled banner."

Useless Camouflage.

My brother, who is in the army of occupation in Germany, sent me this little story:

"One day we were waiting in line for our pay and a German with long whiskers was looking out of a window. One of our soldiers saw him and said to him: 'Come out from behind those bushes; the war is over and we know who you are!'"

Tendency to Constipation?

USE THIS LAXATIVE!

Dietitians advise a "careful diet," but that is troublesome to most people; physical culturists advise "certain exercises," which is good if one has both the time and the inclination. Doctors advise diet and exercise and medicine. The question is, shall it be a cathartic or purgative medicine? Or a mild, gentle laxative?

Thousands have decided the question to their own satisfaction by using a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin known to druggists as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. A small dose gives a free, easy movement of the bowels. It is the best substitute for nature herself. In fact, since the ingredients are wholly from the vegetable kingdom it may truthfully be said it is a natural laxative.

Its positive but gentle action on the bowels makes it an ideal remedy for constipation. The dose is small, and it may be taken with perfect safety until the bowels are regulated and act again of their own accord.

The druggist will refund your money if it fails to do as promised.

PRICE AS ALWAYS

In spite of greatly increased laboratory costs due to the War, by sacrificing profits and absorbing war taxes we have maintained the price at which this family laxative has been sold by druggists for the past [illegible] years. Two sizes—50c and $1.00.

Dr. Caldwell's SYRUP PEPSIN The Perfect Laxative

FREE SAMPLES—If you have never used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin send for a free trial bottle to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 408 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. If there are babies at home ask for a copy of Dr. Caldwell's book, "The Care of Baby."

Get 31 hours of Cooking with 3½ Hours of Heat

Ideal Fireless Cookstove

Solid oak, cabinet-built case, specially vulcanized. Cooking compartments of extra strong, durable, seamless aluminum. Scientific, strata-laid insulation; imprisons heat. Patented Water-Seal Top and Heat Conserving Valve insure best results. Full equipment of Ideal Aluminum cooking utensils, radiator thermometer.

Domestic Science Fireless Cookstove

BY using a Domestic Science or Ideal Fireless Cookstove, you can save the greater part of the fuel you are now using to do your cooking. These cookstoves do any kind of cooking your range will do—baking, roasting, boiling, stewing—and do it by stored-up heat. Instead of using the continuous heat of your range for the preparation of the meals, you use it for a few minutes to heat the Fireless Cookstove radiators, and they do all the cooking, no matter how long cooking is required.

Cooks As Quickly As Your Range

The foods shown would, combined, call for 31 hours' use of your range. Cooked in a Domestic Science or Ideal, 1¾ hours' use of the range will provide all the radiator heat needed, which, with the range heat required in the preparation of the food for the cookstove, would total less than 3½ hours of heat for 31 hours of cooking. While this shows the value of these cookstoves for long, slow cooking, it does not tell the story of the rapid heat, which will bake your pies or biscuits almost as quickly as your range, and with infinitely less fuel.

No other fireless cooker can bake as these Fireless Cookstoves, because no other cooker has the patented, heat-retaining water-seal; or brown as they do, because of the superior patented steam valve, which permits the escape of excess steam, and conserves the cooking heat. Ask your dealer to tell you more about these special features, and about the Ideal and Domestic Science special construction and insulation.

We have prepared a HANDSOME BOOKLET, with photographs in colors, of dishes you can cook with greater success in these Fireless Cookstoves. Write us for this book, with its delicious recipes. Address Dept. 71.

REAL LOVE STORIES

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

HER IDEAL HERO.

THIS is not strictly a love story in the orange blossom and wedding cake sense. Back in 1900 I was a slender little girl, with yellow hair and a penchant for reading stories of the heroes of the then great Spanish-American war. Every one talked about the war, and perhaps a richly illustrated history of the world that we had helped to paint a splendid pageantry of arms in my brain.

Although I was only 7, I had a clear conception of what my "hero" was going to be like. Many a day I sat in the hollowed out crotch of a shady catalpa tree, reading and looking out over the prairie dreaming.

Then came the news that Roosevelt, the hero of the Rough Riders, was coming to Kansas and would make a speech in the nearest town. The railroad ran by our farm home, and I knew I could at least see his train, even if my parents did not take me to the political meeting.

The day came, and I was tearfully left behind with a maiden aunt. I retired to the old catalpa tree to mourn. The Santa Fe passenger train came puffing over the horizon, and, to my amazement, took the switch down near Bluff creek. Out tumbled two or three men and walked out in the prairie, kicking at bunches of grass. They were coming toward me.

I scarcely recollect the welling flood of emotions that shook my tiny bosom when they came through the orchard to where I was. One man smiled, and by his pearly white teeth and army hat I knew that Mr. Roosevelt, my hero, had greeted me kindly and was asking if they might fish in our Bluff creek. It appeared that their special train was almost an hour ahead of time, and its campaigning passengers preferred to rest rather than go on to town and encounter a tiresome reception. Mr. Roosevelt desired to fish.

He noticed that I had a big copy of a history in my lap, and our mutual interest in the subject attracted him to me. I scarcely remember much of our glorious conversation, I was so excited. But I did ask, I think, "Were you very much scared at San Juan hill, Mr. Roosevelt?"

And he answered, "I was scared to death, Theodora, but I didn't dare to let on."

We took our three fishing poles and a can of worms which father had dug. I led the way to a shady nook, where the little perch bit best. During the rest of that half hour Mr. Roosevelt and his companions talked to me and laughed loudly at the serious, childlike questions that I asked.

He stood out among his fellows like Pike's Peak among the Rockies. I was captivated by his conversation.

Down in town they told me later people gazed down the railroad track the two miles and a half and saw the train standing idle for an hour. When Roosevelt's party reached town, according to their schedule, their visit did not last over fifteen minutes.

"It does seem strange that Col. Roosevelt will sit by a creek and fish twice as long as he will talk to us," one citizen said to another. But that question didn't cost the Rough Rider any votes. He carried the county solid.

As for the love story, it comes in when I say that I fell in love with my hero, then and there. I didn't care if he was married. In later years the memory of that wonderful character made me his admirer to the end. I had seen an ideal realized, knew that they could exist, and would not be satisfied until I had found a husband like Roosevelt.

Perhaps that is why I am an old maid today. I must have aimed too high, but at any rate I have a wonderful memory as a solace, just like the old grenadier who "knew the first Napoleon."

Meeting Father.

I was expecting a caller, the new principal of the high school, and when he came I took him into an adjoining room to introduce him to my father, and there father sat and my kid sister had braided his long chin whiskers into a pig tail and tied on a big red ribbon bow. The young man 'bout killed himself laughing, most, it seemed, at my discomfiture.

A Lonely Looking Individual.

The other evening I went to a picture show with a woman friend of mine. My husband was busy when we left him and said he would join us later, which he was unable to do. All during the performance I kept looking back for him, finally discovering a lonely looking individual and deciding that he must be the object of my solicitations I stood up, beckoned to him, and said, "Come down here, dear."

Talking Too Much.

I had visiting me a childhood friend whom I had in a sense outgrown, yet for whom I had a kindly feeling because of past relations. The first night after she had arrived she was, as usual, talkative, and the next morning my sister responded to my morning greeting with, "Whatever were you and Mable talking about half the night? I am tired out, you kept me awake so long."

"You tired out!" I exclaimed. "Then how do you think I feel?"

Imagine my horror when, turning to leave the room, I saw my friend standing back of me, knowing that she must have heard all.

When I go to school and have gym the soldier teacher that we have makes us girls walk with the boys and sometimes I march with Sammy and sometimes with Arthur, and Arthur does not like to walk with girls, so he says, "Ye gods," and Sammy gets too close to me and he is a dirty boy.

Making Him Feel at Home.

I called up a friend of mine the other day and invited her over for lunch. She said: "I shall be glad to, if you will allow me to bring an escort." Thinking she was only joking, I said: "Why, certainly." Shortly after the bell rang and there she stood with her brother, a soldier in uniform. Much to my embarrassment, I had beans for lunch, also canned corn beef.

The Mean Thing!

Any one with a brother-in-law like mine will sympathize with me. We often ride to work together, and the other morning, having reached his station, he rose to go out. At the door, waving to me, he called, "Good-by, sweetheart." He soon disappeared in the crowd, but all eyes turned to me. Needless to say how I felt. I left the train at the next stop and took another to my station.

At a Late Hour.

I was entertaining my first beau and anxious to make a good impression. My efforts were so successful that we failed to realize the growing lateness of the hour.

Suddenly my pet cat walked into the room, circled around the young man's chair several times, and then sat down facing us. I described with much pride some of his clever little tricks, and concluded: "He's really more intelligent than some people." And just then, that cat opened his mouth and yawned—a dreadful, undisguised, ear-to-ear yawn.

This in the light of my preceding remark caused me some embarrassment. Five minutes after, the front door slammed. The young man had taken the hint.

In the Days of the Bustle.

I was making a new dress for myself. It was a good many years ago, in the days when we wore bustles. The bustle which I wore was a home made, crude affair. When fitting the dress, I had put on the bustle in order to get the proper hang to the skirt. So, to save time, I tied the bustle around outside of my house dress, and then tried on the new skirt.

During the morning I found it necessary to go to the store, and while waiting in the crowded grocery for my parcels, a friend, came up to me and said, to the amusement of the bystanders: "Why, Lillie, what have you tied around your waist?"

I found I had forgotten to take the bustle off, and had worn it on the outside of my house dress all the way to the store.

Amid Much Laughter.

I was on the stage for the first time and was to walk a tight rope. I found when I got on the stage I was nervous, Though I made several attempts, I could not walk the rope. Much to the embarrassment of my father and mother, who were in the first row, as well as to my own, I had to acknowledge weakly that I could not do it, and, amid much laughter, withdrew from the stage.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope.

She's Called a Vamp.

"Dear Miss Blake: Lately my friends have taken to calling me 'Vampire.' What do you suppose is the reason? Should I take it as a compliment or an insult? Should I discourage the practice, or encourage it?

"VAMP."

I think I would discourage the practice. It isn't flattering to be called a vampire. The word was not originated with intent to flatter. On the contrary! I don't suppose anybody intended an insult, however—because it's a word that at the present moment has popular vogue and would better be ignored by the recipient of the doubtful compliment than entertained.

Home Dull and Lonesome.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am very much in need of your excellent advice. I am a girl of 16, and naturally fond of good times. My parents don't seem to realize this, and never accompany me any place. They don't object to my going, but still, I think it looks better for a girl to be with her parents in a theater, etc.

"I just can't make my mother go any place, and in the evenings all they do is read the papers; it is so dull and lonesome, that I just can't stand it. My mother doesn't take any pains to look nice, although she is refined, and I tell her about it, but I might as well save my breath for all the good it does.

"It makes me very unhappy, and I just can't take the proper interest in anything. I know that you can help me and I will await your answer with eagerness. JEANNE."

Jeanne, my best wish is that your mother's eye rests upon this letter of yours and she is thereby made to realize how much she and her part in your life mean to you. What a pity that she is not more of a pal to you when you prefer her company, when many another mother would be delighted to have a girl like you. Isn't there some nice girl of your age with whom you might go to the movies? And cannot you invite some friends to your home now and then?

They Never Ask Her.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a high school girl, in my second year, and am 15 years old. I have good manners, am considered attractive, and dress well. I know boys and am always very pleasant with them. When there is dancing at our clubs at school, I always have been in demand for dancing. Now, all my girl friends go out with boys to nice parties and dances, but they never ask me, although I am a good dancer, and also I have brothers and sisters, and know how to have a good time. What, Miss Blake, could be the trouble? I have many girl friends who are very fond of me.

"JANE."

Now, I wonder what the trouble is, Jane. You sound as though you ought to be popular. Are you bashful with the boys, or, on the contrary, are you "snippy" with them, or maybe you make sarcastic remarks. Of course, you see I'm just guessing, because, while you've told me your good qualities, you've left out entirely the things that might be at fault. Won't you write to me again?

What to Say.

"Dear Miss Blake: We are two girls of 16 years of age and we would like your advice on what we should say to a fellow while out riding in a machine or going to or from parties when they go so far as to put their arms around us. We object to such familiarities, but they get peeved when we object. Will you kindly advise us on this subject? "P."

Just tell him frankly that you don't want to be handled that way. You can do this without getting cross about it—but be firm and give the boys to understand that friendship does not include familiarity on their part. Let them get peeved. It's a good deal better to have it that way than to have them think you are "soft" and "mushy."

Father Is Right.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl almost 14 years old. My father will not allow me to go out in the evening with my girl friend, who is the same age as I am, even if we only want to take a walk. Don't you think my father is a little too severe with me? How long do you think a girl of my age ought to stay out?

"There is a boy whom I have known for years. He is about two years my senior. He has asked me to his home, amusements, and other places, but I always must refuse, as my father will not let me go. Do you think this is right? "JUNE."

No, June dear, your father is right and you are wrong in this matter. It looks bad for two young girls to be out walking alone in the evening, and another thing, your father knows the temptations and the dangers of this practice, so you just listen to him, June, and be thoroughly respectful to him and of his judgment. Truly your father would not want you to be going out to places of amusement with a boy. Some day when you get a little older you'll be thanking the same dear daddy for protecting you as watchfully and carefully as he is doing.

Not One of the Family.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going with a young man of wealth and position for some time. His mother treats me as her own daughter, and I am in an embarrassing position as to what to call her. His grandparents insist that I call her mother and he insists that I do not call her 'Mrs. ——.' Can you kindly advise me as to what to do in this embarassing situation?

"BETTY."

It were better to be on the safe side and call her Mrs. You would put yourself in an embarrassing position before your friends were they to hear you calling her mother. You might—if it is perfectly agreeable to her—make up some cunning name that would fit her and call her that if you choose, but don't take advantage of family privileges when you are not one of them.

He's Jealous of Her.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl 17 years old and go with a boy 18 years old, and we both are very much in love with each other. Are we too young to be engaged, and is 17 years old too young to be tied down to one boy? I have lots of other boy friends who want me to go places with them, but he is so jealous of me. Is jealousy a proof of true love? R. L. M."

No, jealousy isn't a proof of true love at all, but in spite of all idealism on the subject, where there is love there is a little jealousy. I think you're too young to be engaged. Matrimony has responsibilities that are hard for a girl of 17, to say nothing of the responsibility of a husband of 18, in the face of the high cost of bread and butter, let alone ice cream for Sunday dinner.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

KEEPING ONE'S JOB.

As we approach what is generally known as the "dull season" in business, the girl who is established in a position that is giving her a living, even though it isn't the position to which she is especially suited, will do well to keep it.

This year conditions throughout the commercial and industrial world are more unstable than they have been for a number of years, and this condition, coupled with the slackness that normally obtains during the late spring and summer months, will make it no easy matter to get a new job for the asking.

Therefore, every business girl who is compelled to earn her living ought to stick to the job she has now and postpone for a few months any contemplated change.

Ordinarily, I wouldn't advise any business girl to stay on in a job that did not promise any advancement or to which she wasn't suited, but during the period of reconstruction it is not what she wants that counts but what she can get and keep, in the way of a job.

During the war, when there were many more jobs than there were women to fill them, and when war industries boosted women's salaries to an extraordinary extent, the average girl who worked could hardly be blamed for becoming reckless about her job. If the one she had didn't prove almost perfection, why there were dozens of promising ones offered!

The other day I heard a girl say, "I guess I'll quit my job; there are plenty where this one came from." Something had gone wrong in the office; a slight matter that might easily have been overlooked, but instead of forgetting about it she was willing to give up a good job and take a chance of spending three or four months in idleness.

Many girls who gave up high salaried positions during the last few months, as well as those who had been in war work and whose work automatically stopped with the signing of the armistice, are finding that the better position are not to be picked up.

When the quest for the new job was started each of the girls had made up her mind that she would not accept a position at a salary less than she had been getting, and the few positions at a smaller salary that were offered were scornfully turned down. Now many of them are willing to take anything they can get, no matter what the salary is, as long as it is enough for them to live on.

Every girl who contemplates a change of position ought to ask herself before making the change if she can afford several months of idleness. If not, it is wise to postpone leaving one position unless another one is absolutely assured. It ought to be something more than a whim that would cause a girl to give up a good job at this time.

Peels Off Corns Between Toes

The Great Corn Loosener of the Age. Never Fails. Painless.

A corn mashed, squeezed and crushed all day long in between two toes! You can try the desperate, "treat 'em rough" way and try to dig it out and fail. Or, you can try the sensible, peaceful, painless, easy way, and use "Gets-It." It's easy for "Gets-It" to remove corns in hard-to-get-at places. It's a liquid—a wonderful, painless formula—it has never been successfully imitated. It settles on the corn, and dries immediately. Instead of digging out the corn, you peel it out painlessly. There's no sticky plaster that doesn't stay "put," no salve that irritates or rubs off. You reach the corn easily with the little glass rod in the cork of every "Gets-It" bottle. It does not hurt the true flesh. Try it, trot and smile! It's a blessing; never fails.

"Two Drops of 'Gets-It,'—That's All!"

"Gets-It," the guaranteed, money-back corn-remover, the only sure way, costs but a trifle at any drug store. Manufactured by

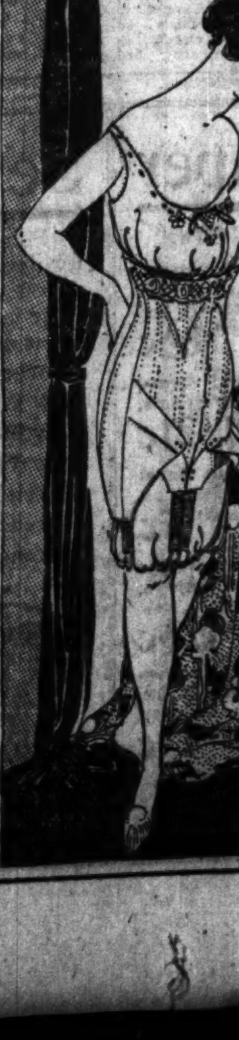
"Nemo Week" Means More Here Than at Any Corset Store in America

—Third Floor—Center—



Not for a day, or for a month, or a year, have we been headquarters for Nemo corsets, but for twenty-seven long years, ever since Nemo corsets were first introduced to the women of Chicago, have we featured them more than any other store in the country, and studied each new improvement, each new model, the moment it was issued, until today our great corps of corsetieres, all graduates of the "N. H. F. I." of New York, with their years of training, their years of actual experience in fitting Nemo corsets, can serve you better than any corsetieres in the country—for not alone do they understand thoroughly the proper function of each Nemo model and each of the many exclusive Nemo health and fashion devices, and how best to apply them to every individual figure, but

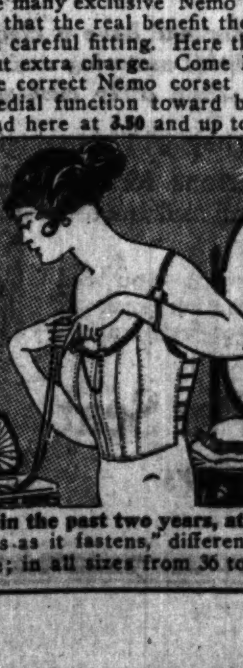
Here at the Nemo headquarters of America each model is to be found at all times in a full variety of sizes, so that here alone are you assured of getting exactly the corset your figure demands—a fact of the most vital importance to the health, the comfort, the poise, the fashionable figure lines of every woman wearing corsets.

These are facts we have stated many times, but they are such vital facts that we feel we cannot reiterate them too often, that we cannot do too much to impress every one not alone with the fact of the great importance of the many exclusive Nemo improvements, but with the importance of wearing Nemo corsets so that the real benefit these improvements can bring are had. And they can only be had through careful fitting. Here the fittings are done in the most thorough and scientific manner without extra charge. Come here Nemo week and let one of our expert corsetieres fit you with the correct Nemo corset from the twenty-six distinct Nemo styles, each of which has its remedial function toward better health and a smarter appearance. Nemo corsets are to be had here at 3.50 and up to $12.

The Nemo Wonderlift Corset—

As much for the slender and medium full figures as for the stout, the Wonderlift corset, with its Wonderlift bandlet, is an inestimable boon. It prevents the weakening of the abdominal muscles or holds fallen muscles in the healthful, natural position. The bandlet is invisible and takes up no additional space. At $6 and up to $12.00.

—A Nemo Corset Never Loses Its shape.



The Nemo Self-Reducing Corset—

This is a Nemo corset most desirable for the stout figure. There is a model for every type of figure from the short stout to the very tall. The Nemo Relief bands or the Nemo Lastikops bandlets in the self-reducing models give the appearance of immediate reduction and gradually effect actual reduction, 3.50 to 6.00.

THE CABBAGE FAMILY.

[Copyright: 1919: By J. F. H. Heide.]

THE exorbitant price of cabbage recently has determined many to grow their own and to include all allied vegetables. The cabbage family comprises plants of such varied form that it seems incredible all of them are horticultural developments of a common parent, the wild cabbage, not unlike the sprawling leaves of spinach or of dandelion. Kale, kohlrabi, rutabaga, turnip, Brussels sprout, cauliflower, and various forms and colors of cabbage proper all have the same parentage and all occasionally revert to the parent form.

The heavy clay soils to the west, when a proper balance of humus (organic matter or topsoil) is present and deeply cultivated, are peculiarly adapted to the growing of all season crops, such as winter cabbage, Brussels sprouts, cauliflower, kale, rutabagas, and turnips, because such soils are more retentive of moisture and therefore cooler during midsummer; and the cabbage family are cool weather plants, even surviving considerable frost. Nevertheless, they thrive on any soil that is well manured and frequently cultivated.

An abundance of manure is imperative, even though the use of fresh manure is unavoidable. Thirty tons per acre or 375 pounds per square rod (16½ feet each way) the first year is none too much to gain fertility. Preferably turned under in autumn, it may still be attended to whenever the planting is done.

Market gardeners even add 150 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre, nearly a pound per square rod. This is divided into three portions and applied to the plants at intervals of ten days after they are four inches tall. All use of mineral fertilizers, though, is dangerous to the soil at best. However, this pushes the plants rapidly through the period when the green cabbage worm may do the greatest damage if not carefully watched for and hand picked or sprayed with arsenate of lead.

Provide the children of the neighborhood with butterfly nets and encourage them to make collections of mounted white butterflies; they lay the eggs which hatch out the cabbage worms. If other butterflies and moths are taken, so much the better. This may promote the study of entomology to the lasting benefit of mankind.

Rotation of crops should be followed, as far as possible, so that the ground is not occupied by one of the crucifers (the cabbage family) two seasons in succession. Once the soil is inoculated with club root, a malady common to all the family, it will take six or seven years of other crops to starve out the disease. This suggests the importance of knowing the source of seed or seedling plants, for plant diseases may be spread by either.

All the crucifers thrive the better for transplanting. It is now too late to sow seeds in hotbeds or cold frames, but the nursery bed, an essential part of every successful garden, will serve the same purpose from the last week in April on. It is not advisable to sow or plant any of the family in the first smoke zone; they would prove veritable hatcheries there for plant diseases and aphis or plant lice.

CABBAGE.—These may be divided into early and midseason cabbages, both used exclusively as greens during the summer, and late or winter cabbage, which is used for fermenting as sauer kraut and for winter storage. All are sown at about the same time.

The most satisfactory early cabbage for the home garden is Early Jersey Wakefield. It is sown in the hotbed or indoor window box between March 16 and April 10, transplanting to the open between March 27 and May 20; in the cold frame, between April 1 and 25, transplanting between May 9 and June 3; in the nursery bed, between April 28 and June 16, transplanting between June 2 and July 20.

For midseason cabbage, Danish Ballhead is most generally adaptable. The sowing and transplanting is at the same time as the early variety except that the nursery bed is sown between April 28 and June 1, transplanting between June 2 and July 5.

The best late cabbage available is Flat Dutch, sown in the hotbed or window box and in the cold frame during the same periods as the early variety, with the same time for transplanting, and sown in the nursery bed between April 28 and May 20. The latter is transplanted between June 2 and 20.

For early red cabbage Dark Erfurt is recommended. It should be sown in the hotbed, window box, and cold frame and transplanted from these during the same periods as early cabbage. In the nursery bed it should be sown between April 28 and June 16, transplanting between June 2 and July 15.

Of savoy cabbage Iron Head is recommended for early and Improved Drumhead for late harvesting. Their sowing and transplanting dates correspond with those of early and late red cabbage.

CAULIFLOWER.—Snowball is the variety best suited to the home garden under all local conditions. Sow in the hotbed or indoor window box between March 16 and April 10, transplanting to the garden between April 27 and May 20; in the cold frame, between April 1 and 25, transplanting between May 9 and June 3; in the nursery bed, between April 28 and June 16, transplanting between June 2 and July 15.

When the inner flower or curd has developed to the size of a hen's egg, from July on, it is protected from sun and dry air by breaking the spines of four or five of the inner leaves over the curd to shield it; or the leaves may be gathered over the top and tied together with raffia or packing cord. Cauliflower is mature when the curd begins to divide into segments and must then be promptly harvested. An examination from time to time is necessary.

Last year much of the cauliflower seed of the local market was inferior, obviously bred by some unscrupulous Pacific coast growers we have read so much about of late, who think more of the immediate spoils than of permanently displacing foreign grown seeds.

KOHLRABI.—Early White Vienna is the most satisfactory. It grows rapidly and fits admirably into many plans of crop succession, interplanting, and companion cropping. The root expands to a turniplike bulb above ground, with foliage growing out from the sides and top of the bulb. When the latter has reached the size of a baseball the root is cut off just above the ground, the vegetable peeled, cut into thin slices or small cubes, and cooked like cauliflower. The foliage is used like kale.

The seed is started in the hotbed or window box between March 16 and April 10, transplanting to the garden between April 27 and May 20; in the cold frame, between April 1 and 25, transplanting between May 9 and June 3; in the nursery bed, between April 28 and June 24, transplanting between June 2 and Aug. 1.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS.—Paris Market is the most satisfactory variety. Diminutive heads of delicate yet hardy cabbage develop in the axils of the leaves, those toward the bottom of the stem reaching edible size first. As soon as the crown begins to form the leaves below it are broken off to encourage greater development of the sprouts. In fertile soil and with diligent cultivation they will grow to about an inch in diameter. Frost improves them and they may be left outdoors till the temperature drops below 25 degrees F. Even then they may be transplanted with a ball of earth to complete their growth in a cool cellar.

The seed is sown in the hotbed or window box between March 16 and April 10, transplanting to the garden between April 27 and May 20; in the cold frame, between April 1 and 25, transplanting between May 9 and June 3; in the nursery bed, between April 28 and May 7, transplanting between June 2 and 11.

Other members of the cabbage family will be taken up tomorrow.

Bobby's Saturday job was to clean up the back yard. Last Saturday he was in a hurry, as there was to be a parade at 10 o'clock.

"Hi, there, kid!" yelled the cranky neighbor on the west side, "I don't want you to throw all your old cans and bottles over on my yard."

"You haven't got 'em all," retorted Bobby. "I have throwed a lot over on that other fellow's yard, too." H. C. D.

The other day my little niece was sitting on the back stairs between her little boy cousin and the janitor's little boy. A neighbor asked her who the little boys were and she replied: "That is the janitor's kid and that is the family kid." P. K.

One rainy day the children got out their box of blocks and said they were going to build the White House. All was quiet for about half an hour, when I heard them quarreling and went to see what could be the trouble.

"Madge held up a block, saying: "We have used up all the blocks except this one, and I want it to be President Wilson."

"Well—but—mamma," wailed Ted, "don't you think it is more important to have steps to the White House than to have President Wilson without Mrs. Wilson?" DEE.

Returning from school one day, Earl announced that his teacher was going to leave and that the class would now have a new teacher. His mother inquired what had happened to his teacher, and he replied: "Why, she is going to get married." His mother asked whom she was going to marry. "I don't know," he replied, "but he keeps a toothache office down the street." F. Z.

Bernice was visiting with her mother in Texas during a rainy season, and at the dinner table one day became interested in a story her uncle was telling about being "bogged."

"Mamma, what's bogged?" asked the little girl.

The mother replied: "A person is bogged when he is stuck—when he can't go any farther."

Near the end of the meal her mother noticed that Bernice had quite a bit of food left on her plate, but had stopped eating, so she asked what was the matter.

"Well, mamma, I'm bogged," was the reply. L. C. M.

WHEN WALKING WITH WOMEN.

NOT long ago I chanced to overhear an amusing and enlightening discussion between two young women, one from that part of the south where true, old time courtesy still exists, the other from the rushing, efficient middle west, where it sometimes seems that the iron clank of machinery and the glitter of modern improvements have crowded out the gentler things of life.

The first girl was condemning as ill bred, a young man of her acquaintance who had smoked a cigaret as he walked along the street with her; Miss Middle West was upholding the propriety of such an act. The argument waxed warm, but in the end she from the bonny south, with her quiet assurance of what was really "comme il faut," carried off the honors of the day.

And she was quite in the right. Although many modern young women have not sufficient courage of their convictions to say "no" when a man asks if he may smoke while they are on the public highway, they would be not only warranted but justified in doing so. It is not correct, and the men of today, born with a liking for what is what, never make the mistake of indulging a whim that could better be postponed until a more opportune time.

Laxity in even such a small matter as this need not be permitted, if only our sex, with characteristic diplomacy and tact, would exercise their privileges and thus prevent this and similar breaches of good form.

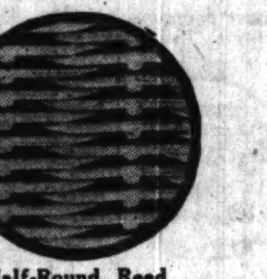
Marshall B. Lloyd
The Inventive Genius

The "Impossible" Achieved

How Marshall B. Lloyd's Inventive Genius Enables You to Buy Extra Fine Loom Woven Carriages at the Price of the Commonplace

Split Reed

Hand weaving labor costs necessitate the use of this wide, coarse, flat reed to weave a baby carriage economically. The wider the reed, the less material, hence the less labor.



Half-Round Reed

Sometimes termed "split" reed, used in majority of carriages to imitate round reed, which, owing to cost of weaving, is seldom used. Note thickness of strands.

Lloyd Fabric

Lloyd Loom Woven Fabric, woven on looms like finest silk, from a single, continuous fine small strand—evenly, uniformly, mechanically exact—with no loose ends. Yet costs no more than old-fashioned hand weaving.

Marshall B. Lloyd, whose inventive genius has revolutionized four industries, has now achieved his triumph. He actually weaves Baby Carriages on looms! And finer than human hands have ever been able to do it.

Note the illustrations at the left. See the surpassing beauty of the work of this Lloyd Loom compared with the efforts of human hands.

Lloyd
Loom Woven Baby Carriages

Now, for the first time it is possible to weave fine strands of small diameter at a price within the reach of all. And to weave an entire carriage with a single, continuous strand, eliminating the projecting ends of broken strands that mar the exterior and, when concealed inside, scratch baby's hands and face and tear dainty clothes. And to use the savings effected by looms to give added refinements lacking in ordinary carriages.

These Savings Yours

We now offer these extra features, possible through savings effected by the Lloyd Loom. Finer, more closely woven strands, requiring up to 1,500 more feet in length of material; Special Finishing Process, which "locks on" the finish, making it lasting, durable; Patented Reversible Safety Gear of improved Double Hoop Construction, rigid, noiseless, extra safe; Special "Square and Round" Hydraulic Tube Pushers which provide extra rigidity and added strength to running gear and make carriage unusually easy to handle; Oil Tempered Auto-like Springs of unequaled resiliency, which hold original balance of carriage, no matter how long or hard the usage; Special Wheels with double inner and outer rim through which spokes are reinforced so they cannot come loose.

Fine, Flexible Waterproof Fabric

And, in addition, we now offer beautiful Interwoven Colors—two-tones, three-tones and mists—woven into the fabric on the loom. At no greater cost than the commonplace. And Lloyd Extra Fine Waterproof Fabric—a wood base product of Nature improved by Science and made by a waterproof process. Does not warp. Unlike ordinary materials, which when dented are ruined, Lloyd Loom Woven Fabric immediately springs back to original shape—elastic, resilient, shape-retaining because woven over network of fabric covered piano wire.

Sold Only by Responsible Dealers

Unfortunately we have been unable to supply all dealers with Lloyd Loom Woven Baby Carriages. The demand has been too great. Now through vastly increased production we are meeting demands.

Some dealers, however, have wished to take advantage of the fineness and beauty of Lloyd Carriages to make an unjust profit. We have been obliged to restrict its sale to only the most reliable dealers. Do not be influenced against your better judgment by any dealer unable to show you Lloyd Loom Woven Baby Carriages. Possibly he may have been refused the privilege of selling them. Look for the name "Lloyd" on the front axle.

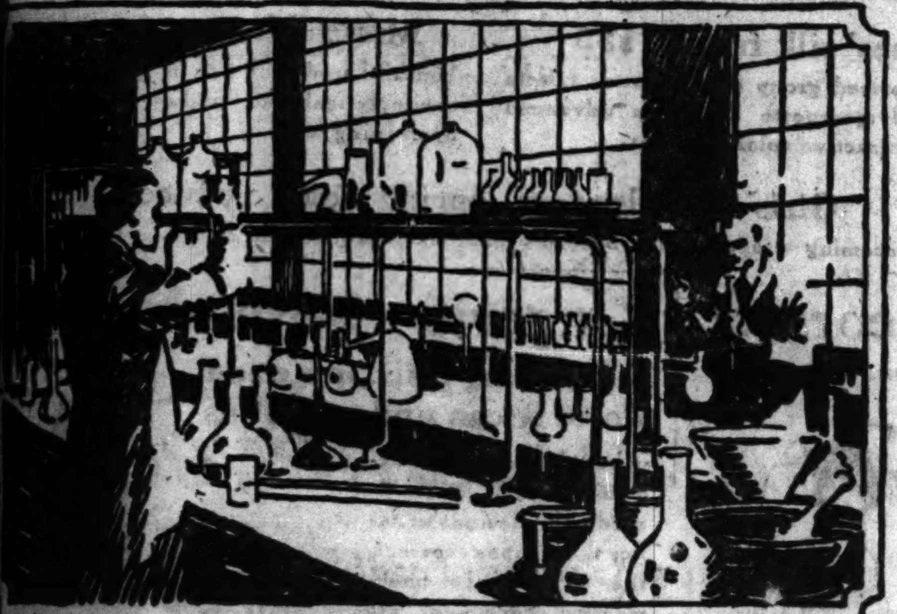
Proof that your cakes will be good before you bake them



A glimpse of the Calumet laboratory—one of the largest and most completely equipped in the world.

Here eminent analytical chemists put Calumet to the most rigid and exacting tests for purity, strength and uniformity, demanding and enforcing the highest standard of excellence.

Calumet must be dependable—every can, every spoonful—because there's no deviation from this set policy of "Best by Test."

Six Other Advantages That Make Calumet a Better Baking Powder

Because of the extreme care taken in the manufacture of Calumet—because of the high quality of ingredients employed—because of its unfailing dependability, cakes or anything else baked with Calumet—

1.—do not fall while baking.
2.—stay moist and fresh longer.
3.—raise evenly and have a smooth, fine texture.

Moreover—CALUMET BAKING POWDER

4.—does not leave an impure, injurious residue in your bakings.
5.—does not lose its strength.
6.—is more economical.

Calumet Baking Powder removes all bake day risk. We assume responsibility for your baking success. You don't need to worry a minute.

When you put a baking into the oven—a cake or anything else in which Calumet is used—you can say to yourself, "That baking will come from the oven light, tender, perfectly raised and wonderfully good"—and it will! In manufacturing

CALUMET

Not content with discovering how to manufacture a better baking powder, the Calumet Baking Co. determined to insure its dependability—to prove that every can of Calumet which leaves the factory will give perfect results in your baking.

For this purpose they built a scientific laboratory and a model bakery—marvels of complete and modern equipment. Here a sample can from every mix of Calumet is given scientific analysis and then the practical tests of being used in baking cakes, biscuits and all articles of food in which baking powder is used.

Brown-topped, puffy biscuits and light, delicate cakes that are so delicious come daily from the Calumet ovens.

You can bake such delicious, wholesome food for your family. Get a can of Calumet and say goodbye to all baking failures and join the ranks of good cooks! Calumet is a superior baking powder. And it has that good, old, everyday, indispensable quality—dependability.

A partial view of the Calumet Bake Shop. Here in the most modern equipped factory kitchen in America, skilled chefs, with the aid of Mammoth Electric Ovens, automatic mixers and the most advanced type of baking appliances are constantly testing Calumet for baking quality.

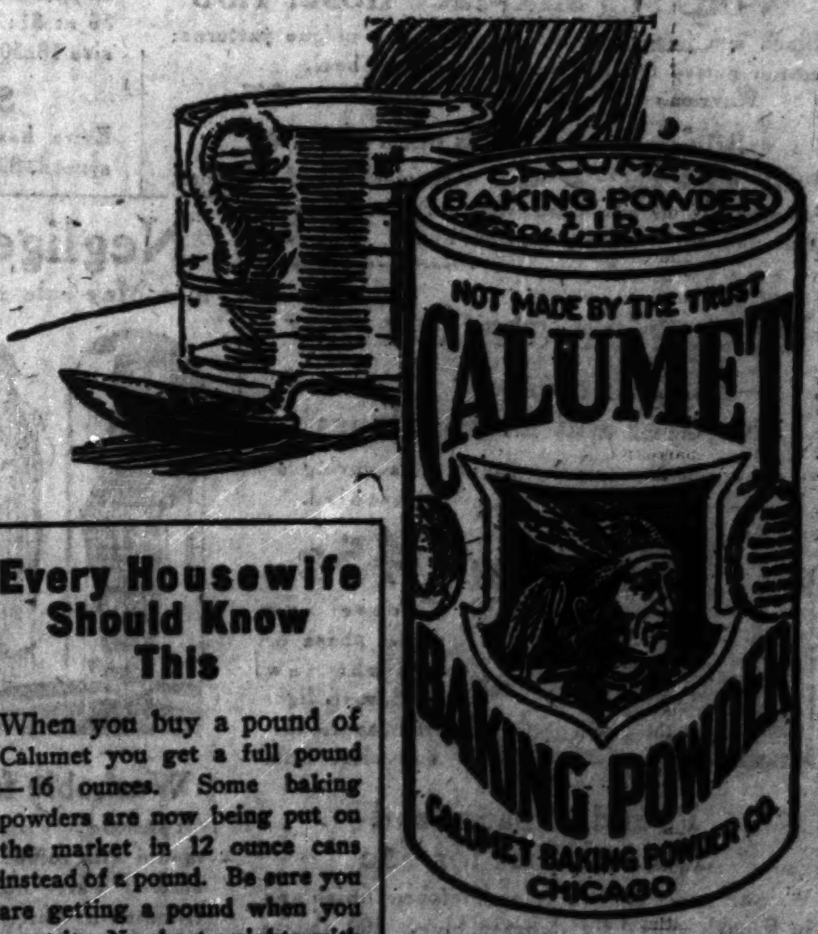
Handsomely Illustrated in Colors

Scores of tested recipes, many of which have never before been published. Scores of new ways of reducing housework and household expenses. A necessity in every home. Send slip found in can of Calumet and only 2 three-cent stamps to help cover cost of packing and mailing.



Every Housewife Should Know This

When you buy a pound of Calumet you get a full pound—16 ounces. Some baking powders are now being put on the market in 12 ounce cans instead of a pound. Be sure you are getting a pound when you want it. No short weights with Calumet.

THE RED SHAWL

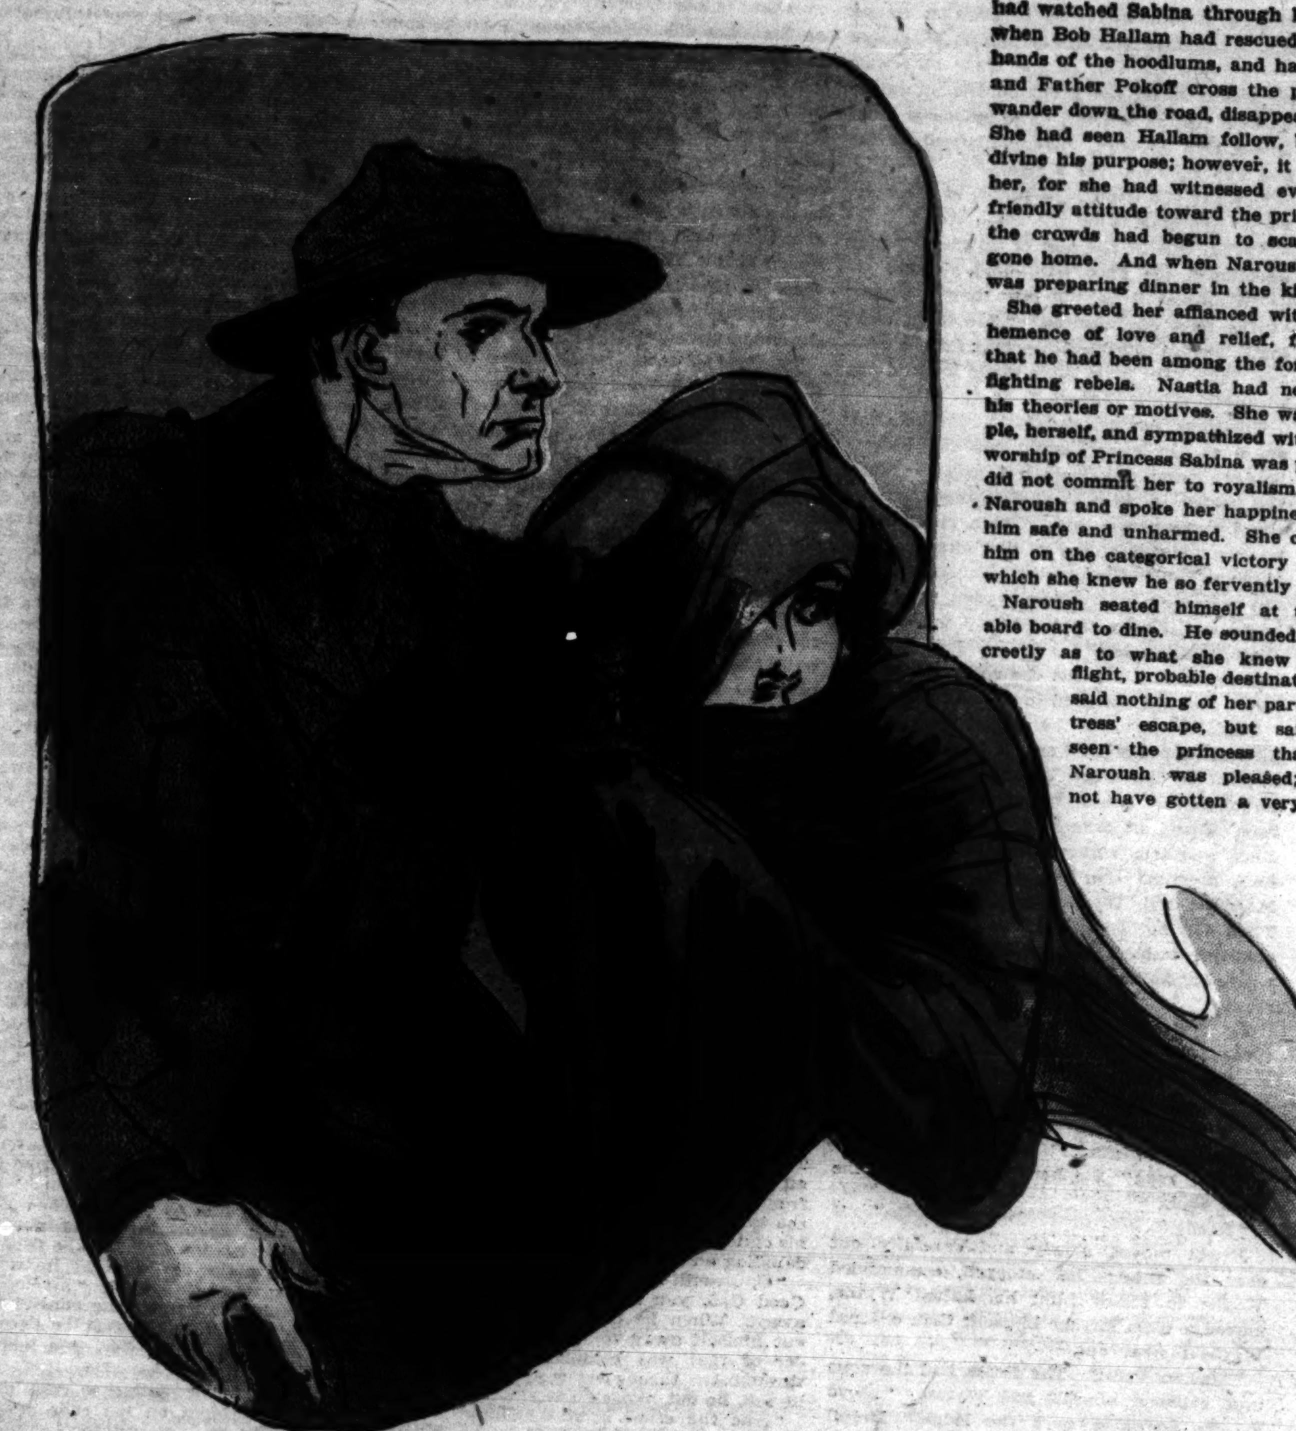
by Jack Lait

SYNOPSIS.

Revolution sweeps Grodnia. The king is killed by a mob and his daughter, Princess Sabina, escapes in the garb of a peasant. An aged priest, Father Pokoff, accompanies her in flight. The two meet an American newspaper correspondent, Bob Hallam, who bribes guards to permit them to cross the border.

SECOND INSTALLMENT.

NAROUSH DUPCHINSKY.



THE central riot was over. The sacking of the palace had been accomplished. What treasures the exultant disorderlies could not carry away they had smashed. The king, most of his household retainers, a dozen or more of the nobility, and scores of soldiers who had stood steadfast for the old order, had been butchered. The red flag—a shawl dragged from the head of one of the girls—flapped from the pole above the palace where the ancient banner of Grodnia had flown for centuries. The revolution was complete.

The multitude began to disperse for lack of further "sensations." A few went home. More rambled into the capital city to overrun the cafés and other drinking resorts. Soon the new spirit reigned in these places, too, for the roisterers refused to pay. The currency of the realm had lost its value. What little gold there was had mysteriously disappeared, as gold always does when commercial conditions become unstable. The people demanded liquor. When they refused payment the proprietors refused liquor. Then the people threw out the proprietors, took possession, and drank freely—drank to the long success of anarchy, the utopian condition in which each man may help himself with impunity.

Fights and brawls broke out everywhere. There were no police—the uniforms had been shorn of their official insignia, no man confessed the authority of any other to regulate his ethics, manners, or morals. Girls were forcibly outraged. Food shops were broken in and eaten and stolen bare. What good was this thing, liberty, if it weren't to be applied and exercised for the weal of the downtrodden who were now in the saddle?

All commerce stopped abruptly. There would be no milk next morning. The bakers were preparing no bread. The supply of eatables was exhausted. What profit was there to any man to toil and give his products to drunken vandals, vagabonds, and banditti? But under the effervescent stimulation of new born freedom, who could think of tomorrow? Tomorrow would take care of itself; after all, it was the great underlying principle that truly counted; minor physical minutiæ, such as food, justice, virtue, order, security of life and limb would work themselves out all in good time. Considerations so mundane and vulgar as these only would blight the festive holiday.

In the throne room in the palace the central clique of bolsheviki, the propagandists who had started the movement which had now swept everything before its might, the brave leaders who had fought and slain with their own crimson hands for the cause, were in star chamber conference. The new ruling power was being organized. It contemplated death as punishment for disloyalty to the bolshevik rule; it appointed officers to enforce such laws as suited the men in command to proclaim; it levied taxes, heavy ones. Just where the new machine was an improvement upon the old one which had been junked no one pointed out. The people had changed masters.

Exactly as kings throw up forts, organize armies, threaten their enemies, punish dissenters, reward supporters, the bolshevik council put heads together on the main purpose—to hold the power it had seized. The principal peril, as it appeared to the councilors (had they not been in power they would have been conspirators) was to destroy all possibility of a return to the royal rule. There must be no heir to nurse a claim which might some day be a nucleus for a counter revolution. And the disciples of untrammeled freedom found the same solution for their fears as the kings had always utilized for theirs—death to those who stood in the way.

The mob had already, by acclamation, spoken the death verdict on Princess Sabina. The council now unanimously ratified it. But where was she? She must be found before the sentence could be executed.

At the table sat Naroush Dupchinsky.

A young giant was he, with swarthy features of Greek rather than Slavonic type, bushy and wiry of hair. His black eyes burned with the sheen of devotional enthusiasm. He was an anarchist in his heart, had been from the very first, through the days when it meant the gibbet to be exposed as one of those who now were the aristocrats, the slave drivers of the realm. His profile was handsome; it was girlish without seeming weak. A baby faced Apollo was Dupchinsky. He was clad in the velvet jacket of the Grodnian commoner. His white shirt was open at his massive throat, and the grizzly hair of his heaving chest sprouted out above the juncture of that garment. His sinewy hands, bruised with battle, bloody with victory, were upon the board before him.

He had been a student, of that class of sons of artisans and small merchants who form most ready and malleable raw material for the growth of iconoclastic movements in east European countries. He had been schooled and developed by the wealthier partisans of the expanding radical party, and he had justified to the last extreme the investment. He was willing, burningly eager, to yet further repay his benefactors and serve his convictions.

"I will go forth and seek this princess. And when I find her I will drive a knife into her heart in the name of liberty," he cried, rising and smiting the table with his fist.

Cheers greeted the volunteer, the hero of the hour. The whiskered elders, trembling with admiring joy, kissed the lad, thumped his broad back, grasped and fondled his stained hands.

"Go, then, my loyal lad," said the high chief of the inner council, "and when you have successfully accomplished your noble mission, as we all have full faith you shall, return to Grodnia, and a grateful government will enrich you, hail you an idol, give you a post of influence and lofty elevation, as is fitting so brave, so patriotic, and so courageous a son."

"To do my duty to the red flag and the suffering downtrodden of Grodnia is enough inspiration, enough reward," answered Naroush, solemnly. "I thank you for your praise and your promises. I thank you for intrusting to me so vital a mission. I will start at once. I will go to America, for it is there, almost beyond doubt, that this spawn of a wretched and unnatural system, royalty, will seek to hide, like a criminal from the hand of the avenging laws of mankind."

He was provided with money, further toasted and thanked, and sent forth with his heart pounding. He had become the official emissary of a great government, assigned to a task of gravest moment, promised a high office. It had been a wonderful day. Despotism had been uprooted, the red shawl flew bravely to the winds, winds no more free than Grodnia and its victimized people. Now to say farewell to his sweetheart, Nastia.

For almost a year Naroush had been the affianced husband of Nastia, the boudoir maid to Princess Sabina. Nastia, in her love for him, had unwittingly given him many court secrets. Naroush had never truly cared for the girl. All his warmest interests had been in the cause, and he had courted and won Nastia rather to extract from her what he could learn of what she could learn than because he loved her.

She was a pretty child and he was fond of her, and she unquestioningly accepted his avowals as the language of true affection. She had never deliberately betrayed her princess, whom she loved more dearly than she did her life or her happiness or Naroush or anything else. But she had gossiped with sometimes loose tongue in those hours when sweethearts hold hands and bandy confidences. She had been very useful to Naroush. She might be once more—this time, thought he, more than ever before.

Naroush wandered into town, toward the home of Nastia's mother. He had not seen the girl for two days, having immersed himself entirely in the frothing consummation of the anarchist uprising.

Nastia, after the escape of the princess, had slipped on a cloak over her undergarments, and mingled with the Grodnians. She had watched Sabina through her adventure, when Bob Hallam had rescued her from the hands of the hoodlums, and had seen Sabina and Father Pokoff cross the palace bounds, wander down the road, disappear at the turn. She had seen Hallam follow, but could not divine his purpose; however, it did not alarm her, for she had witnessed evidence of his friendly attitude toward the princess. When the crowds had begun to scatter she had gone home. And when Naroush arrived she was preparing dinner in the kitchen.

She greeted her affianced with sincere vehemence of love and relief, for she knew that he had been among the foremost of the fighting rebels. Nastia had never disputed his theories or motives. She was of the people, herself, and sympathized with them. Her worship of Princess Sabina was personal, and did not commit her to royalism. She kissed Naroush and spoke her happiness at finding him safe and unharmed. She congratulated him on the categorical victory of the cause which she knew he so fervently advanced.

Naroush seated himself at the comfortable board to dine. He sounded the girl discreetly as to what she knew of Sabina's flight, probable destination. Nastia said nothing of her part in her mistress' escape, but said she had seen the princess that morning. Naroush was pleased; she could not have gotten a very long start, then. Nastia had heard the barbaric throng cry for the blood of Sabina, and she did not intend, even for Naroush, to help in her capture and execution. So she told of neither the disguise nor the direction which Sabina and the priest had taken. As to the plans of the princess after clearing the palace gates, she sincerely knew nothing.

The pledged assassin was withholding the news of his own departure, knowing that the intelligence would throw his sweetheart into a tremor in which she would yield no helpful information. So, having pumped Nastia of all that she would tell—all, he thought, that she could tell—he beckoned her, seated her on his knee, and said quietly:

"Little one, I am going away for awhile."

Nastia jumped up in alarm and displeased surprise.

"Be calm and brave," he said, drawing her down again. "My chiefs have honored me with a foreign assignment of secret character and immense significance for the cause of the people of Grodnia. I am going first to New York. That is all I can tell you. Where I must go from there, and how long I may be held away from you, are consequences entirely dependent upon the progress of my work. Now, you will be a true little sweetheart, and wait for me patiently."

Nastia began to sniffle, then fell to heaving and shaking, bursting into sobs and tears. Everything was in a turmoil, pillaging and plundering were tearing the safety and tranquillity of existence into chaotic frenzy, and now her Naroush was to leave her and go wandering off, no one knew how far or for how long, on political business. Bitterly worried, already, for Sabina, whose plight and perils no one understood better than this amiable girl who had been so close to her when life was undisturbed, Nastia took the new blow with stunned grief, unashamed.

Dupchinsky became a bit out of humor with her. He had had a day of fierce excitements, he throbbed with the gravity of his new mission, and here he had to play nursemaid to a weeping female toward whom he had never been able to feel ardent affections. He spoke sharply and severely.

"Tut, tut, now," scolded Naroush. "This must cease. Here I have been one of the deliverers of a nation, further singled out as the bearer of a commission which may immortalize me, and you whine and wiggle as though I had been guilty of some offense toward you."

"No, dearest, it isn't that," answered Nastia, attempting to choke down the manifestations of her emotions. "I am only shocked that you must be away from me. I am not blaming. I am very proud of you, and I hope that you will return, decorated with new glories. But I shall be so afraid, and so lonesome—cut off in one day from my princess and my adored one. That is why I wept. But I shall not make you cross again with my weak surrender to my sorrows. See? I am not crying now. Kiss me, my noble one."

Naroush kissed her indulgently.

"If by any chance," he ventured, "I should meet the princess anywhere, shall I give her any word from you?"

"O, I think that scarcely likely. The world is large. And then, you wouldn't know her. You have never seen her, close."

"O, a princess cannot hide herself very long."

"She may not be wearing a coronet and carrying a scepter now," said Nastia. "Besides, she probably had a haven, somewhere, all prepared."

"Probably?"

"I am merely guessing. I haven't the remotest knowledge or even suspicion of where she has gone. But, should you by chance encounter her, you might say that her Nastia loves her and hopes that no harm or hurt shall come to her."

"That scarcely becomes the free born daughter of a newly liberated people," snarled Naroush. "Are you sympathizing with these corrupt and unspeakable robbers whom we, the friends and crusaders of the right and justice, have overcome and abolished?"

"Whatever Princess Sabina may be," said Nastia, "she is a woman—a girl. I take no sides in the policies of government. I am pleased, of course, that all men and women are to be free in Grodnia. But to her royal highness I can never feel anything but reverence and fealty."

The attitude nettled Naroush, but he did not stop to argue the matter. He bade the girl adieu, kissed her, and went away, off on his journey to where he instinctively felt he would find Sabina, and give her a message far different from the one of well wishing which Nastia sent. He had failed to extract any valuable help from Nastia. He must now be up and strenuous on his own resources. The world was before him. And Sabina was in that world. He would run her down. He had sworn it on yonder red shawl, which to him was the flag of destiny.

At the docks, in the seaport town whence vessels were sailing for distant havens, Father Pokoff was escorting the princess into the hold, below decks, where he had taken steerage room for two. He had decided that there was less danger of discovery among the poor travelers; on the upper decks would be diplomats and tourists, any of whom might recognize the royal refugee.

The odor of under decks nauseated the delicate girl, even before the liner had gotten under way. But she had gamely steeled herself for the ordeals from which there was no easy choice. Her face was pale but set. Her hands were now grimed and red from the wind, and no external symptoms of nobility marked her. She and the father had walked almost a hundred miles in all, and had spent one night sleeping out of doors because, with thousands of returning soldiers jamming every village, no inn accommodations had been procurable. On the heavy shoes was the mud of the roads. Tied in a bandanna kerchief she carried some eatables. In a cheap handbag her night clothes and a few other essentials were conveyed.

Hundreds of Europeans, gathered largely from the interior countries where living conditions had become intolerable, were noisily entering the ship. They were a handful of the millions who were shackled to their homes, doomed to remain behind and endure the bleeding, starving evolution of the earth's new distributions of property and might. A motley, polyglot lot were these travelers, smelling of garlic and of bad whisky, chattering in a babel of many dialects of many guttural tongues. They were coming to the land of golden promise. They were going to suck of the bounties of prosperity and peace created by others, and they were shameless in their glee over it.

Among them strode Naroush Dupchinsky, the bolshevist. He had deemed it more discreet to book steerage, so that it might not be suspected that he carried a momentous trust. The princess had been compelled to tarry in port for two days, while waiting the sailing, and to arrange for a false passport, which she had bought for gold, the most potent influence which she now possessed. The name on her papers was Sophia Gorov.

With a great shouting and hubbub the liner put off at last. Past the harbor lines, into the bay, forth upon the deep swell of the Atlantic it steamed. Sabina saw the outlines of Europe grow dim, then evaporate. She felt more safe than she had during her irritating delay on shore. That the man who had been sent to kill her was within sight of her, on the boat, she did not dream. It promised to be an uncomfortable, distressing journey, but she had screwed up her endurance against it. And, across that ocean lay to her, as well as to these impoverished deserters, the land of prospect. There she hoped to hide and wait. Her plans were probably less defined than those of the most inconsequential pauper aboard. But she had not fled from choice. She had not abdicated. Life, itself, whatever it might hold for her, had lured her off.

She sat, thinking thus, when the restless eyes of Dupchinsky, scanning face after face, fell upon hers. He saw her with a start. Wrapped up as he was in his cause, he was fascinated. Never had he seen such beauty.

He stalked to where she sat, and addressed her in native Grodnian, surmising from her costume that she would understand. She was nettled rather than startled at his brusque address.

"You are from Grodnia?" he asked.

"I don't know you," she answered.

"O, come, come. We have more than a week to be together in this hell of a hole. Fellow travelers needn't be introduced. My name is Levandovsky. What's yours?"

Sabina realized that she could not well become indignant. She had laid herself open to such as this when she had assumed the livery of castless poverty. There would be endless hours of gossiping during that tedious voyage. She must not attract extraordinary notice. She told him her assumed name and wisely decided to tolerate this boor's overtures. He seated himself beside her.

"Strange, I never met you at home," he said. "I thought I'd seen all the pretty girls in the land."

"I seldom left my father's farm. We lived some miles from the city."

Father Pokoff, alarmed at seeing his ward in conversation with a stranger, joined them. He, too, had changed his name, and was now Father Petroff. Sabina introduced the two. Naroush was not delighted with the addition to the party. But thereafter, during the remainder of the time at sea, the father seldom left his charge for an instant.

Dupchinsky was not of the diffident sort. When he saw that he could not conveniently be rid of the priest, he pushed his wooing within his hearing. Before the day had passed he had bluntly spoken his admiration. There were no private cabins below. Sabina could do little to avoid this outspoken vulgarian. There was nothing but to suffer his clumsy courting with what patience she could muster.

Day after day he harassed her, followed her about, even tried to hold her hand. When he saw another youth ogling her he openly threatened him with violence. He forced rude dainties on her. When she pleaded seasickness he grew only more attentive and stubbornly steadfast. The priest, alone, was able, by his constant presence, to temper somewhat the unsubtle lovemaking of the handsome commoner, who was determined to win the beautiful girl. Finally he drove it to a proposal of marriage, and then Sabina lost all composure. Even a peasant girl had the right to refuse to marry a man she did not love. She told him so, and asked him to let her alone. He surlily complied, but studiously contrived to be where he could stare at her. The day before the boat landed he again insisted on expounding his eligibilities. Again Sabina told him that she was not anxious to marry, and would not marry him.

There was a sneer upon the presentable features of the bolshevist as he took the rebuff. He was thinking that this poor little slavey would perhaps have spoken out of the other side of her mouth had she known—had he been in position to inform her—of his political standing. She was thinking that she wished that lighthearted American correspondent, Hallam, the volunteer friend who had fought for her and guided her when she was in the toils, were with her; he would thrash this oversized intruder with a few of those Yankee punches, for her.

Dupchinsky bowed, and asked whether she would be good enough to give him her future address in New York, so that he might call, later, when he would be in better position, perhaps, to interest her. She answered "No," without qualification. He courtesied ceremoniously, ironically, and left her.

The eventful morning came. When the steerage passengers rubbed their eyes they were lying within sight of the Statue of Liberty. Within a few hours, hours crowded with pulsing furore, the vessel docked, the bridges were cast, and the parade into and through Ellis island, the receiving gate of the earthly heaven, was on. Sabina and Father Pokoff deemed it not extravagant to charter a taxi. They gave the driver a slip of paper upon which was written an address in the lower east side, where lived some relatives of a Grodnian whom they had met on board, and who could probably aid them in finding economical lodgings amid the poor, where they could pass unobserved as humble strangers.

When the vehicle began threading its course through the labyrinthian ways of New York's older sections the princess was captivated by a rapt interest in the strange sights, the unaccustomed manners, the bewildering maze of people, the jumble of traffic, the thundering elevated railroads, the cobbled streets, the bellowing newsboys. Out of this network of conflicting yet intergearing activities she was to extract her individual destiny; in the confusion of this whirling compound of many heterogeneous ingredients she was to find seclusion and safety.

Perhaps.

Dupchinsky stalked to where she sat and addressed her in native Grodnian. Sabina was nettled rather than startled at his brusque address.

The DEAR LITTLE DEER

by ELLIOTT FLOWER

Its Rule in a Small Circle Was Absolute.

YOU may think a deer a gentle and harmless animal, but you will be wasting your time if you try to make Bill Coggin believe it.

"Alongside a real busy deer," says Bill, "you don't have no chance at all, 'specially if it's a tame deer. The tamer they are the wusser they are."

And Pegleg Timmy, who was with Bill on a certain memorable occasion, will tell you that "no lame man knows how fast he kin go until he gits matched up with a deer that he ain't expectin' to meet."

In proof of this Pegleg asserts that at the conclusion of the race he was leading the deer by two laps around a tree, while Bill gloomily informs you that he was the tree.

However, we shall get to that later.

The deer was the property of Miss Lucy Pelham and was cordially disliked by a young man of the name of Edgar Drake, the reason for this dislike being that Lucy lavished upon the deer various evidences of favor and affection that Edgar would have preferred to monopolize for himself. Possibly she did this because she saw that it tantalized him. Anyhow she made Deary, as she had christened the deer, decidedly unpopular with the young man, and it not unnaturally followed that the young man made himself decidedly unpopular with the deer.

Lucy's father, who was something of a sportsman, had brought the deer (then a fawn) back from one of his hunting trips, and Lucy and her friends had promptly made a pet of it. At night it was bedded away in a wire mesh pen next to the garage, but during the day it had considerable freedom, following Lucy about and romping with her on the lawn, although its radius of action even then was usually limited by a rope.

Within the limits of that rope Deary was supreme, but her authority was not disagreeably exercised except in the case of Edgar Drake. She would keep the length of the rope between herself and him while he was looking, and then when he was off his guard she would unexpectedly bunt him out of range. It followed, therefore, that whenever Lucy settled herself comfortably and invitingly on the lawn within the radius of that rope it was impossible for Edgar to seat himself beside her with any hope of peace. Deary's attacks were never vicious, but they were persistent, and Lucy, finding this amusing, was forever luring Edgar within the forbidden circle. This, added to her endearments of the deer, would have exasperated any young man.

Returning from the theater one evening, Edgar and Lucy crossed Deary's orbit at a time when Deary should not have been orbiting at all. It was early for Edgar and Lucy, who had found the play too dull to hold them for more than one act, but it was late for Deary. Nevertheless Deary was there. Some one had neglected to put her away in her nice little pen and she was sleeping lightly under the tree to which she had been tethered in the afternoon.

All unmindful of this, Edgar was urging upon Lucy the importance of an early wedding and the establishment of a home in which Dreary should have no place, when he was suddenly impelled by unexpected pressure from behind to quicken his pace.

No doubt this was an amusing sight. Anyhow Lucy laughed. But Edgar did not laugh.

"Damn that brute!" exclaimed Edgar, and it was evident that he meant just exactly what he said.

Lucy's laugh was checked instantly, and she turned upon him with blazing eyes. "Don't you dare swear at my deer!" she cried indignantly. "I won't have it!"

"Well, you tell your deer to let me alone," he grumbled, "or you certainly won't have it long."

"A threat!" she exclaimed. "A threat against Deary! Now, just for that I won't marry you at all! And you needn't come in with me, either," she added when they reached the door. "You've shown the kind of a brute you are, and I won't have anything more to do with you. A man who would swear at and threaten a dear little deer wouldn't be above beating his wife."

That alarmed him, and he tried to pacify her, but he had gone too far. Some things she might forgive, but unkindness and injustice to Deary she could not.

He reminded her that her father and mother were out, the maid probably already asleep, and that to all intents and purposes she would be alone in the house. It would be better, therefore, for him to remain until her parents returned. But although ordinarily a timid girl, she now scorned his protection.

"I have Deary," she said, merely by way of exasperating him still further.

"Deary!" he cried angrily. "O, sure! Very likely there's a mouse in the cellar, too, to scare people away."

"I notice," was her caustic rejoinder, "that Deary makes you keep your distance; and," she added, "you'll have to apologize to her before I'll ever speak to you again."

"Apologize! Apologize to a deer!"

"I shall expect it," she said coldly. "Deary is more than a mere deer."

And the next moment he found himself facing a closed door.

Angry and disconsolate, he turned away. To be ruthlessly interrupted by a mere deer when touching upon matters close to the heart was enough to make any young man angry, and the unpleasant words following were enough to make any young man disconsolate. Edgar wondered when, if ever, he would have another chance to say what he wanted to say. It had been tacitly understood for some time that he and Lucy would marry, but this was the first time he had reached the point of turning that tacit understanding into a formal engagement. And now she said she wouldn't marry him—not only wouldn't marry him but wouldn't even speak to him until he apologized to a deer.

Passing an unfinished building, Edgar found a convenient pile of lumber and sat down to think it all over. It was a suburban street, dark and deserted, and he had some time to wait for his interurban car anyway, so there seemed to be opportunity here for undisturbed reflection. And there was such opportunity. He was not disturbed, and he became so busy commiserating himself that he forgot about time and cars until he was suddenly aroused by a scream, followed by another scream, and then a third. He sprang to his feet and raced back——

However, we shall get to that later, journeying with Bill Coggin and Pegleg Timmy by another route.

Bill and Pegleg had been scouting that day—scouting for opportunities—and their scouting had led them to the suburb in which Lucy Pelham and her father and mother lived, the reason being that this suburb was on the far side of town from the suburb in which they had last operated. Bill and Pegleg never played immediate return engagements, always allowing at least three months to elapse before seeking further profit in a locality from which profit had been once extracted. They said it took about three months for the police to get to sleep again.

Bill and Pegleg in their scouting came upon the home of Lucy and her father and mother, and it looked good to them. It was a big old rambling house set far back in spacious grounds. Its very isolation made it attractive to the two scouts, and such investigation as they were able to make added to its attractiveness as a business proposition. There would be "easy money" in it. Lucius Pelham was reputed to be rich, in spite of the fact that he and his wife and daughter lived modestly in this old place, and he would be the more easily robbed because he did live modestly instead of having the place overrun with servants. Then, too, luck further favored—or at least seemed to favor—Bill and Pegleg, for while still scouting they saw Mr. and Mrs. Pelham leave for a dinner engagement in town, followed a little later by Edgar and Lucy. So there would be no one in the house but a maid, who would doubtless retire early.

Bill and Pegleg, not wishing to be observed in the neighborhood, withdrew a little matter of half a mile to a modest place of liquid refreshment and there entertained themselves until an hour when they felt they might reasonably expect the maid to be asleep and the others still absent. They could not foresee that Edgar and Lucy would return ahead of time, and they knew nothing about the deer. Thus it was a distinct shock to them when a rope suddenly came to life as they were crossing the lawn, and the shock was physical as well as mental. In the darkness and the excitement of the moment they were unable to distinguish what startled the rope to action, but it swept their feet, including Pegleg's peg leg, from under them, and they came down hard. This of course was due primarily to the fact that they were strangers and Deary was afraid of strangers. Being awakened from her light sleep by their approach, she had started in haste for elsewhere, and it happened that they were then standing in a loop of the rope.

"Wot hit us?" asked Bill, scrambling to his feet.

Pegleg, peering into the darkness, made no immediate answer, but he did make most strenuous efforts to rise, a feat that his peg leg rendered difficult.

"Help me up!" he cried piteously, after several vain efforts. "Help me up! Git me away! It's a dog as big as a calf."

Bill pulled him up, and the commotion thus made started Deary again. She was at the end of the rope then, so she swung back on the other side of the tree to which she was tethered and by which Bill and Pegleg were standing. Pegleg saw the danger and hopped nimbly out of the new loop thus made, but Bill was not quick enough. The rope caught Bill by the ankles and, suddenly tightening as Deary again reached the limit to which it would permit her to go, yanked those ankles sharply up against the tree, whereupon Bill became immediately and entirely busy trying to maintain his balance.

Deary, being excited, then began circling the tree, meanwhile keeping the length of the ever shortening rope away from it.

Pleadingly at first, then bitterly, then angrily, Bill called upon Pegleg to unleash him, but Pegleg had a problem of his own to solve; he had to keep ahead of that rope that Deary was now industriously winding around the tree. If she gained a lap on him, he would find himself in Bill's plight. However, Deary, at the end of the rope, had farther to travel on each circuit than had Pegleg at the tree, and he managed to keep head of her.

"It's a wonder to me," panted Pegleg as he hopped and skipped along, "that this here dog don't jump in an' bite us!"

"It ain't a dog, y' fool!" retorted Bill. "A dog would be barkin' or growlin'."

"Then what is it?" asked Pegleg, wondering whether he could keep up the pace until the shortened rope gave him a chance to slip past the circling animal.

"I don't know," replied Bill, "an' I ain't anxious to find out. I never figgered on buttin' into a circus, anyway." Then, suddenly, a new and most alarming thought occurred to him. "Say!" he cried, "when he gits wound up to the tree he's got me! An' you ain't goin' to stand fer that, Timmy! Tie me loose, won't you?"

"Can't stop," returned Pegleg. "I'd be gittin' tied up meself if I did."

"Then race him the other way!" pleaded Bill. "If you got to race him, Timmy, race him the other way, so's to unwind me. Be a good felly, Timmy, an' run him backward!"

Pegleg, stumbling along, found this so unreasonable that he lost his temper and made it clear in strong and impolite language that he was not circling the tree for either exercise or amusement, and that the direction in which he circled it was not a matter of choice with him.

Thereupon Bill also lost his temper, and as Pegleg was passing on the next lap he reached out and grabbed him. Pegleg struggled desperately, but the odds were against him. Deary, continuing the circuit of the tree, soon had him as helpless as Bill.

Then Deary, finding no one chasing her, paused to reflect and investigate. Strange noises came from the direction of the tree, and she advanced cautiously. The strange noises were the result of an altercation in which two people were trying to tell each other what they thought of each other, and it was small wonder that Deary did not recognize the language. But they now recognized her, all right, and, as they realized that the basis of their terror was nothing more harmful than a mild-eyed deer, they were moved to laconic and forceful speech that it is better not to repeat here.

Then, being no longer afraid, they stooped to loosen the rope that encircled their legs and feet, and they were thus engaged when they were startled by a scream, then another, then a third.

Following this, they were able to distinguish a feminine figure advancing upon them with a flashlight.

Bill and Pegleg were thus inspired to more desperate efforts to loosen the coils that bound them, but Deary, apparently emboldened by the approach of her mistress, interfered. Or perhaps she thought it was some sort of a game. Anyway, she interfered, and every time that Bill and Pegleg, either or both, leaned over to loosen the coils they instantly straightened up again with new bumps and bruises on their heads. And every time they straightened up, Deary, hastily retreating, took up what slack they had made and tightened their bonds. Deary seemed unable to get the idea out of her mind that a bowed head was an invitation to physical combat and a suddenly upraised head a danger warning.

It was upon this extraordinary scene that Lucy and her flashlight descended.

"What are you doing to Deary?" she demanded indignantly.

"Wot's Deary doin' to us?" retorted Bill. "Every time I try to tie us loose I git me head bumped."

"He's got me scalp loose!" complained Pegleg.

"Take him away!" pleaded Bill.

But Lucy did not take Deary away. Lucy could not. Having turned her light fairly upon the miserable two, Lucy was too full of laughter to interfere. There was a spasmodic down and up movement of the captives as Deary advanced and retreated that was irresistible. But Edgar, arriving then, did not laugh. He had been too much alarmed by the screams to instantly grasp the humor of the situation. He made a rush for Bill and Pegleg.

"No," interposed Lucy, a faint smile lurking back of her uncompromising words; "the prisoners belong to Deary the maligned. She caught them and tied them. You did nothing."

"Nothing!" exclaimed Edgar. "Nothing! I covered a half block in two seconds flat."

"That's nothing," returned Lucy. "Deary caught two burglars."

"Da——" began Edgar.

"Be careful!" cautioned Lucy.

"Look here!" cried Edgar desperately. "I was trying to tell you something a little earlier when that—that——"

"Be careful!" cautioned Lucy again.

"I was trying to tell you that I loved you——"

"We're not alone, you know," suggested Lucy.

"I don't care!" he rejoined resolutely. "I'm going to tell you, anyhow. You know it, but I'm going to tell you, just the same, because I want you——"

"O, as for that," interrupted Lucy, cleverly eluding his outreaching arms, "you must speak to Deary."

"Was that there a menagerie or a dippy-house?" asked Pegleg as the patrol wagon bumped along in the direction of the police station.

Bill confessed grumpily that the problem was too deep for him.

"Did y' see the guy git down on his knees to the deer, askin' pardon fer all he done, which wasn't nothin' to what the deer done to us?" persisted Pegleg the perplexed.

Bill nodded.

"An' then the girl laughed an' kissed him!"

Bill nodded again.

"Well, wot's the joke?" demanded Pegleg.

"Wotever it is," returned Bill bitterly, "it ain't on the deer."

almost horizontal—Breuil would lead; monsier, the senator would be roped next, as his weight was the greatest, and, if he slipped, Breuil would be in position to aid him. Mademoiselle would follow; M. Gregg would take the end of the rope; otherwise all would spend the night on the mountain without food or shelter. And monsieur must decide that at once. Breuil glanced at the sun and took out his watch.

Down in the valley, the people at the hotel were beginning to do the same thing.

"What can be the matter up there?" they questioned the ones with field glasses.

"Whatever it is, it's over now," a man at the telescope assured. "See them moving. They're roped again—right for the summit. The rain must have made ice and the snow slopes are slippery."

The four on the mountain, just coming again to the sheer, could see the crowds pouring from the doors out into the open the better to witness their danger. They could separate the lines of men and women waiting for their turns at the telescopes the closer to follow the precise manner in which the mountain party would pass this peril again, or, if they faltered, drop to death.

Margaret gazed down as Breuil went ahead alone to explore the condition of the ledge, and she shivered in spite of herself.

The ice film over the rocks, upon which all had slipped a little on the ordinarily easy descent to the ledge, already was working its changes. Breuil had forced Wythe to rope second in order for the descent, and since Stephen, without protest, had, therefore, accepted the fourth position, neither Margaret nor Wythe had spoken to him. They had not directly refused to; they had simply refrained from exchanging comment with him; he had recognized this and offered none.

The Swiss finished his exploration and returned.

"Every one must do just as I say and move when I direct and also stop at once. We are ready?"

"Ready, Margaret?" said the senator.

"Yes; ready Stephen?" she passed the word back.

"Ready."

Breuil moved slowly and carefully out over the sheer; he stopped, commanded Wythe to follow him; he halted Wythe, moved a little farther himself; then ordered Wythe farther out.

"Mademoiselle!" The Swiss had the rope taut between himself and Wythe. "Move as she advances over the ledge!" Breuil called to Gregg. "Keep the rope tight between you!"

Stephen stepped slowly along. Twenty feet ahead of him, at the full length of the line between them, Margaret edged her way over the sheer, her slim arms straining high for the faint hold in the icy crack above her head, her small boots sliding along in the slippery fissure lower.

"Rest!" Breuil cried. He guided Wythe's advance then till the slack was taken between Wythe and the girl. The Swiss himself advanced to keep the rope taut between himself and Wythe.

"Now, monsieur!"

Gregg, stepping from the safe rock, thrust a toe into the lower crack; with his arms he reached high and his fingers found the fissure overhead.

Far down in the valley below the hotel, the crowd gasped.

"They're all on the ledge now! They're all over the sheer! . . . By George, it must be bad. Look at the way they move. . . . Or don't move. . . . Yes; always one at a time. . . . There; they're farther out. . . . Yes. . . . Say, what was that? A slip? . . . No; she's caught hold again, if she did. . . . I don't mean her! I mean the duffer ahead. . . . O, that fellow! I see! I see! . . . My God! Good God! . . . He's going! . . . That second fellow—Gregg! You see! He's—and he'll . . . Good God! O, good God! Look at that! . . . Look at that. . . . The guide. . . . Can he— . . . O, Lord! Look at that! . . . O! O! O! . . ."

While the four on the mountain were over the center of the sheer, the second climber had made a false step; struggling wildly in panic to save himself, he had slipped from the crack of the ledge and fallen. As he fell, his struggling weight on the rope dragged first and almost instantly upon the belt of the guide, leading the party. Breuil, instantaneously prepared for meeting the shock, dug toes and fingers far into the cracks and distributed his weight upon all holds as evenly as he could. He managed to hold, therefore, against the first terrific attack of the falling man; he seemed even to shout some warning to the girl, roped on the other side of the falling man, to spur her to such strength as she might exert; but the barest fraction of a second after the guide had supported the shock of the fall, it tore at the girl—the dropping weight of a man. Her fingerholds in the little icy crack overhead at once gave way—this could be plainly seen through the telescopes as she fell backward—her feet jerked from the fissure below and she fell also. Then, while those in the valley stared up, unbreathing and gaping, followed almost instantaneously the next two acts.

The first of these was the deed of Breuil, the Swiss guide from Zermatt.

He had managed to support, by exerting all his skill and strength, the weight of the man falling; he also was able to take the first shocks of the fall of the girl immediately afterward. For during some part of an instant, the drop of both the man and the girl was arrested; they hung suspended by the rope over the sheer; but, though Breuil was able thus to break the fall, he was not placed to be able to maintain himself with the weight of the two dragging on him. Breuil, balanced over the abyss, maintained himself somehow for yet another breath; he turned and shouted something to the man at the other end of the rope, who also still was holding to the ledge. The guide's hand, which could not regain its grasp on the rock, went to his belt; it held something which flashed; then Breuil slipped from the ledge; his body turned and hurtled down, fell past the others and dropped on alone, turning over as it struck against the side of the sheer, and, falling faster and faster as it tumbled, dropped out of sight. For the Swiss, having held as long as he could and long enough to take the first shock of the fall of the other two, had cut himself away as he dropped to spare the man at the other end of the rope, who now clung alone to the ledge and was the sole support of the two who first had fallen.

And that third man, having better position, still held. With the guide gone, the girl and the other man hung on the rope below him. They swung back and forth against the face of the sheer like a great double pendulum, from him. Flattened against the rock above the ledge, with hands and feet straining at his clutch in the crack, alone he held the two dangling on the rope below.

"O, Breuil! The guide! You saw that! Good God, you saw that! He cut himself away! When he couldn't do any more he cut himself away to save them! The wonder of that was beginning to be tongued through the throng below. "The guide! As he fell, he cut himself away!

"And the other is still holding! Wythe! O, look at him! Wythe! Hurrah! Hurrah, Wythe! Hold, hold, old fellow! Good God, look at him! Look at the fight he's making! He's still holding both of them alone! Good God, see him! Help him! Wythe! O, Wythe! Wythe!"

But the fourth figure—the one alone on the ledge and holding the two others on the rope over the sheer—was not Wythe. Though those below could not guess that, Wythe was the second man, the man who slipped first and whose fall caused the disaster. The man now on the ledge, holding the weight of the two others, was Gregg.

He had reached the position, about fifty feet from the upper end of the ledge, known as the "anchorage"—a wider space in the rock fissure offering good grasps for hands and good position for boots. At the first slip and struggle of Wythe he had braced himself strongly, keeping the rope taut between himself and Margaret. He had called to her to try to relieve her fright as she saw Wythe falling; then Wythe's shout for help and her shriek, as she was pulled down, rang together in his ears. At the same instant came the terrible jerk of the fall on the rope about his belt. He bore it, though he slipped and slipped, spent all his strength it seemed—merely preventing himself from slipping further; then, in a spasm of desperation, he regained an inch of his grasp in the crack above his head and bettered, too, his hold with his boots.

During this moment, while he held himself flattened against the rock, he had not dared to look around. He could hear Wythe shouting ceaselessly, senselessly somewhere below; he realized, too, as the struggles on the rope tore at his holds, that Wythe was the one in panic. Breuil's sharp command to Wythe to cease this confirmed it. After the first spasmodic shriek as Margaret fell Stephen had heard no sound from her; she was on the rope, but whether she had been knocked senseless or had fainted he did not know. He tried to call to her before he found he was unable to; he had no breath. Then the last call came from the guide.

"Hold! Hands and feet!"

Stephen turned his head and saw that Breuil, too, was toppling. He saw the Swiss pulled from his holds and try to regain them and fall; he saw Breuil's knife. The guide held it in one hand while he still struggled; he stabbed with it to try to catch it in a tiny crack; it slipped out and Breuil began to fall. But the Swiss was cool to the last; as he felt himself going he slashed in front of him and cut the rope. He went down and Stephen felt the pull and swing of the pendulum of the other two below him. As he pressed against the rock, in spite of no will to do so, he stared down under one arm and saw Breuil's body turning over and over as it fell; then it struck something and glanced away out of sight.

Whatever now might be done Stephen knew he alone must do; and there was only one possible way of saving the others. For a few minutes, perhaps—particularly if Wythe would stop his useless struggling—Stephen might hold the two on the rope if he maintained himself at the "anchorage." But help from the hotel—he knew the disaster must be seen from the hotel—could not possibly reach him in three hours. There was absolutely no chance that he could hold the two on the rope for anything like that time; each second was sapping his strength with alarming swiftness; he felt a dullness already coming over his arms straining above his head and a numbness in the muscles of his legs which dismayed him. The sole chance for Margaret and the man on the rope below her was for Stephen to work his way back fifty feet to the slope at the end of the sheer. Could he accomplish that alone on the ledge with the terrible weight of the two tugging heavier and heavier each second? It was wild, insane, to think that he might succeed, but it was absolutely the only chance for the others.

And as the plan flashed over him the very madness of it warmed him a little and seemed to make his straining arms and legs less numb. Also it gave him breath.

"Margaret," he called down under his arm to her. "I'll try to get back to the slope."

"Yes," she replied. He knew she was conscious then and without panic.

"Don't try to move. For God's sake don't try to do anything!" Wythe, twenty feet below her, bawled. "They'll get help here. They must send help."

Stephen had no strength to waste in answer. He was trying the desperate experiment of shifting one hand a little to the left; he succeeded, without slipping, in moving thus a few inches; he succeeded in moving one foot as far; he got the other hand along; then the other foot. He had gained, without loss of much strength, eight inches of the fifty feet back to the slope. He gained four or five inches more with his breath whistling as he sucked it in; the sweat on his forehead steamed against the ice film on the rock at his face. With twice the effort which won him the first eight inches he gained now a hand's breadth. And his back was cracking; suddenly all the strain which had first numbed his arms and legs came on his back and he bulged a little farther from the rock.

The betrayal of weakening, which this was, drove him to despair when he tried to straighten again and could not. He had struggled hardly a foot of the fifty he would have to make and already he was failing, and he was still at the "anchorage"—the one easier spot upon the sheer. Should he succeed in gaining a foot or two more the crack would be smaller, and more difficult for fingers and feet.

He ceased struggling to rest himself, but with the weight on the rope dragging him there was no rest, simply a cessation of trying to move.

Since he had spoken to Margaret and she had replied to him coolly he had heard no sound from her, but Wythe had been shouting to him almost constantly. At first Wythe continued imploring him not to move; now, as Wythe realized that Gregg was attempting the only action that could save them he prayed and urged Gregg on.

"That's it. Go on! You can make it!" he implored as Stephen halted. "Go on; you can do it. O, don't stop now! Go on! Go on! . . ."

His clamor for his life rose again. Stephen heard it and put off for another moment the demand he was driving himself to make; he tried to shift a hand further to the left, but, as he felt himself giving way as he did so he grabbed for his old hold and clung there. He sucked hard for breath.

"Wythe, I can't go on!"

"You can! Of course you can. You're all right! You——" the awful clamor below replied.

"Wythe, I can't move with you—both! Wythe, I may manage her alone if you——"

"No! No! You can carry us both. You're all right. O, God, Gregg! You can go on; you must! . . ."

The panic below made plain that the demand was understood and was useless. The sacrifice of Breuil, the guide, could mean nothing to Wythe at that moment; hanging at the end of the rope, he was crying for every instant left of his life. But if he remained on the rope, even he must see that all three must drop; asking him to cut himself loose was asking him only to fall without pulling down the others.

Margaret, hung between the two men, understood that. The men, like the guide, carried knives; she had none. She could not have asked to have herself cut away without, of course, causing Wythe to fall with her. But that demand on Wythe now had been made. "Cut me away, Stephen!" she spoke to him calmly and sanely. "Cut the rope!" she repeated. "I've no knife or I'd cut it myself!"

"No! For God's sake! No! You're all right, Gregg! You won't—you won——"

Down in the valley the people before the hotel were standing transfixed, unbreathing. A party of guides and two or three of the most skillful amateur mountaineers already had set off from the chalet on the run. They bore ropes in the pretense that, somehow, they might be in time to help the three over the sheer. But as they ran they called to one another about where on the glacier they should look for bodies fallen from the ledge. And after these guides were gone the crowd before the chalet forgot them; they knew that the fight for life was being made before them. And as they bent, white faced and trembling, and looked through the telescopes, now they sensed the manner of that fight.

"He's trying to work back off the sheer! O, God, he's trying to carry them both back along the lodge! . . . He can't do it! He's trying to and can't. . . . See! See! . . . Now he's going on! . . . No! He's trying to and can't. . . . He could do it with that girl alone, I bet! . . . Yes, if he had her alone, he'd make it! Look at that! O, look at that fight he's making! Good God, he can't stand that much longer! . . . But if that fellow cut himself off! . . . Wythe could save that girl and himself! . . . He won't cut her off! . . . No; but the other fellow! Why—O, why won't he go it alone like the guide! . . . He saw that—how the guide did. . . . Yes, and, now! . . Look! They're falling! . . . There they go together!"

The three figures—the two hanging from the third over the sheer—suddenly were dropping. For the first fifty feet, at least, they kept the same positions as they fell, one above the others; then, striking the side of the sheer, the three dropped closer together, and as they dropped faster and faster the manner of the fall altered; the three figures struck some sloping slab protruding from the sheer and shot on sideways and dashed down toward the glacier and disappeared.

A great cry arose from the crowd before the chalet as they witnessed this; but the guides who had started for the glacier shouted excitedly to one another and ran faster as they saw the change in the character of the fall. For instead now of being dashed to certain death straight down upon the glacier, the slab had deflected the three so as to hurl them on an angle over the snow slopes above the ice. One of the guides ran back to see that stretchers and stimulants would be sent. And so, late in the afternoon, as the guides completed the detour to the base of Kamuron and at last gained the glacier, they heard a man's voice calling weakly; and they found a man, with leg broken and with an arm useless, crawling toward them.

They recognized him and ran toward him with a shout of admiration; for it was Wythe, their hero. They picked him up and gave him wine and bore him tenderly, solicitously, whispering to him their wonder at what they had seen him do.

He pointed them to where lay the other two who had fallen with him, but they were motionless and cold upon the snow. Wythe had worked over them; he had loosed the rope from them and tried to find life, but had failed. Breuil, he believed, also was dead further back in a crevasse.

So, first of all, the guides bore Wythe, weak but coherent, back to the chalet, where people greeted him with whispers and with bared heads, while the telegraph wires, bearing the news of the disaster, told that Senator Wythe, who had made the marvelous fight for the lives of two companions and had chosen to be dragged down with them rather than save himself alone, had been brought back conscious and would live.

It was not till late that evening, after the body of Breuil was recovered and taken down to the chalet with the forms of the other two that a physician found that only Breuil was dead; life remained in Margaret Alden and in Gregg.

And many weeks passed before Stephen Gregg was allowed to see any other than the nurse and the doctor. Then came the morning when it was told him, without reservation, that he would be completely strong again. They set him up in bed and, when the door of his room opened a young girl, radiant with such love as even the loved one may seldom see, ran to his side and knelt and seized his hands and kissed them.

"Margaret!" he cried to her and, because he was very weak, tears filled his eyes. "They told me you were yourself again. Every day they told me so; but I didn't dream you could be like this. O Margaret, you've never been so beautiful as now!"

"Because I never loved as now, Stephen! O, my own boy, can you take me back with you?"

"Take you back?"

"No; not that. For I don't want to go back. I mean, won't you take me on with you, Stephen, on with you forever!"

"O Margaret! You are sure you want that, dear? You shouldn't say that to me if there is any doubt that he——"

Stephen stopped as he felt her shiver and she hid her face.

"O Stephen, don't speak of him. Did—did they tell you when he thought you and I were dead, as well as Breuil, that he let them say he did what you did?"

"My poor little girl!" Stephen patted her hair. "My poor little girl!"

"Poor?" The word caught her up. "How, Stephen?" She caught him in her arms and kissed him. "I have you and——"

"And I've got you, dearest?"

"And we're going to keep each other forever!"

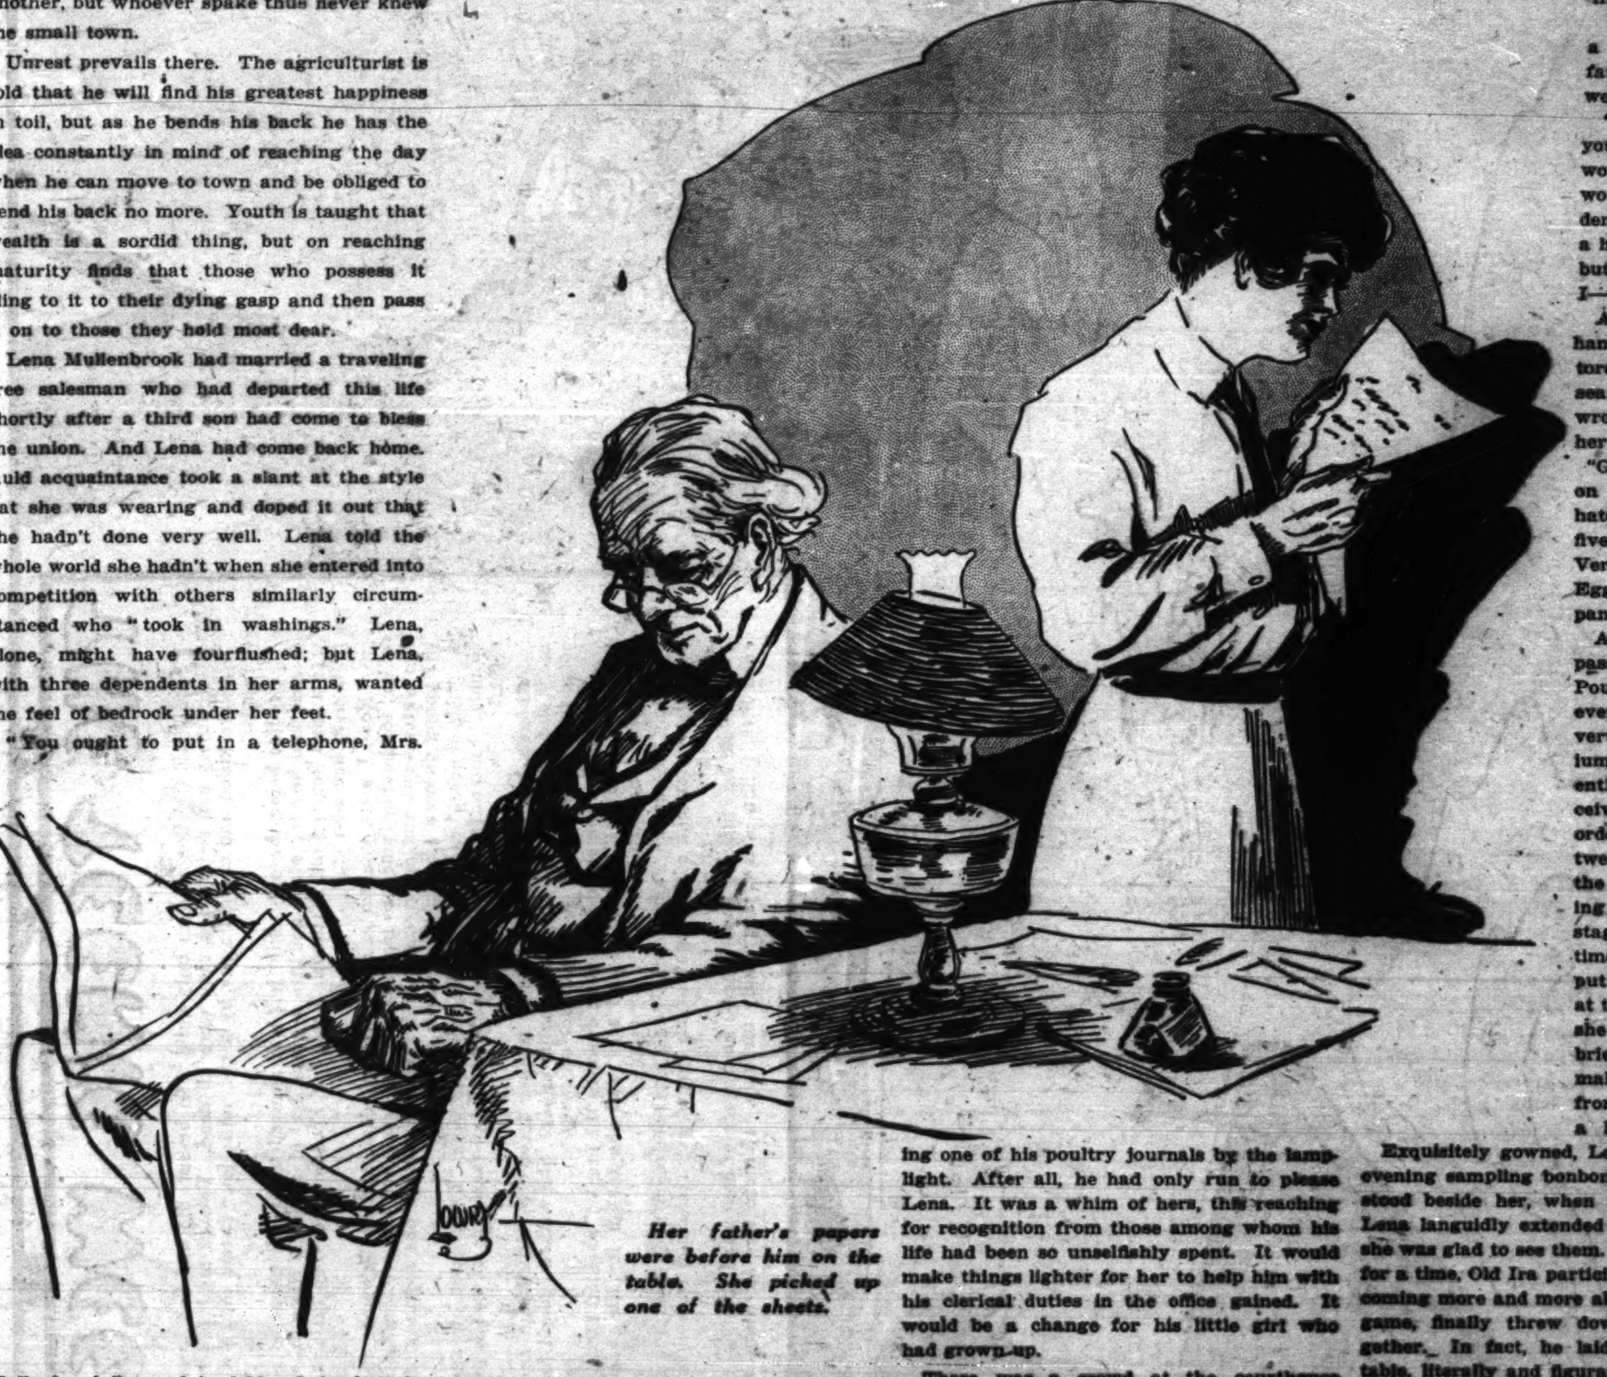
The Turning by Oney Fred Sweet

Lena Proves Herself Less Patient Than Her Pioneer Parent.

THERE might have been a time in its earliest days when no social distinctions were drawn in Prairie Junction, but this period in the town's history was short lived. It has been said that the charm of the small town lies in the fact that one inhabitant therein is considered as good as another, but whoever spake thus never knew the small town.

Unrest prevails there. The agriculturist is told that he will find his greatest happiness in toil, but as he bends his back he has the idea constantly in mind of reaching the day when he can move to town and be obliged to bend his back no more. Youth is taught that wealth is a sordid thing, but on reaching maturity finds that those who possess it cling to it to their dying gasp and then pass it on to those they hold most dear.

Lena Mullenbrook had married a traveling tree salesman who had departed this life shortly after a third son had come to bless the union. And Lena had come back home. Auld acquaintance took a slant at the style hat she was wearing and doped it out that she hadn't done very well. Lena told the whole world she hadn't when she entered into competition with others similarly circumstanced who "took in washings." Lena, alone, might have fourflushed; but Lena, with three dependents in her arms, wanted the feel of bedrock under her feet.



Her father's papers were before him on the table. She picked up one of the sheets.

"You ought to put in a telephone, Mrs. Mullenbrook," complained Mrs. Leland, rushing in one morning while Lena was at the washtub. "But I told my husband I was going to drive down this morning to speak to you about those scorched tablecloths you sent back last week. I was never in my life so put out about a thing."

"I thought maybe you dropped in for a social call," sighed Lena, cranking the wringer, "being that you and I used to sit across the aisle from each other in school. I'm sorry about the tablecloths."

"Being sorry doesn't remedy matters any," shrugged Mrs. Leland.

"I suppose not," agreed Lena. "I don't know, sometimes I get tired working as hard as I do for what there is in it."

"You shouldn't feel that way about it at all," smiled the visitor. "Did you ever read 'The Joy of Work'?"

"I don't get no time to read."

"O, but you should take time," Mrs. Leland went on. "It has always been my theory that we should find contentment in our lot, wherever it may be cast, inasmuch as it is something over which we have no control."

And, leaving the theory behind, Mrs. Leland chugged away in her automobile, having dispensed uplift and reprimand in one and the same dose.

Lena's, father, Old Ira, came into the kitchen—the gray bearded, blue eyed old man who had taken his girl back to the old roof. Little had been said when she had returned. In real life, a family's tragic moments are moments of silences. The day she had come back, Old Ira had chucked the grandchildren, made a commonplace remark about the weather, and the days had crowded along. Old Ira came into the kitchen.

"Pa," began Lena, "you've got to do it whether you want to or not. You've got to run for a county office this spring. There ain't no one can say anything against you except that you let your farm get away from you without getting anything what it was worth. The community you've always helped out owes you something. You've worked hard all your life. You sell your chickens and eggs now for hardly what it costs you for feed. They ought to vote for you, pa, all those folks you've been a real neighbor to since pioneer days."

Old Ira was reluctant, but Lena donned the old style hat that afternoon and went downtown to call on the editor of the local weekly newspaper. She paid for an announcement, which the editor worded to the effect that Old Ira, pioneer resident, who had always voted the straight party ticket, was a candidate for the office of county recorder. The announcement added that since giving up his large farming interests, Old Ira had devoted himself to the raising of Eggaday poultry, with which the vicinity was thoroughly familiar. If elected, the candidate would give the same painstaking attention to the duties of the office.

The printed words were pleasing to the eye, but Old Ira did not prove a whirlwind as a campaigner. He was timid about breezily approaching his fellow man and asking him for his vote, even as he had been approached for so many seasons past. While rival candidates drove through the surrounding country, kissing offspring and passing out cigars on weekdays and became the center of groups on Main street on Saturday afternoon, Old Ira remained on the outskirts of such groups, hesitating. People made promises, but they voted this way and that from peculiar motives.

Yet, Lena scrubbing and drubbing, had faith. Certainly every one knew her patient, patriotic, poor, pathetic parent as she knew him—loved him as she loved him. Certainly, in his enfeebled years, he who had given so much would be given unto. Ira had been of the community in the days when it had struggled into being and the community would remember.

Old Ira did not go downtown on the night following election day. He sat at home reading one of his poultry journals by the lamplight. After all, he had only run to please Lena. It was a whim of hers, this reaching for recognition from those among whom his life had been so unselfishly spent. It would make things lighter for her to help him with his clerical duties in the office gained. It would be a change for his little girl who had grown up.

There was a crowd at, the courthouse where the returns were coming in—men chewing at the ends of cigars that had gone out in the excitement of checking up votes. One of the men turned and saw Lena. It was Mr. Leland. He had been writing figures on a tiny card. The totals were in. He blew a ring of smoke contentedly into the air and showed her the card. In the entire county, Old Ira, "the failure," had received just three votes.

Mr. Leland made no remark, but Lena left the place, the expression that had been on his face burning her brain. She hurried down the courthouse steps and was thankful that night was over the town in which she had been born. There was a light over in the cigar store, the door was open, and the laughter of those within floated across the square.

On the way home Lena passed the Leland place, set far back among the maples. Inside, there was a card game going on and phonograph music—the gathering of a chosen few.

"We should find contentment in our lot," Mrs. Leland had said, "wherever it should be cast, inasmuch as it is something over which we have no control."

Her feet were dragging when she reached the home gate. The house was a deeper shadow against the shadows of the night, save for the inch or two of yellow beneath the point where the shade had been drawn. It meant that the lamp was still burning on the table and that her father still sat beside it, waiting. She walked up the path, climbed the porch steps, opened the door. She gave a sigh of relief; her father was sleeping in his chair.

She took off her wraps and hung them behind the door, clinging to them, wilted, when, after a jab or two, they caught on their hooks.

Her father's papers were before him on the table. She picked up one of the sheets. It was a letter from a neighboring town.

"Dear Sir; I notice by the paper from your town in the announcement of your candidacy for office that you have devoted considerable time to the raising of Eggaday poultry. What is your price for a hatching these eggs?"

Then she picked up a page on which here father had made answer.

"I am in receipt of your inquiry about my wonderful chicks. I would like to have you derive the benefit from a hatching of the eggs, but as to fixing a price, I——"

And here her father's hand had faltered. Lena tore the page to bits, seated herself, and wrote an answer of her own:

"Gentlemen: Our Price on Eggaday eggs for hatching purposes is five dollars a dozen. Very truly yours, the Eggaday Poultry company."

And thus it came to pass that the Eggaday Poultry company was eventually carrying advertisements in mediums that covered the entire middle west, receiving a mail bag of orders daily, carrying twenty employés on the pay roll, and paying an income tax of staggering size. For a time Lena Mullenbrook put in long busy days at the plant, but finally she dropped down to brief morning calls, making the trip to and from her new home in a limousine.

Exquisitely gowned, Lena was sitting one evening sampling bonbons from a tray that stood beside her, when the Lelands called. Lena languidly extended her hand and said she was glad to see them. They played cards for a time, Old Ira participating. Leland, becoming more and more absent minded at the game, finally threw down the cards altogether. In fact, he laid his cards on the table, literally and figuratively.

"Mrs. Mullenbrook," he began, "there is a business proposition I have been wanting to put up to you for some time. I am in a position to let you in on some stocks now which——"

"Which," finished Lena, "would be perfectly worthless to me, but the sale of which would pull you out of a bad hole."

"Surely," smiled Mrs. Leland, "you will do something for us for the sake of auld lang syne. Of course, it's only temporary, but we are in terrible straits. We mustn't let any one know."

"Everybody knows," yawned Lena.

"You mean, then, that there is nothing doing?" flared Leland, rising. "Fortunately, your father is not so pernurious. Fortunately, he——"

"Fortunately, he is entirely under my management nowadays," Lena interrupted. "No, I'll tell you. I am the heroine of this short story, and to a certain extent I am obliged to do and say just what the author of it makes me do and say. I am willing to accept the happy ending stuff, although I don't know why they don't write once in awhile about the Lenas who go on and spend their last days at the washtub. But if the author thinks he can make me lend you the kale that will put you folks back on your feet, he doesn't know me, that's all. I don't know why you should be so worked up, Mrs. Leland, simply because you find yourself broke. We should find contentment with our lot, you know, wherever it may be cast, inasmuch as it is something over which we have no control."

Over the Sheer — pulsively. "Horace, wasn't that—magnificent!"

Senator Horace Wythe, busy with freeing the rope from his waist, nodded with the indulgence to be allowed a young man who had conquered the Matterhorn, the Jungfrau, and Mont Blanc.

"Magnificent because it was with you, Margaret! But," he qualified, "not real mountaineering."

He was a vigorous, fine figure of a man of a year or two over 30 and in perfect physical condition. Side by side with another of the same height and breadth of shoulders—such as Stephen Gregg—Wythe inevitably bore himself so that one thought of him as the taller, the more powerful and dominating. He towered over Gregg now as he finished untying the rope; he tossed the end deftly to the guide. "Miss Alden and Mr. Gregg won't need to be roped to us after this, will they, Breuil?" he said to the Swiss. "It's quite easy above here, I understand."

The compact, efficient little man caught the rope end and glanced from Wythe to the other quickly. "No, monsieur, I will not require any one to be roped till the return here."

Wythe began aiding the girl untie the rope, as the Swiss quietly loosed himself. Gregg stood alone with the rope attached; he seemed a little dazed as he looked back and down and his hands clenched and unclenched quickly at his side.

"You mean we've got to go down that way, too?" he asked the guide.

"Good God!" escaped Stephen Gregg.

Wythe gazed at him curiously; the girl, too, glanced toward him, then admiringly back to Wythe.

He offered his hand to help Margaret over some loose rock; there was a climb of a few hundred yards yet to the summit; but now snow covered everything; and the snow was in good condition. A party of men who had ascended only the day before had cut steps in the crust where the slope was too steep. Wythe led Margaret easily up these.

"You will go on now, monsieur?" Breuil said to his charge courteously.

Gregg, recalling himself from his gaze down to the glacier, glanced up and saw the other two climbing together far overhead; his eyes gleamed and his lips suddenly shut very tight.

"Yes; I'll go on."

They were still ahead when, at 1 o'clock, the people at the chalet called each other's attention to the fact that Margaret Alden and the senator were standing on the summit and signaling that they were safe. Gregg and the guide were the dark spots plainly in sight below. Wythe's and Gregg's figures were still indistinguishable, of course, but every one knew which would be with the girl, if one was alone with her.

Stephen Gregg, as he looked down toward the hotel and saw the crowd replying to the signals from the summit, realized this. Since his arrival in the mountains, the day before, he had recognized that the other guests at the chalet were familiar with the cause of his coming and that the outcome of his contest with Wythe was, to their minds, a foregone conclusion. He appreciated that, in coming to the mountains, he was meeting his rival on Wythe's own grounds; but he had to meet Wythe there or not at all until Margaret would be irretrievably lost. Besides, almost anywhere he might meet Wythe it would be more or less the Senator's grounds. Horace Wythe "had it on him" anywhere. Wythe was not only the youngest senator ever elected from his state; already he was being spoken of as a future presidential possibility. He was popular, handsome, with reputation as a sportsman. Stephen Gregg would claim for himself that he was as young; he was considered good looking, likable, and not unsuccessful as a lawyer. When two years before he had believed he would be able to provide for Margaret, and had asked her to marry him, and she had accepted him, Mrs. Alden in alarm instantly took Margaret away to travel and meet a different sort of man.

This, at first, seemed to promise the usual result. Margaret wrote him daily of her determination to let nothing take her from him. The Aldens were coming home at last from a trip to Japan when they met young Senator Wythe at Kioto. He was returning from the Philippines and crossed with them on the same boat to America. Margaret told, in her last letter from Kobe, about meeting the great young Senator Wythe. She was coming home to Stephen so soon that she would pass any later letter; she was coming home to marry him and never let any one take her away again. Then, from Vancouver, came the first merely friendly and puzzling and alarming note. She thanked him for his flowers which met her on her landing; they were so beautiful. But they weren't to hurry home after all; and she said no more about marrying. Another letter came from Vancouver—a panicky, jerky, conscience stricken tone. Next, she and her mother and father and Horace—that is, Senator Wythe—were staying for a week or two in the Rockies to rest. They might climb a little; it was the mountaineering season, you know. She wished she could see Stephen. She could talk over with him something which was troubling her; she couldn't say it fairly if she wrote it.

He wired her that he was coming at once; she replied not to come. He arrived, and when he found her, troubled and ashamed as much as she was flattered by the notice and popularity which Wythe's attentions brought to her, Stephen was sorry for her. She wished, whatever happened, that Wythe and he should be friends. She insisted that he go with them for their day on the mountain. Wythe, plainly, had planned that expedition to give Stephen his congé; he recognized that Margaret was agreeing with Wythe about what she would do as she went ahead with Wythe from the ledge.

At the summit, Stephen found them waiting for him there on a small, snow crusted plateau. A slab of bare rock protruded to make a windbreak, in the lee of which Breuil lit the alcohol lamp from the lunch kit and made tea. The party ate together silently or with formal remarks; but at last —Stephen had been awaiting the act for some moments—Wythe rose with elaborate carelessness.

"Breuil, let's have a look at the northern arête." And he led the guide off.

Stephen, who had arisen, stood gazing after them till the crags and spurs of rock shut them from sight. He looked down then, with hotly beating heart, at Margaret, who had remained seated on the bowlder, her slim legs stretched before her and her head bent; she showed to him only her soft brown hair under her woolen cap; she was hiding her face. In spite of what he knew was coming—or perhaps because he knew it —Stephen felt his arms straining with their impulse to pick her up, to hold her and hug her to him, and press his lips to her cheek.

She, too, must have been thinking of something like that, for her bare hand was shaking as she raised it and her long lashes were wet as at last she looked up at him.

"Sit down, please, Stephen."

He sank to a bowlder beside her. They were no longer in sight of the telescopes at the hotel nor of any one below. The sun was shining, warm and clear; the air was cool, but the rock slabs kept off the breeze.

"Stephen," she appealed, repeating his name gently again, "you see how it is with me?"

"I see how it is, Margaret."

"And you want me to be free?"

"To marry him, if you wish to? Yes; of course; you knew that."

"I knew that," she said. "Then, Stephen, you—you want me to marry him, don't you?"

"I want you to—" he started to repeat. "That's rather a different question, little Meg."

"What?"

"Wanting you to be free, if you ask that, and wanting you to marry Horace Wythe. Freeing you from any obligation to marry me—that's the only thing to do if you don't love me now."

I never thought it possible, until a few weeks ago, that a moment like this could ever come into my life—a moment when I wouldn't want you, you, you, Stephen, just you!"

"But it's come, Margaret."

"Yes, it's come, Steve! I must tell you the truth. But I must tell you so I won't hurt you more than I must. It's not from less love for you that it's come; but—but——"

"Because of more love for him?"

"No, not exactly that, either. Not more love for him, Stephen—how could I love any one more than you—but more admiration."

"Admiration?"

"O, my old dear boy, it is too awful of me. Did I hurt you too much? Didn't you see that part of it before?"

"That you couldn't be proud of me like you could of him? Of course, I realized that."

"And you wouldn't have me—it wouldn't be right for me to marry you, feeling more admiration for him, would it, Steve?"

His face flushed red and then went very white, and he looked past her off to the mountain peaks to the west; the shadows of clouds were passing over their summits and then the sun burst upon the snow again and the moving shadow and alternate light caught Stephen's eye and he followed the clouds from mountain to mountain.

"This isn't the sort of place for one to say the only right thing for the circumstances. Wait until we get back to the hotel, anyway, Meg; then I'll perjure myself to you —I swear I'll congratulate you and him like a gentleman."

"Stephen, you mean——"

"Don't make me say anything more here. Look at that cloud and the mountains there, you shouldn't put such questions on a mountain top, Meg. At home or down there in the chalet off in a corner by ourselves with the tea things—like a Pinero play—I could have said just what I should. 'I give way to a better man. He will make you happier than I could.'"

"But you don't believe it!"

"Believe he's a better man than I? O, yes, I'll grant that."

"Then wouldn't I be happier with him?"

"How do I know I could make you happy at all? I only know I'd try—O, my God, if I had the chance, I'd try to make you happy. But he——"

"He—what, Stephen?"

He looked away again and paled and held his lips tight; then he turned back to her.

"I've started this, Meg," he said quietly. "I'll see it through. Forgive me afterward, if you can. There are thousands of men more successful than myself who might love you and win your love and admiration, too, and who—I hope I would tell you myself—are better men that I in every way; and if you wanted one of them, I'd tell you to go to him and be happy. But you can't make me send you to Wythe with that.

"For there are two different ways in which a man may win success and fame and honor in this world—and a wife. One is by doing things oneself and taking the reward which belongs to one. That's the slower way, usually, and also the less spectacular; but even if it never wins much, it's the way, I believe, to make a wife happy. The other way gets a man a great deal very quickly; and I guess it's got you for Wythe, too. In that way, a man, besides doing his own bit, simply has to see that he gets the credit and reward of things other people do which they can't or don't claim. It's entirely honest, Meg, as the world goes; there's no law against it and it's not punishable. One isn't at all likely to be caught at it. It's so subtle that sometimes you can scarcely see it when it's being done before you or to you; and he gets to doing it quite unconsciously; but he's doing it all the time just the same."

Stephen saw her draw away as her anger rose. "You mean Horace does that? Name one time," she demanded, "or one instance."

"He's doing it today."

"Today? Where?"

"Here."

"How?"

"In getting you to climb up here with him and in making you, without any experience, run the terrible risk down there on the sheer."

"How does that help him?"

"By keeping him before the public just now. The papers, as even you must know, are criticizing him for his reports on his Philippine trip; his friends are disappointed. Something personally spectacular—as when he climbed the Matterhorn—would be helpful politically just now. Kamuron, with the sheer right in sight of the hotel, is a most spectacular mountain, but climbing it himself would be nothing; it's been ascended scores of times and once or twice already this season; but taking a girl over the sheer is different; it's seldom been done and not at all this year. That would make an event to be telegraphed all over the country, and to be photographed; the moving picture man would be waiting for you at the return to the hotel. So he takes you; and you run the risk—and, O, it was a devilish risk for a girl without experience and with fingers hardly able to touch the top crack. And you get nothing out of it, because you want nothing. But he wins fame for the risk he makes you run.

"I was afraid down there, Margaret; I'll admit it. I was scared half to death. But I was angry, too, that he'd take you there and use you——"

But she was on her feet and looking down at him with blazing eyes. "Stephen!" she cried. "I couldn't have imagined you'd trump up such a thing. I couldn't have pictured you so—petty. But at least you've relieved me about what I ought to do."

She spun from him and faced in the direction of the northern arête, where Wythe and the guide had gone.

"Horace!" she called. "Where are you? Aren't you ever coming back?"

A hail replied from somewhere down the snow slope. Stephen Gregg rose quietly and stood alone looking across the mountains. Wythe and the guide appeared, the Swiss glancing up toward the darker cloud which was drifting toward Kamuron from the west. A sheet of rain fell from it, the drops splattering upon the snow underfoot and wetting the exposed rock. Ice formed immediately, and Breuil, as he observed this, stooped and fingered the rock. The shower was past and no other threatened; indeed, the sun was shining in a few moments and melting the new ice from the exposed surfaces; but in the shadow, the thin, slippery film remained; and the Swiss glanced down the eastern side of the mountain as he prepared for the start of the descent; the steeper rocks and the sheer were in the shadow.

Breuil uncoiled the climbing rope.

"On account of the ice, we had better rope now," he directed, attaching the cord first to Margaret's belt. He roped Wythe with her and then tied Gregg at the end. He himself took the other end of the rope beyond Margaret.

"You've made a mistake," Wythe started to loose himself.

"No, monsieur."

"I am not at the end."

"It is as I wish it, monsieur."

"I am not at the end!" Wythe repeated.

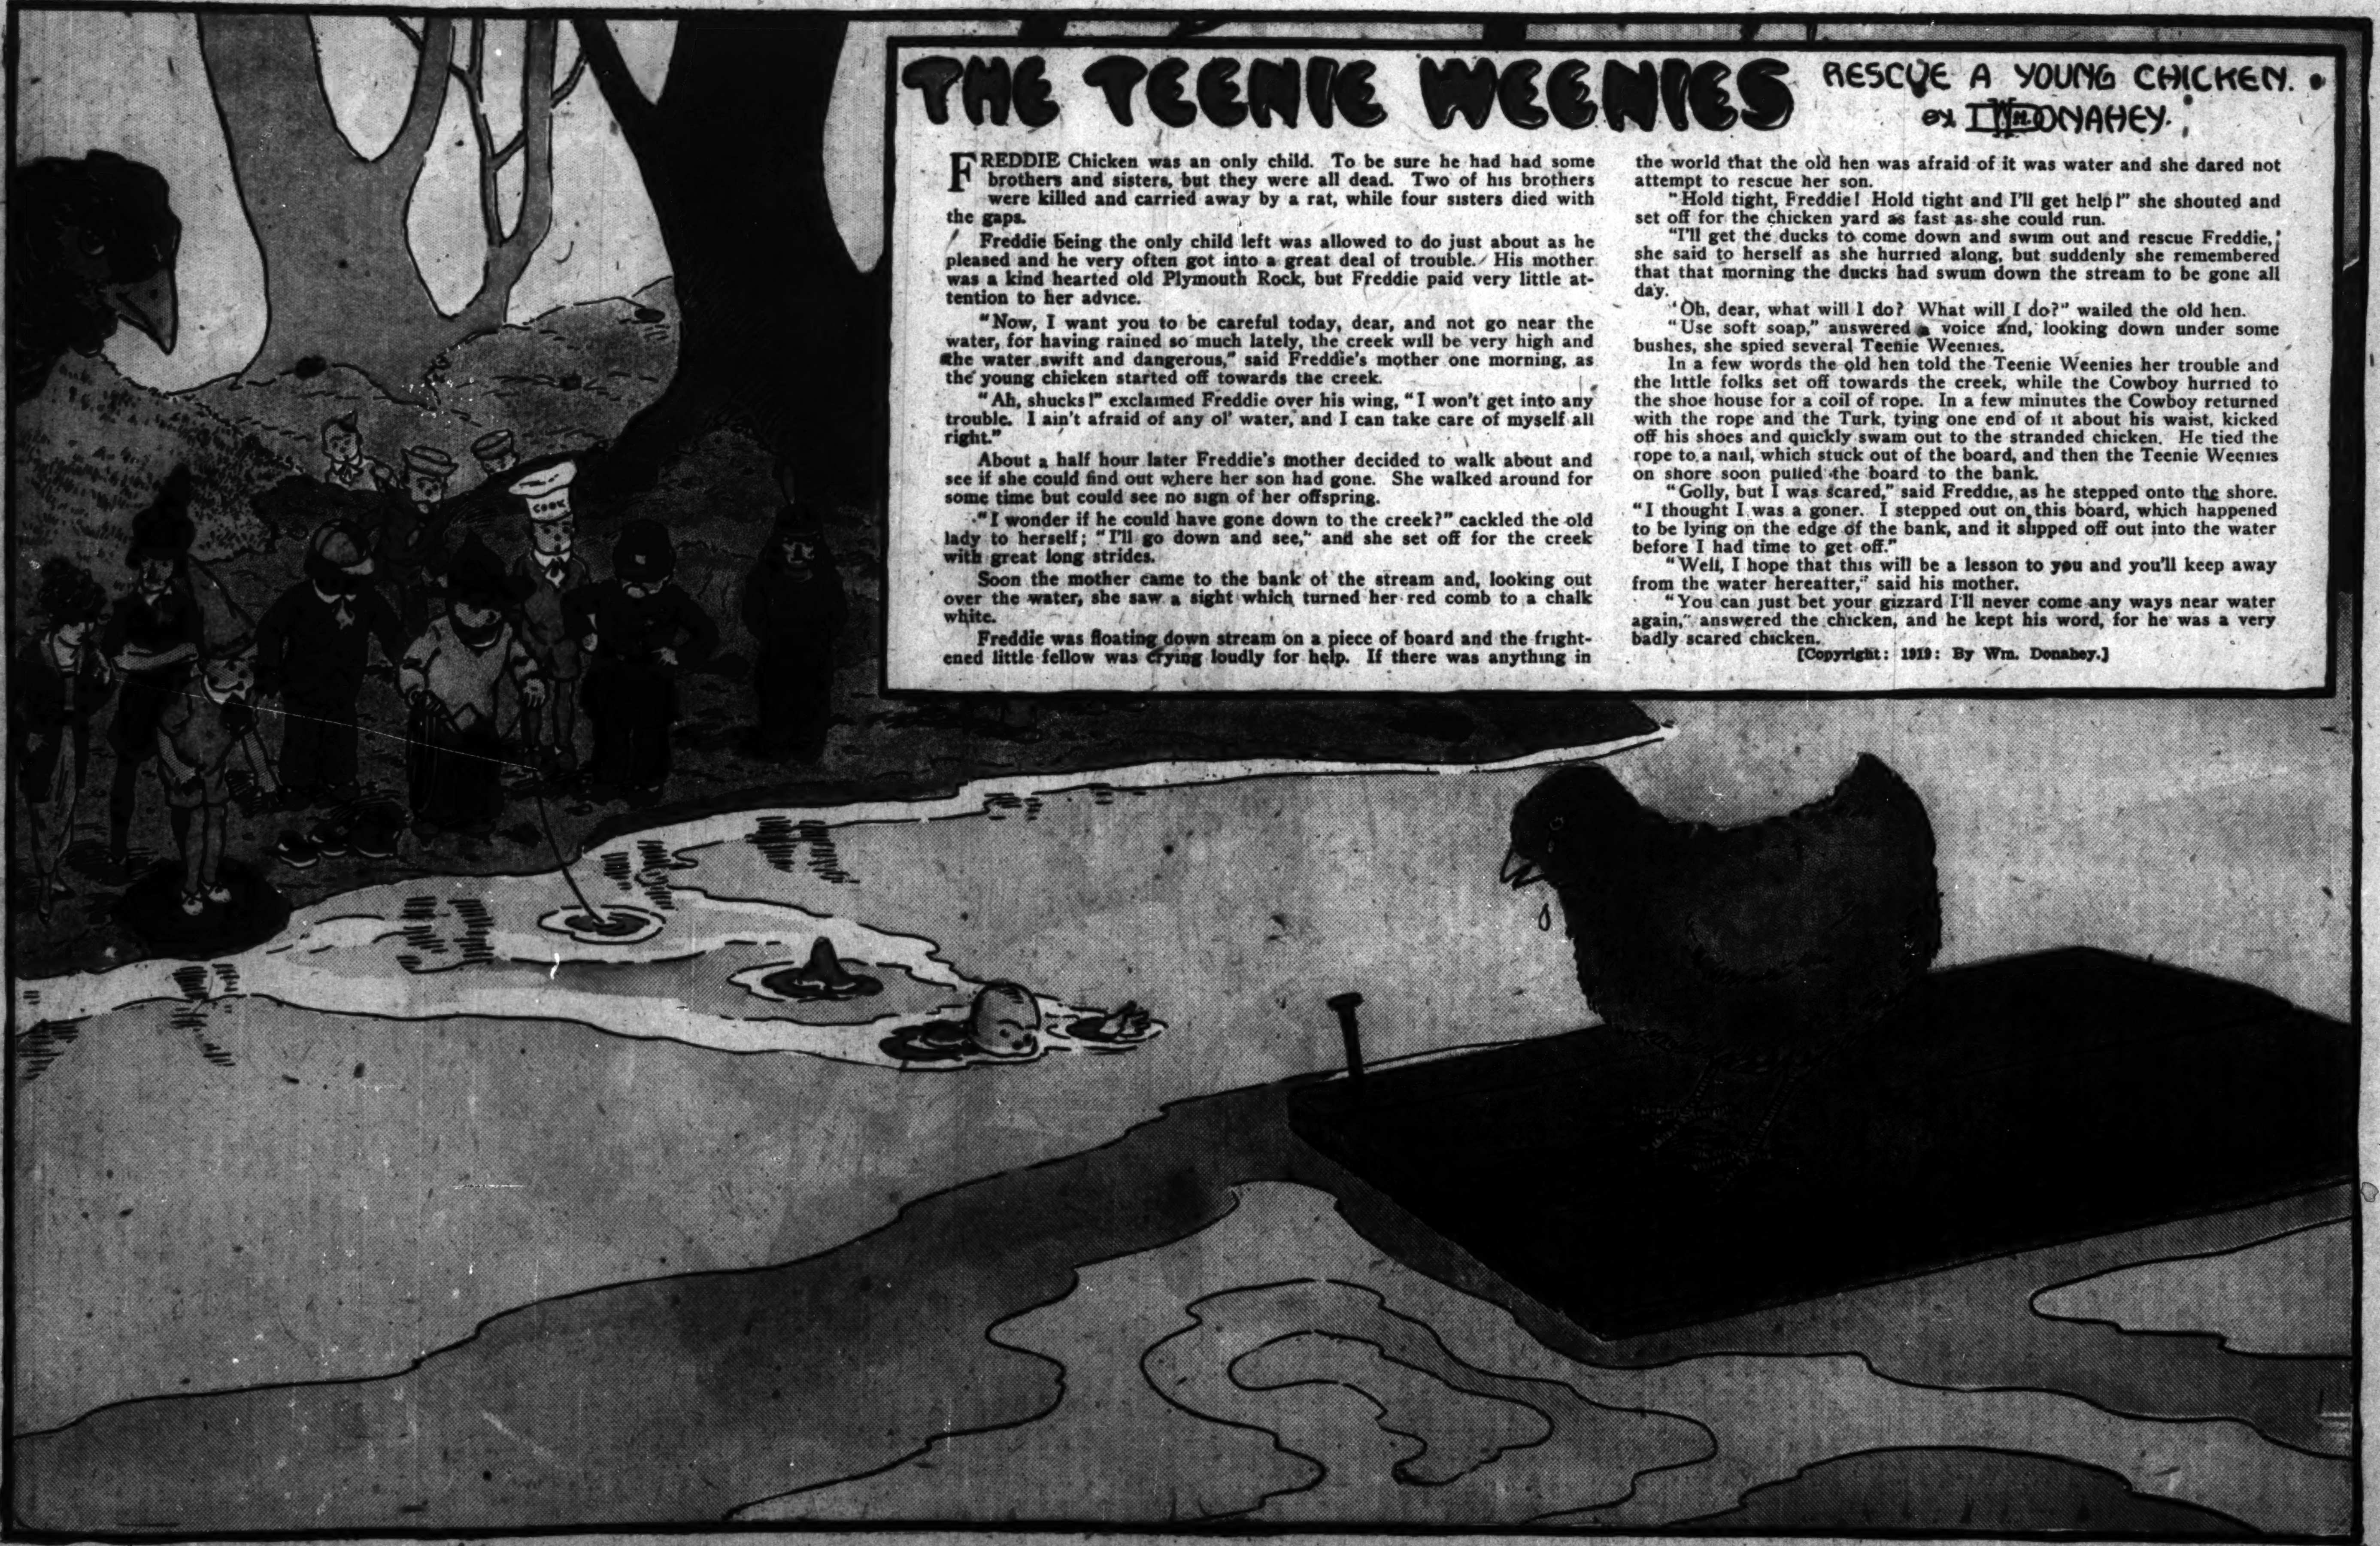
The Swiss gazed down the slope to be descended. "We must be quick," he urged. "The descent will be—different from the coming up. There"—he motioned toward the sheer—"we must require more than care. I desire, at that point, that he have the other end of the rope." Breuil pointed to Gregg.

Wythe dropped the rope from him. "What is the matter with you, Breuil? Mr. Gregg has never climbed."

"He climbed coming up here, monsieur!"

Wythe controlled himself while he explained patiently; he had climbed the Jungfrau, the Mönch, the Matterhorn. Breuil had heard; also he had been a guide on the Matterhorn; he had lived most of his life at Zermatt; so he knew that good guides could push and pull any one up and down even the Matterhorn. This was in reply to some sarcasm from the other side and much acrimony.

Indeed, Breuil himself, with another guide, actually had brought down an unconscious man from close to the summit of the Matterhorn. Breuil here was in charge of the party; he would bring down the party with least risk, or others would descend without him. He had observed both gentlemen carefully. M. Gregg was not expert, but he knew it. At the ledge—the traverse was



THE TEENIE WEENIES RESCUE A YOUNG CHICKEN.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

FREDDIE Chicken was an only child. To be sure he had had some brothers and sisters, but they were all dead. Two of his brothers were killed and carried away by a rat, while four sisters died with the gaps.

Freddie being the only child left was allowed to do just about as he pleased and he very often got into a great deal of trouble. His mother was a kind hearted old Plymouth Rock, but Freddie paid very little attention to her advice.

"Now, I want you to be careful today, dear, and not go near the water, for having rained so much lately, the creek will be very high and the water swift and dangerous," said Freddie's mother one morning, as the young chicken started off towards the creek.

"Ah, shucks!" exclaimed Freddie over his wing, "I won't get into any trouble. I ain't afraid of any ol' water, and I can take care of myself all right."

About a half hour later Freddie's mother decided to walk about and see if she could find out where her son had gone. She walked around for some time but could see no sign of her offspring.

"I wonder if he could have gone down to the creek?" cackled the old lady to herself; "I'll go down and see," and she set off for the creek with great long strides.

Soon the mother came to the bank of the stream and, looking out over the water, she saw a sight which turned her red comb to a chalk white.

Freddie was floating down stream on a piece of board and the frightened little fellow was crying loudly for help. If there was anything in the world that the old hen was afraid of it was water and she dared not attempt to rescue her son.

"Hold tight, Freddie! Hold tight and I'll get help!" she shouted and set off for the chicken yard as fast as she could run.

"I'll get the ducks to come down and swim out and rescue Freddie," she said to herself as she hurried along, but suddenly she remembered that that morning the ducks had swum down the stream to be gone all day.

"Oh, dear, what will I do? What will I do?" wailed the old hen.

"Use soft soap," answered a voice and, looking down under some bushes, she spied several Teenie Weenies.

In a few words the old hen told the Teenie Weenies her trouble and the little folks set off towards the creek, while the Cowboy hurried to the shoe house for a coil of rope. In a few minutes the Cowboy returned with the rope and the Turk, tying one end of it about his waist, kicked off his shoes and quickly swam out to the stranded chicken. He tied the rope to a nail, which stuck out of the board, and then the Teenie Weenies on shore soon pulled the board to the bank.

"Golly, but I was scared," said Freddie, as he stepped onto the shore. "I thought I was a goner. I stepped out on this board, which happened to be lying on the edge of the bank, and it slipped off out into the water before I had time to get off."

"Well, I hope that this will be a lesson to you and you'll keep away from the water hereafter," said his mother.

"You can just bet your gizzard I'll never come any ways near water again," answered the chicken, and he kept his word, for he was a very badly scared chicken.

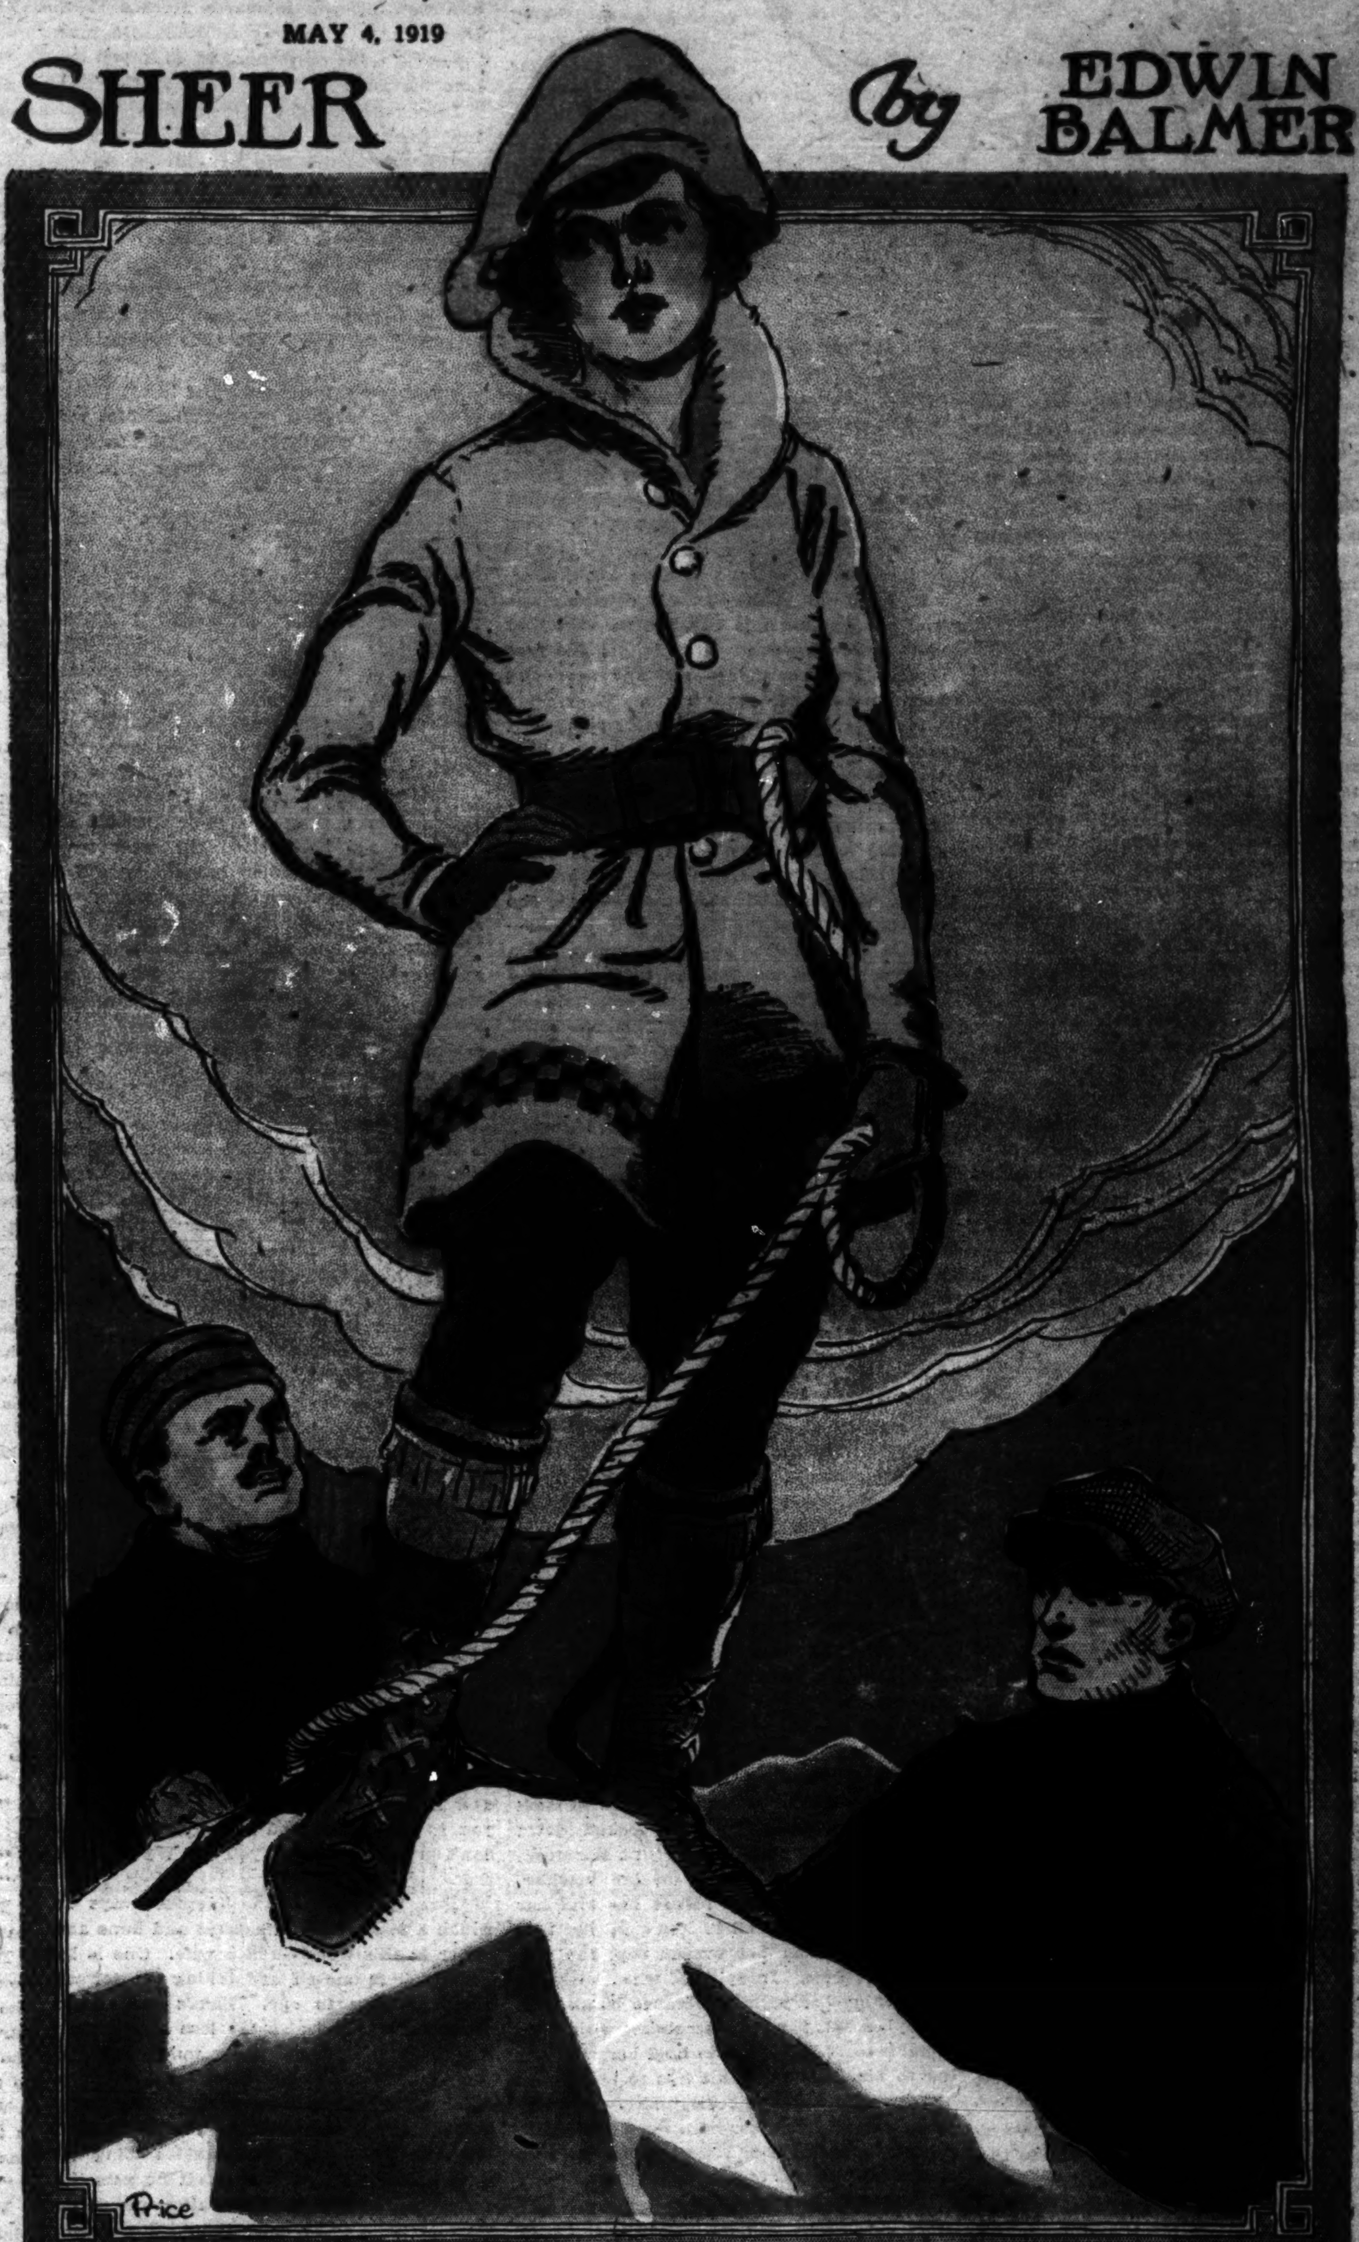
OVER the SHEER

by EDWIN BALMER



When Two Men Are Tested and a Woman Changes Her Mind.

IT was noon in the northern Rockies on a clear, cold day, with Kamuron, the giant peak which commands the railroad pass to the Pacific, raising its dazzling, snow-sheathed summit into a glaring and azure sky. From below the great glacier, surrounding the bare flanks of the mountain, spurted a blue torrent of melted snow which sprayed down the wild, rocky gully past the chalet in the valley; the bright yellow-greens of budding leaves shone on the bushes below the dark boughs of the jackpines; so there was warmth in the sun, but there was bite and frost in the wind.

But the morning was just right for those there for mountaineering; it was not too cold for hard climbing, and the chill made it certain that the snow bridges over the crevasses in the glacier would remain safe and the surface of the higher, sloping névés stay firm. So young Senator Wythe and his party, with a guide, were making the ascent of Kamuron.

"They've climbed to the ledge! They're approaching the 'sheer.' They're resting before crossing the ledge!" Some one who had been watching outside, at noon gave the warning through the sunrooms and the warmed lounges of the chalet. The guests, seizing capes and coats and screwing at the adjustments of field glasses, crowded out to the wide observation veranda facing the east slope of Kamuron and stood in the sunshine to follow the course of the four figures nearing the most difficult and dangerous stretch of their climb. Far above the gleaming green-white slope of the glacier, still higher than the bare, steep reaches of purple rock, the four moving specks—which were three men and a girl—showed black and distinct against the snow below the summit.

Having left the hotel at dawn, they had climbed unseen until at 10 o'clock, as the latest of the guests at the chalet were coming out for breakfast, the four figures appeared against the brown rock above the tree line. While the climbers crept higher and higher up the steep slope, the tourists at the chalet had stood entranced, watching them. Then, except for a few more concerned, the watchers went back to the sunrooms and lounges to warm themselves till the four on the mountain should complete the easier rock ascent and come to the dangerous, spectacular "sheer."

This was an absolutely straight up and down wall of smooth rock—sheer from the glacier almost to the summit—to be traversed only by means of the "ledge," a narrow, shallow crack in the rock, offering an inch or two of hold for the toes of boots, with another small crack, six or seven feet higher, furnishing a more precarious catch for the finger tips. It was in plain sight from the chalet; and so clear and rare was the air that the telescopes on the hotel veranda showed even the ropes running from one climber to another; field glasses showed Breuil, the Swiss guide, distinct from his short, broad figure; Margaret Alden was next; she was in sensible mountaineering costume, knickerbockers without skirts and with woolen puttees like the men; but her slighter figure and tam-o'-shanter made her easily recognized. Even the telescopes could not certainly distinguish the next two; but every one knew who they were and in what order they must be roped. The third figure, therefore, was Stephen Gregg, "her girlhood lover," as some one at the chalet had epitomized him. He was inexperienced in mountaineering, and, therefore, would be roped with the girl between the professional guide and the amateur expert. Young Senator Wythe—there was no need for any one to designate him, and besides no one could do it in a phrase—accordingly was at the end of the rope.

The girl's arm was waving and Wythe seemed to be holding glasses, looking down at the hotel; then he gave some sort of a signal, and the guide, with both arms stretched high above his head to catch the tiny crevasse for his finger tips, worked out upon the ledge and edged farther and farther to the left and over the sheer; the girl followed, her shorter arms stretched their highest to catch the crack; then Gregg crucified himself against the smooth rock and worked on after her; Wythe followed and all four were upon the ledge. One moment, another, and then a third threescore of throbbing heartbeats, and the four figures halted; they edged on again, the leader moving first and stopping, the second following, then the last two creeping after them carefully, a few inches at a time. But at last, with a loud, sighing outbreath of relief, the crowd before the chalet saw the guide step from the ledge to safety; the girl was beside him an instant later; then the second man and finally Wythe stood on the safe rock.

The people before the hotel burst into cheers; they clapped hands, waved hats and handkerchiefs. Margaret Alden's mother staggered to a seat and closed her eyes, trembling; the girl's father, smiling sickly, wiped the perspiration from his forehead and palms and received congratulations.

The four mountain climbers, just off the ledge, were lingering on the safe rock, re-estimating one another. The color, which for a moment had forsaken the girl's fair cheek, flushed back ruddily, and her blue eyes shone in her exciting appreciation as she now dared to gaze down the terrible "sheer" and back across the crack by which she had crossed.

"Wasn't that simply fine!" she cried im-

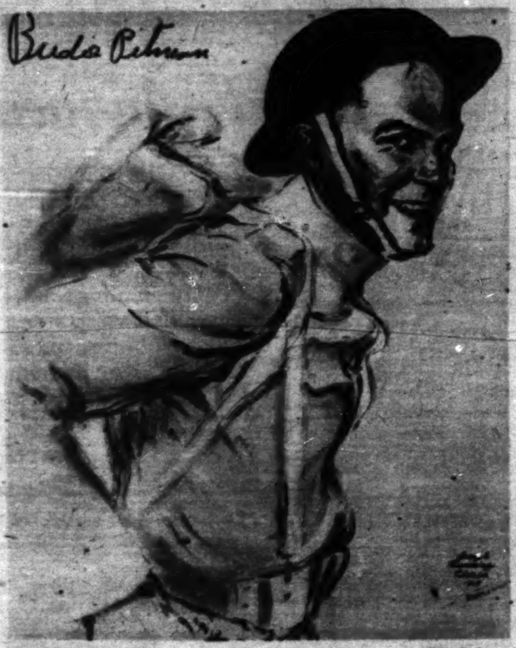
BRAVE AMERICANS

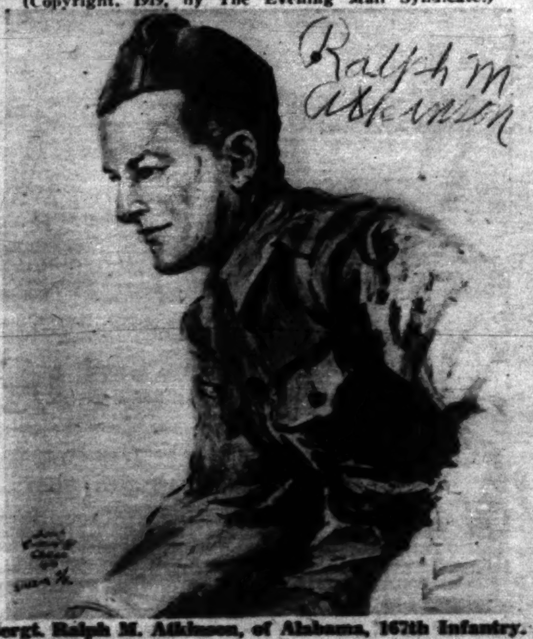
Portraits of medal winners, made in France and Germany by Joseph Cummings Chase, official portrait painter of the A. E. F.

(Copyright, 1919, by The Evening Mail Syndicate.)



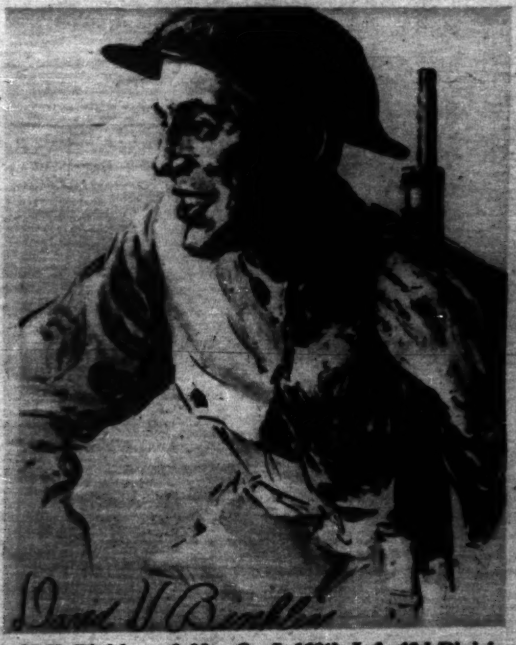
Budie Pitman, Co. M, 18th Infantry, 1st Division.

Gassed and suffering severely from shell shock, Private Pitman, a dispatch bearer, continued carrying messages at the front line through violent barrage. His commander selected him as the representative enlisted man of his command because of his initiative, bravery, and speed. Budie says he wouldn't have missed it for a million dollars.



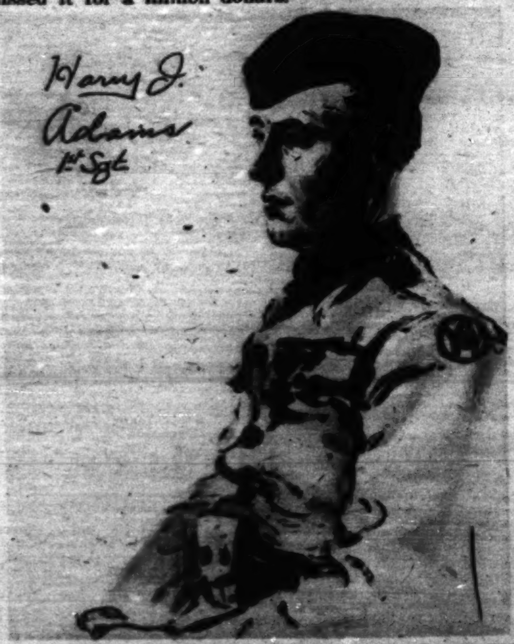
Sergt. Ralph M. Atkinson, of Alabama, 167th Infantry.

During the attack on Cote-de-Chatillon, Sergt. Atkinson was in command of a Stokes mortar platoon. Near the objective 250 of the enemy came up on the right for a flank attack. Sergt. Atkinson ran out in the open with his Stokes mortar, weighing 30 pounds, under heavy shell fire, set up the mortar, and opened a murderous fire on the approaching enemy, killing many and dispersing the remainder.



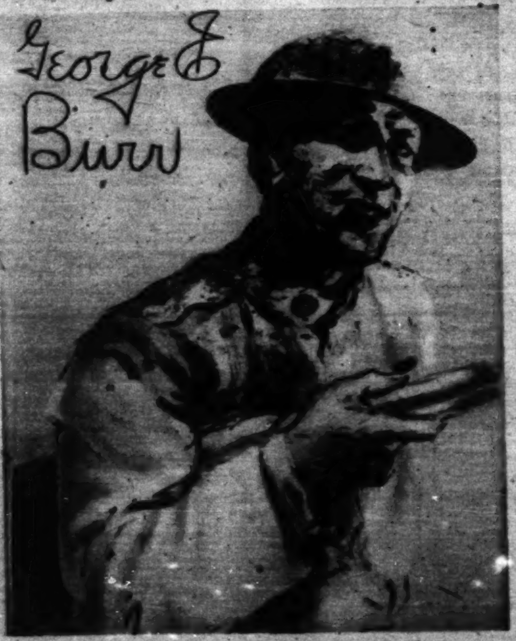
David V. Binkley, of Ala., Co. I, 168th Inf., 42d Division.

Private Binkley sought and obtained permission to go out alone in front of our lines and recover his corporal, who was lying severely wounded in the open. While the enemy fire was directed at him he reached his corporal, picked him up and carried him in his arms safely back into our lines. He was wounded, but refused to go to the aid station and remained in action until his company had won its objective.



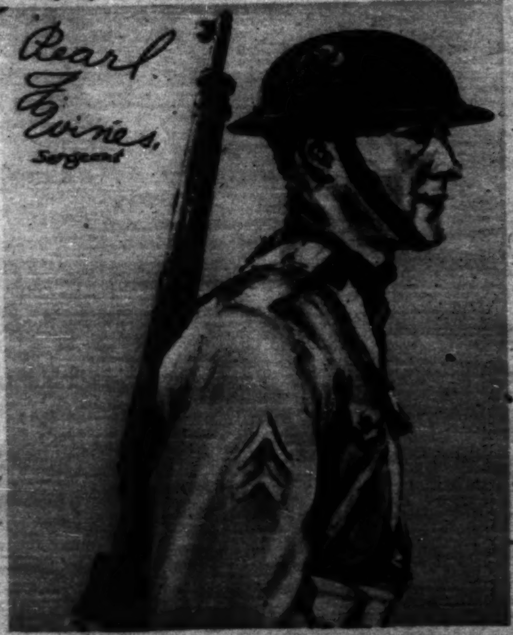
Sergt. Harry J. Adams, Rochester, N. Y., Co. K, 353d Infantry, 89th Division.

After the town of Bouillonville had been shelled Adams was ordered by his lieutenant to enter it and bring back a prisoner. Adams spotted a German and chased him into a little stone house. The boche fastened the door in Adams' face. Sergt. Adams fired through the door and ordered the boche to surrender. The boche came—and after him one lieutenant-colonel, 18 staff officers, and 355 soldiers, a total of 375.



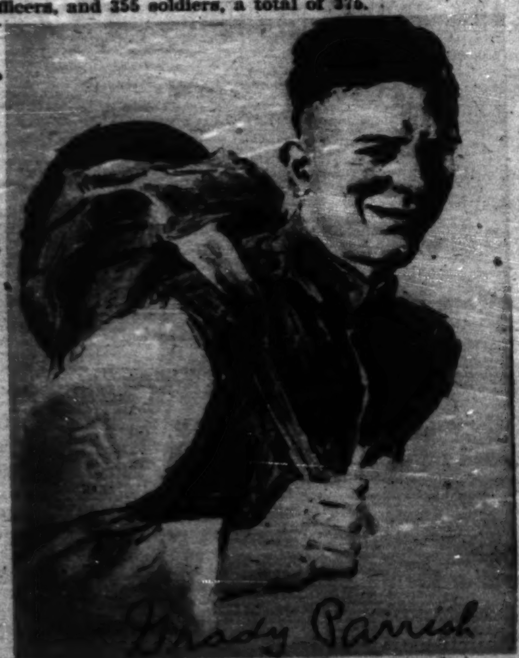
Sergt. George E. Burr, Co. C, 107th Field Signal Battalion, 32d Division.

First-class Sergt. Burr was in action near Cierge August 2, 1918. In charge of a detachment he strung wire far in advance of the front lines, working through heavy fire to the point where his regimental post of command was to be stationed, a hundred yards from the enemy lines, and while the rest of the detachment returned to the rear, Sergt. Burr remained alone for a long time in this most dangerous position.



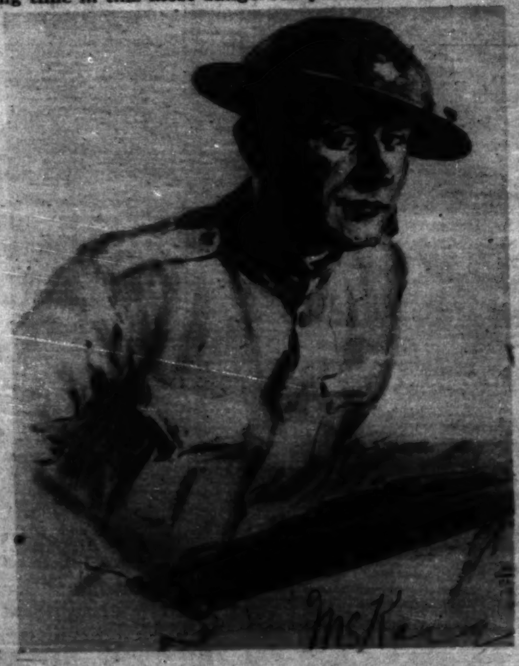
Sergt. Pearl J. Wines, Oklahoma, Co. E, 358th Inf., 90th Division.

He was wounded at St. Mihiel September 12. In fact, it took five Germans to do it. They unexpectedly jumped upon Pearl, shot him and got him in the side. Down went Sergt. Wines, but up again at the five. Three of the Germans perished by his bayonet, and, with the other two as prisoners, he crawled back to his own lines. This was about one kilometer north of Fey-en-Haye.



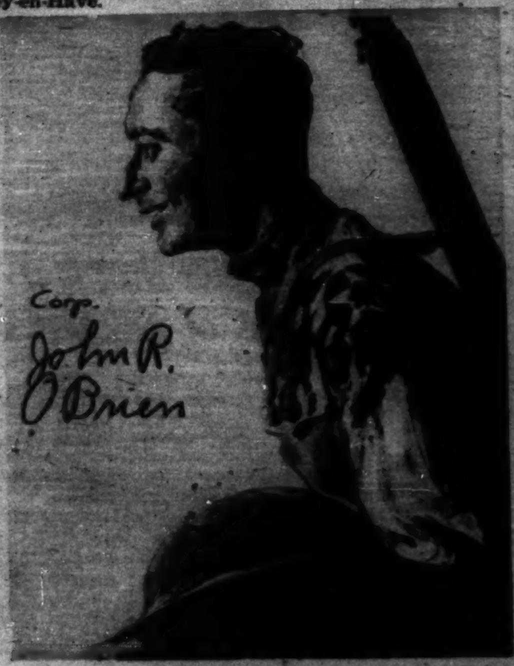
Sergt. Grady Parrish, of Alabama, Co. G, 167th Infantry, 42d Division.

After his platoon commander had been severely wounded and his unit had suffered heavy casualties in action on Cote-de-Chatillon October 16, 1918, Sergt. Parrish quickly reorganized the remainder of the platoon, and instead of retiring for reënforcements, led an attack on Cote-de-Chatillon. By his daring, coolness and good judgment he broke up a heavy enemy counter-attack.



Corp. F. H. McKaig, 6th Marines, 2d Division.

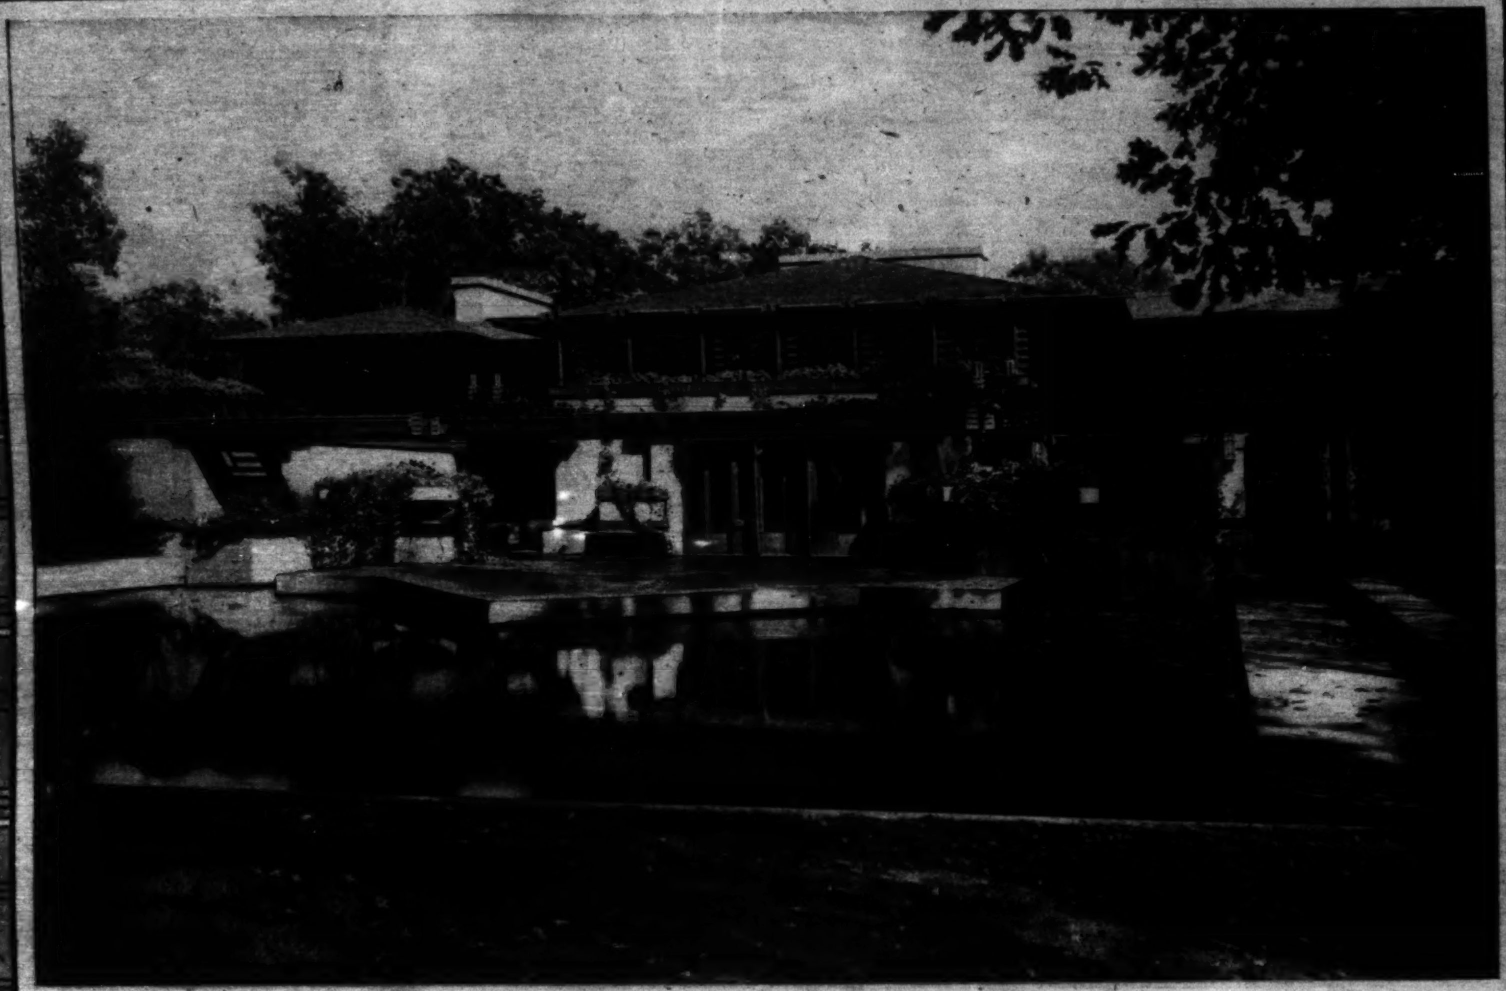
Corp. McKaig was one of the marines who "held 'em and drove 'em back" at Chateau Thierry. He showed extraordinary heroism while acting as a battalion runner, repeatedly carrying important messages through heavy fire of enemy machine guns and artillery and gas and under the bombs of German planes. This while the Germans were counter-attacking near Jaulny, July 14-15, 1918.



Corp. John R. O'Brien, of Boston, Co. K, 23d Infantry.

Corp. O'Brien received his Medaille-Militaire and Croix de Guerre with palm for capturing, all by his lonesome, a particularly pesky machine gun nest July 18. He was also cited for his success as a "commander of his platoon, of which he assumed command after his lieutenant and sergeant had been severely wounded." He kept his men of the platoon well up on the line, controlling their fire, and by good advice and judgment conserved many lives.

Very Unusual Home



This home is one of the most beautiful and distinctive in America, both in architecture and natural surroundings. A comfortable, all-year-round suburban home within a half hour, by rail or motor from CHICAGO.

The entire living part of the house is on the second floor overlooking the water. The grounds consist of about four acres, oval shaped. The landscaping is naturalistic, skillfully adapted to emphasize the native flowering trees and shrubs. Its immediate surroundings are appropriate to the beautiful suburb in which it is located, which resembles a magnificent well kept park.

Here the architect—an acknowledged master—who has created a truly American style—has realized his dream. With the successful co-operation of the owners, he designed the furniture, rugs and draperies throughout the house.

The owner's business has taken him east and the home will be SOLD—Completely Furnished. He is particularly desirous of having it fall into appreciative hands. The price he has placed upon it, when compared to its original cost, is extremely moderate. The expense of maintenance will be found surprisingly light.

The undersigned will be pleased to furnish really interested persons with plans, photographs and to show them the house. It is so exquisite, that to see it is truly an educational experience including entirely new ideas in home building.

The 3 best ways to make Coffee

THESE are the recipes the greatest coffee merchant recommends. Select the one best suited to your coffee pot.

For drip coffee he uses Yuban pulverized; for percolator or the old-fashioned method, Yuban steel-cut. Or you can get it in the whole bean. Try Yuban by one of these famous recipes. It will give you a new idea of how wonderful coffee can be.

Old Fashioned

Use one heaping dessert-spoonful of clean-cut ground Yuban to each cup of water. Put the coffee in the pot and pour over it the fresh water, briskly boiling; let the coffee steep five or ten minutes over a low heat or flame, but do not boil. Settle with a dash of cold water.

Drip

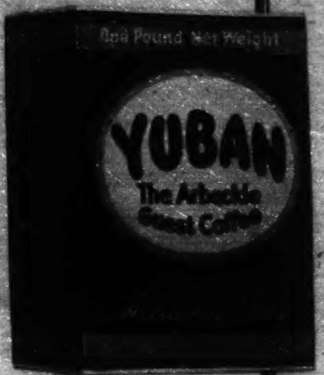
If a drip pot with a cloth is used, allow a heaping teaspoonful of Yuban, pulverized, to each cup of water, briskly boiling. For stronger coffee redrip several times.

If a metal dripper or filter paper is used, allow one heaping dessert-spoonful of Yuban clean-cut ground to each cup of fresh water, briskly boiling. Allow the water to remain on coffee about five minutes to steep.

Percolator

Whether a percolator for the stove or an electric or alcohol percolator is used, the method of making is the same except for the time required.

Use a heaping dessert-spoonful of clean-cut ground Yuban to each cup of fresh, cold water. Pour the water in the percolator, then place coffee in the regular filter or basket—let the water percolate over the coffee five or ten minutes, depending upon the intensity of the heat. With electric percolator it will take fifteen to eighteen minutes.



The silk knicker that is strongest at the point of greatest strain

THE point of greatest strain in a knicker is at the crotch. That is the weakest point in most knickers. So many seams that come together and break under strain.

It is just there that the Kayser "Italian" Silk knicker is strongest. It has not a single seam at the crotch. Instead there is a Marvelfit bias inset, its patented feature.

A special inset of the soft Italian silk to relieve the point of strain.

This inset, cut on the bias, gives an extra stretch and play of three or four inches in bending and walking. Smooth, evenly tailored, it does away with the discomfort of short seams.

The Kayser "Italian" Silk knicker alone has this feature. Everywhere women ask particularly for silk underwear with the Kayser label. Your favorite store has it, too. JULIUS KAYSER & CO., New York.

Oily skin and shiny nose

How to correct them

Do you know that the oil in your skin is necessary to keep it smooth, velvety, supple? This oil is constantly being produced by the glands of the skin. When it is too abundant the result is an oily skin and shiny nose. To relieve this embarrassing condition, use the following treatment as often as your skin requires, nightly if necessary:

With warm water work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your hands. Apply it to your face and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with warm water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

This treatment will make your skin firmer and drier the very first time you try it. Use it regularly, and before long you will see a marked improvement.

Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap and begin tonight the treatment your skin needs. You will find Woodbury's on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States or Canada. A 25 cent cake will last a month or six weeks.

Write today for a trial size cake

For 6c we will send you a trial size cake (enough for a week or ten days of any Woodbury facial treatment), together with the booklet of treatments, "A Skin You Love to Touch." Or for 15c we will send you the treatment booklet and samples of Woodbury's Facial Soap, Facial Powder, Facial Cream and Cold Cream. Girls! Beautify Your Hair With "Danderine"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength, and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?

New Way to Wash Your Face Beautifies Your Complexion

Beauty specialists agree that the secret of a perfect complexion is a thoroughly clean skin. A specialist has perfected a new substance, Ara-Mara, which is not only excellent for washing the face, but it cannot injure the most delicate complexion. It will not, cannot, grow hair. All you do is to gently massage it into the skin and wash with plain warm water. It not only cleanses thoroughly, but it lightens the complexion much better than lemon juice or face bleach. It is surprising to see how fresh, clear and wholesome the skin becomes, even after only one proper treatment. Those who use it declare it has done more real good than any complexion treatment they ever used. It's a wonderful treatment for enlarged, clogged pores and irritations. It certainly is a great blessing to those who are afraid of wrinkles and who have dull, sallow, lifeless complexions. You can always get Ara-Mara at any big store. If you live out of town and your home dealer has not got it, you can order fifty cents' worth of Ara-Mara by mail of Herbert Roystone, 16 East 18th Street, N. Y.

The Best Way to Use Rouge

The specialist who created the wonderful La-may Face Powder has invented a new kind of rouge. The rouge is inside the puff. All you do is to rub the puff on your face. It comes through the puff just as you need it. It goes on wonderfully well and stays on the face until you wash it off. The puff is put up in a dainty metal box. The box cannot break and the rouge will not crumble like the old-fashioned kind. This newly invented rouge is called La-may (French, Rouge L'Ame). It gives a beautiful color that looks natural under the strongest light. There are two colors—medium and dark. The fifty-cent package will last for months, yet the package is small enough to fit the purse. Because La-may Rouge is such a new invention, your dealer may not have it yet, but he can easily get it. Tell him to order a package for you. When you use this new Rouge and see how much more convenient it is and how much better it stays on, you will understand why thousands of women say it is the best they have ever used. Out-of-town readers may order by mail from Herbert Roystone, 16 E. 18th Street, New York.

Many think him an Englishman, but he is not; he was born in New Orleans.

BILLY RHODES is affectionately known as "some baba" to the comedy chasers. She's petite and brunette and was born in San Francisco—when, being her own business! There she went to school and from then started her stage career, on the Orpheum circuit. She won some distinction as the soubrette in "Babes in Toyland." About that time the picture fever seized her and she bounced into comedy for Kalem. Universal, Christie, Strand-Mutual and Southern California Production Company have kept her busy since. "Bluffing Father," "The Great American Game" and "Some Nurse" have brought her big laughs. Miss Rhodes swims, rides, whistles and everything. She's five feet high—O, my—and weighs 106 pounds. Lives in Hollywood.—Mae Tinee.

KITTY GORDON, who married into the nobility and is Lady Beresford in private life, is especially noted for that long, white and sinuous back of hers. It has been claimed by experts to be the most shapely anatomical exhibit of its kind on stage or screen. Miss Gordon claims England as her birthplace, and was educated in that country and Scotland. Her first stage success was "Alma." Later she did "The Enchantress" with quite killing effect and has appeared in various other productions more or less successful. Her screen career started with her work for World in "As in a Looking Glass." She was for some time with this company. Then Selznick starred her in various productions, and now she has her own company for United Picture Theaters corporation. Letters reach her at her home, 145 Falmouth street, Manhattan Beach, N. Y.—Mae Tinee.

ANTONIO MORENO—Antonio Garrido Monteagudo Moreno if you please—has a large and devoted following of feminine admirers. He is one of those romantic Spaniards who can always have things their own way with the ladies. Born in Madrid in 1888, much of his education he received in that city. At the age of 14 he came to the United States and completed his education at Williston seminary, Northampton, Mass. Of course nobody as handsome as Mr. Moreno would be allowed to blush unseen, and he had quite a stage career, supporting Mrs. Leslie Carter, Tyrone Power, Constance Collier, William Hawtrey, and Wilton Lackaye. He went to Vitagraph in 1914 and played in many productions, often in support of Edith Storey. Now he's with Pathe. He's a great out-of-door chap.—Mae Tinee.

TOM MIX, it is told of him in the index, is "also scenario writer and actor." Otherwise, it seems, he is cowboy. He is the bowlegged gentleman who has recently been giving our William S. Hart such a run for his money. "Boy," say the male picture fans, "how he can ride!" You bet he can ride. And he can shoot and swim and smile and make love, too. A most efficient westerner! Mr. Mix has really a most interesting past to tell about. He rode the plains as a cowboy and was a member of the Rough Riders during the Spanish-American war. He first made pictures for Selig, but has only become really famous during the last year or so, while he has been making things fly for Fox.—Mae Tinee.

from Glorious Pasadena this Woman Wrote

SHE had lived in many Western towns. Her husband, a busy civil engineer, had moved from one post to another for something like ten years. She began using CREME ELCAYA about that long ago. Ever since, wherever she has been, women friends have wondered—and finally asked the reason of her soft, fresh skin. She told them CREME ELCAYA. And they, too, began its use.

Once in a while her enthusiasm runs over and she writes us a letter. In one that came recently she says:

> Dear Sirs: Pasadena, California.
> If I am a staunch friend of Elcaya, it is because Elcaya deserves it, and that you appreciate such friends is evident from your last letter. It seems to me that I have always used Elcaya, and I know that I would never do without it. With best wishes,
> Sincerely, (Mrs.) W.——J.——K.

You see, in that dry Western air she needed a non-greasy, disappearing toilet cream that she could put on day and evening as a foundation for her face powder—one that would protect her skin and keep it soft and clear.

CREME ELCAYA, put on always before your face powder, gives the skin a velvety look; with it powder never "shows." Then, before you've used it very long, you'll find that your skin has acquired an exquisite texture that improves your whole appearance. Knowing this, even your eyes will take on new sparkle. And your friends will wonder and enjoy.

You see, I know from many, many such letters as the above that CREME ELCAYA does just that. There is no beauty secret about it.

Always use CREME ELCAYA before putting on your face powder, in this way—

A little CREME ELCAYA rubbed gently into the skin; then if you need color, a very little Elcaya Rouge spread carefully over the cheeks before the cream is quite dry; and after that the film of face powder over all.

Right off you'll like the feeling of it—and the looks. And with regular use you will see a refining and freshening of your complexion that you wouldn't have believed possible.

CREME ELCAYA is the original non-greasy, disappearing toilet cream. It was introduced first in New York in 1900. Today its purity and superiority are acknowledged throughout the world.

Your dealer has ELCAYA and has sold it for years. Ask him.

We want you to learn the easy way to have a skin like velvet. Send 10c in a letter marked Department "K" to the address below and obtain a trial package of CREME ELCAYA and a miniature box of ELCAYA COMPLEXION POWDER. If you need color, send an additional 10c for sample of ELCAYA ROUGE and use it with CREME ELCAYA. There's nothing better.

THE CAPITAL OF THE WORLD—Geneva, the beautiful third city of Switzerland, chosen as the seat of the League of Nations. The Misses Helen and Margaret Perkins

The engagement was announced recently of Miss Ruth Hopkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Hopkins of Winnetka, to Thomas L. Shackford of Chicago. The wedding will take place within a few weeks. Mr. Shackford recently received his discharge from the United States marine corps, in which he served as a lieutenant for two years.

The Victory Liberty loan special service squad, which is an organization of about fifty young society girls under the direction of Miss Katherine Ingalls, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Ingalls of 33 Bellevue place, is engrossing the attention of the twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Farrington Perkins of 1301 Astor street. The Perkins family returned in December from Washington, where they spent six months while Mr. Perkins was in government service.

May Date Recalls Tragic Events in Chicago's History

By Mme. X.

THERE must be some subtle, psychological connection between the bursting into leaf and bud of nature at this season of the year in the northern hemisphere and the bursting into violence and crime of the genus homo. The flowers of this criminal blooming have oftener than not been bombs, murders, and holdups.

This year's crop of the first named is unusually abundant and distinguished. There's been really nothing to touch it since May 4, 1886—just thirty-three years ago today, friends—when a bomb, thrown at an open air meeting in Haymarket square, wounded sixty-seven policemen, of whom seven died from their wounds.

It is interesting to note that the men arrested, tried, and found guilty of this crime against society were all foreign born, and, if their names are any indication, it is safe to ascribe to them the same ancestral spirit of "echt kultur" that later inspired the destruction of Louvain, Reims, Ypres, Arras, the Lusitania, and Flanders' fields. The writer would also bet that "bottom dollar," which glimmers nearer the light these Victory loan days, that few or none of our native born will be found among the makers and mailers of last week's thirty bombs.

We owe much to those aliens who come to our shores with one hand stretched out for American dollars, while, behind the back, the other clutches a bomb. They reinforce our sense of patriotism to a passionate pitch. In ease and security it is in danger of becoming dormant, torpid. The vision of the bleeding stumps where once were the efficient hands of Mrs. Hardwick's colored maid blurs the picture of the universal brotherhood of man held up to us by President Wilson and others as something to love and accept.

Thirty Years Ago Today.

May 4 is quite a historic local date. It was in 1888 that the famous Cronin murder took place in the Carlson cottage on this date, and for months afterward the facetious question was always, "Where were you the night of May 4?"

There was the white horse and buggy from Pete Daly's livery stable in North Clark street, near Chicago avenue, which traveled up and down the streets of sparsely settled Edgewater carrying its ghastly freight (trunk within a trunk, if you'd make a grisly pun).

There was a temporary burial in the sands on the lake shore, followed by a panic stricken exhumation and hurried chucking of the naked corpse into a nearby sewer manhole, just as the dawn's ghostly finger touched the zenith.

There were the little Edgewater boys at play in the garish light of day, who pried open the cover of the manhole to retrieve a lost ball, and found instead the chief actor in the drama, huddled in ignominious death, all supposedly because he knew too much about the financial affairs of the Clan-na-Gael.

Another May 4 Event.

Apologies are due the readers of a society column which indulges in such a retrospect of two of Chicago's violent moods, but it is once more a 4th of May with a fierce red glare on the horizon, which it is impossible to ignore, and in those bygone days the anarchist and Cronin trials bulked large in the conversation of even the most frivolous and fashionable.

Another 4th of May event which more nearly touched the realm of the "socially important" was the sudden passing away on this date in 1902 of Potter Palmer, in his Lake Shore drive residence, when death took one of the most striking personalities of that great constructive era. He was largely responsible for a considerable section of the fashionable Lake Shore drive district. He planned and set going the construction of the present Lake Shore drive from Oak street to North avenue, running it much of the way through what was then the lake. For a brief period in its career it had dashing waves on one side and a quiet lagoon on the other, the delight of every amphibious boy.

Mr. Palmer should also be remembered as one of the first art collectors in this country to recognize the charms of Monnet, the leader of the French impressionists. He bought many of his canvases long before dealers or the world at large recognized the merits of those purple haystacks and myriad hued fields. Because Mrs. Palmer didn't care for them at first Mr. Palmer had them hung all around his big dressing room, perching many of them high up above the wardrobes that lined the place, leaning others against chairs and tables, so that he might see and study them at his leisure.

Collecting Old Portraits.

The gathering in the Potter Palmer art gallery last Sunday afternoon to hear Thomas Bayley of Boston talk on John Singleton Copley, one of the early American portrait painters, was all that was chic and representative, and those there heard a most delightful lecture and saw some charming screen pictures, reproductions of Copley's paintings.

Mrs. Arthur Meeker brought Mr. Bayley out here to give this lecture and to discuss with her and Mr. Meeker the collection they are starting of early American portraits. Among those they have already acquired are a fine pair, the work of Copley, which present the likenesses of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Babcock, the great-grandparents of George Higginson Jr. of Chicago, a friend of the Meekers. So when Mr. Higginson goes to dine with the latter he can feast his eyes on the lineaments of two of his ancestors, while partaking of the more substantial banquet set before him by his host.

There's no more azure hue in this country than the blue blood of New England that flows through Mr. Higginson's veins. That may be one reason why he's such a thoroughgoing good citizen—but flowers just now are too expensive to throw bouquets.

Juniors Clever and Talented.

Lo, I sit at the feet of youth since I witnessed last Wednesday evening the extremely efficient way in which those lively young Junior leaguers threw themselves into the spirit of the songs, dances, and action of Will Morrissey's "Overseas Review."

We didn't do that sort of thing in my youth. If we had attempted it, I shudder to think how badly we should have "balled up the whole show." But these young women—Miss Doris Russell, Miss Cordelia Carpenter, Miss Margaret Carry, Miss Caryl Dunham, Miss Mary Rend, Miss Harriet Pardridge, Miss Emily Bissell, et al.—were so gay, so clever, and so efficient that one got real pleasure in watching and listening to them, while the professionals would better look to and water their laurels with envious tears when they see such a sextet as that composed of Miss Eleanor Holden, Miss Florence Harris, Miss Elizabeth Chase, Miss Harriet McLaughlin, Miss Virginia Graves, and Miss Annette Washburn in the burlesque dance with Will Morrissey, Thomas Penfold, Lon Hascall, Harry Miller, Sam Wall, and Clarence Nordstrom.

It is not so hard to wear fetching costumes and dance graceful steps, but when you are young, good looking, and with youth's inevitable supersensitiveness, to get yourself up deliberately to be grotesque, mirth compelling, and altogether ridiculous before a large and mixed audience requires spirit, courage, and character far beyond the average.

Miss Harmon Bailey also showed dramatic talents of no mean order in the absurd travesty she played with Messrs. Morrissey and Hascall.

Sell Bonds Between Acts.

Still more amazing and breath taking were the band of young women who sold Victory bonds in the intermission. The clear voice of Miss Katherine Ingalls, at the head of this brigade of beauty, was irresistible and undoubtedly converted many a spectator into an unintentional bond buyer. Assisting her were the Misses Florence Folds, Harriet Allport, Marie Crerar, Felicité Reynolds, and Kathryn Simmons.

Of one thing you may be sure, the able women who are now directing the welfare of Chicago—Mrs. Joseph Bowen, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. Joseph Coleman, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mrs. John A. Carpenter, Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, Mrs. James W. Morrisson, Mrs. George Higginson, Mrs. Jacob Baur, and their many, many coadjutors—need not fear that they'll have no suitable successors in their various fields of action. If signs can be read they may have to fight for their thrones.

"Machine" Wins Unanimously.

Last Wednesday afternoon the Chicago Equal Suffrage association held its annual election at the residence of its president, Mrs. Jacob Baur, 115 Bellevue place, when the "machine" ticket was unanimously elected, Mrs. Arthur Meeker being the latest addition to the board of directors.

At these annual meetings, after reading the ticket to those present, the powers that be invite and await nominations from the floor. The pause that ensues gives the same sense of anxious suspense that that moment in the Episcopal marriage service does when the clergyman invites any objector to arise or forever after hold his peace.

No one ever breaks the peace of either ceremony. Perhaps there would be more competition for places on this suffrage board if the members realized what good times this committee has at its combination luncheon and board meetings at the Arts club, where the policies and activities of the organization are discussed, together with sphagetti, raviogli, zabione, and vero vino Vigano.

The suffragists have gotten up three little maps; the first showing on a black U. S. one white state, Wyoming, where in 1869 women were given the vote. The second, forty years later, 1909, shows three new white ones added to this one in the nation's black expanse. The third, ten years later, shows twenty-nine white, or near white, twenty-five acquired in ten years, against the preceding forty years' three. Which way flows the current?

There are 15,500,000 women who can now vote for president—just 3,000,000 less than the entire number of votes cast at the last presidential election.

Iowa is the eighth state in the last three months to give us the ballot. There's only one nonsuffrage state left west of the Mississippi river now—poor, benighted New Mexico! When Tennessee, a short time ago, gave its women the ballot the first dent was made in the southern dam against inevitable and enlightened progress.

Would Endow Chair of French.

The rapprochement between us and the French goes on in spite of the jars of the peace table. Bryn Mawr graduates and other friends of the college are making a great effort to commemorate victory and peace by raising before June $100,000 to endow a chair of French at that institution. Miss Alice Gerstenberg is chairman of the Chicago Bryn Mawr club.

Other well known Chicago women who are Bryn Mawr alumnæ are the Mesdames James Morrisson, Morris Johnston, and John McCutcheon, and the Misses Harriot Houghteling, Dorothy I. Smith, Sarah Hinde, Helen Walker, and Harriet Allport.

To assist them in raising their quota comes the Alliance Fraiçaise, an institution dedicated to promoting our better understanding and appreciation of things French. Mrs. Milan H. Hurlbert is president of the executive committee and also of the Chorale Française, and she and other members of the alliance are arranging what promises to be a really charming and unusual musical and dramtic program at the Playhouse on Sunday afternoon, May 18.

The Choral Française will give a group of old and modern French songs. Mme. d'Escoubés, Mme. Marguerite, Mlle. Marchand, and Hubert Schmit will act two short French plays, and Jacques Copeau, founder of the famous Theatre du Vieux Colombier in New York, is coming on especally to give a talk on the modern French theater.

Lovers of France and her music and drama can be steeped in joy that afternoon, for the entertainment promises to be what the French would call "du premier ordre." The proceeds from the sale of tickets will go to the Bryn Mawr fund to found the French professorate. Any one wishing to contribute further to this fund will please send check or pledge to Mrs. John T. McCutcheon, 39 East Schiller street, Chicago.

All money received will be put into Victory bonds, which reminds me:

Have you bought all the bonds of this issue you can carry?

If so, buy more!

I have been requested by Earl H. Reed Jr. to correct some information given in ignorance by this pillar of light last Sunday as to the authors of the Victory adornments on the Boul Mich. Pierce Anderson was one of the three architects responsible for the whole plan, the other two being Messrs. Tallmadge and Reed. George Maher had nothing to do with the designs, but to him the credit is due of the lighting, which is one of the most lovely things of the kind ever done here.

The "inside dope" from New York, by the way, is that the committee for the Victory loan decorations there is paying the Austrian government $20,000 rental for the gorgeous arch of jewels which glitters at Fifth avenue and Fifty-ninth street. The arch was part of the débris of the Panama exposition. The transaction shows that New York is tendering the olive branch of commercial relations to our quondam foes while we are still showing our teeth and growling at 'em.

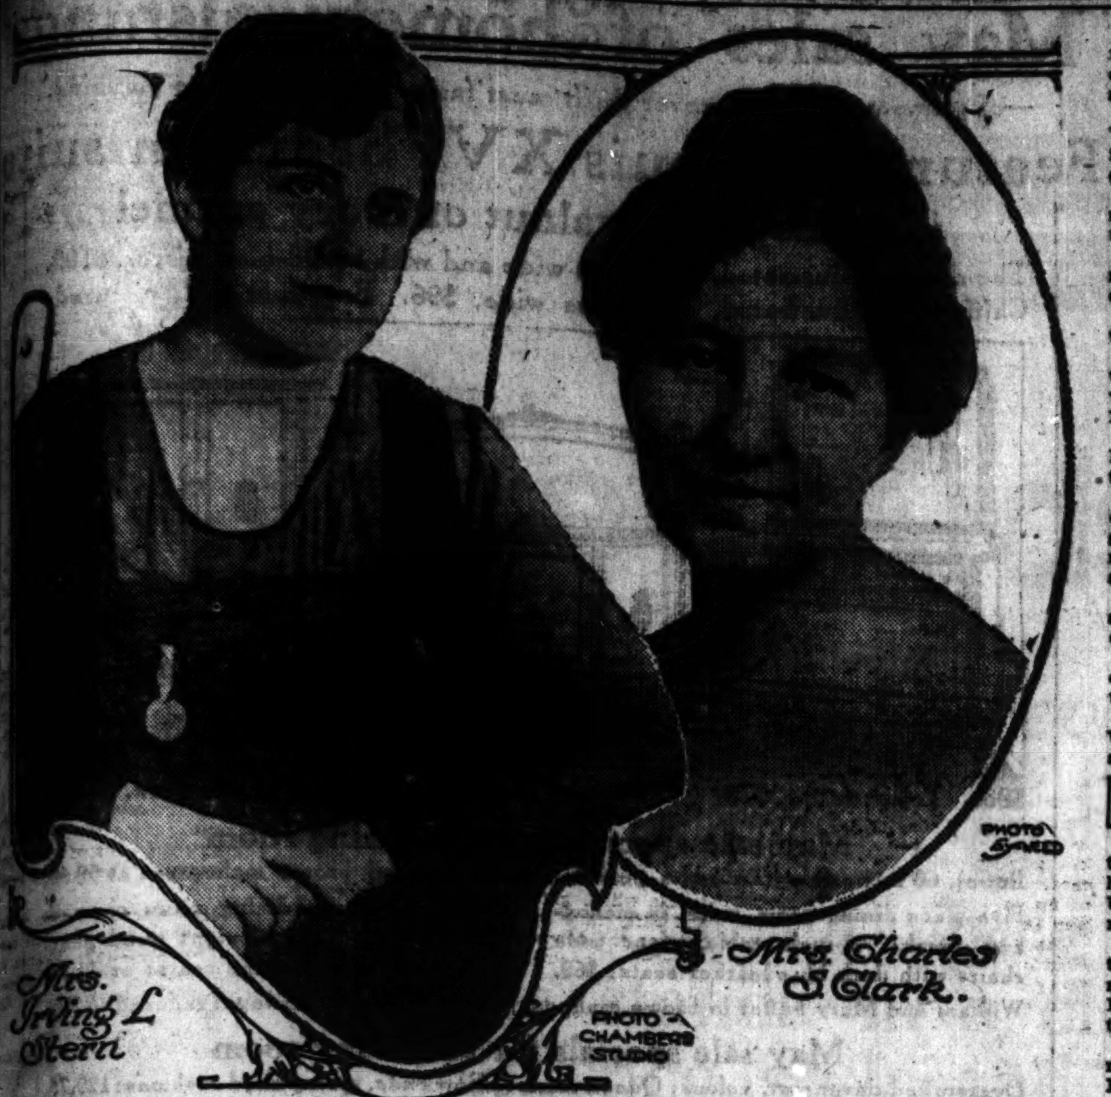
NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS



Mrs. Irving L. Stern

Mrs. Charles S. Clark.

Mrs. Charles S. Clark is retiring president of the Englewood Woman's club and president of the association of club presidents and program chairmen.

Mrs. Irving L. Stern heads the woman's trade committee of the Victory Liberty Loan organization. Mrs. Stern is also the only woman representative on the trades' advisory committee and in charge of the loan work among the school children of the city.

Workers Active in All Lines in Englewood Club

THE Englewood Woman's club is noted for its active workers in civic, patriotic, and philanthropic causes.

When its Red Cross rooms were closed recently, the group under Mrs. E. G. Earl continued to make garments for the girls under Judge Mary Bartelme's care. Last month a dozen suitcases, filled with underwear and dainty aprons, were given to these unmothered girls.

At Davis Square the sociology department, under Mrs. Martin Edinger, has been teaching the foreign born women how to sew and cook as a means of teaching them American ideals. Mrs. J. R. Newton has charge of the cooking classes. A meal is served each woman for 10 cents and this includes food and a pint bottle of milk for each of her children. Sometimes in a class of seventeen women there are forty-five children. A kindergartner cares for the children while the mothers sew or learn to read English. The avenues of approach to these foreign women are the home, the children, and dress.

Mrs. William Holliday has charge of the sewing and has a professional dressmaker one day a week, who assists the club women in their problems of teaching. Material is purchased at wholesale and the women pay when they can. They always pay, although it may be a few pennies at a time.

The Englewood Woman's club has run the lunchroom at the Englewood High school for sixteen years, feeding 1,000 children a day at minimum prices. Mrs. George G. Wilson has been the chairman this year and Mrs. B. F. Paine is the newly elected chairman for 1919-20. Twenty women serve each day and the money earned is all devoted to philanthropy and education. Last month they served 139,548 lunches at an average cost of 15½ cents.

The art department under Miss Madie Hesse has maintained extension classes at Hamilton park for the children, and one at the Art institute for club members. A money prize was given to Walter Sargent for his painting "Somber Woods," at the Chicago artists' exhibit. A large painting of Carl Krafft, called "Ozark Zephyrs," was purchased by the club in honor of its war president, Mrs. Charles S. Clark. Two pictures were placed in the Yale school through the Public School Art society by the club.

Through the educational department extensive library work has been done for the soldiers, home garden work with school children, and educational work for the Y. W. C. A. Through Mrs. E. W. Barrett and her committee aid has been given the convalescing children at Cook county hospital, where recreational work is carried on throughout the year.

The motion picture committee under Mrs. C. H. Brown brought in $500 in April for the child welfare work done by the club. Assistance is also given the South Side Crippled Children's league, the Oneida school, the American speech committee, the Vocational Supervision league, and the Illinois Congress of Mothers, besides maintaining the social work of the Englewood High school.

Classes in physical education and [illegible] are branches of the educational work, with Mrs. R. E. Holmes as chairman.

On Monday mornings at 9:30 o'clock there is a class in public speaking in the literature department, Mrs. George Hunt chairman, and the club chorus under the music department, with Mrs. Roy Kendall chairman, meets at the same hour.

The club has recently invested $2,300 in Liberty bonds and war savings stamps and has made war contributions of $451 and personal contributions through the club to war activities of $1,537. Under Mrs. C. W. Blodgett's generalship the organization has made the record of 100 per cent in every war drive.

Over $2,632 has been given to philanthropies this year.

Mrs. Charles S. Clark is the retiring president and the new officers are: Marie Hesse, president; Edna M. Blackford, vice president; Nannie Blair Stephens, second vice president; Laura H. Banister, third vice president; Louise Fell Haynes, recording secretary; Bertha M. Farrar, corresponding secretary; Lena R. Louderback, treasurer.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

Three thousand school schildren will become loan salesmen this week. High school students will start on a house to house canvass and the grammar school children will "work" their own homes, getting subscriptions from their own families over and above those given to the ward salesmen. Subscriptions from the school children will be cleared through the ward organization. Impromptu parades in various school neighborhoods will be features of the school children's campaign. The youthful salesmen will wear Victory hats modeled after the soldiers' overseas caps with the red and blue "V" insignia on either side. Boy Scouts will aid in putting over the loan and every scout will be on the job to obtain his quota of ten subscriptions, for which a government award will be given. Judge Charles A. McDonald as an incentive to north shore scout workers has offered a banner to the troop selling the largest amount and to the one recording the greatest number of subscriptions. Boy Scouts' in the stockyards are planning a lively campaign to secure subscriptions. Two hundred women, under the direction of Mrs. Gertrude Presnell, started the bank booth campaign yesterday and throughout the week will seek to bring in subscriptions from eleventh hour prospects.

Demonstrations will be given by Miss Ruth Hagerty at the School of Domestic Arts and Science, 6 North Michigan avenue, on Tuesday at 11 a. m. on company luncheon dishes, on Thursday at 2:30 p. m., and on Friday at 11 a. m. on fancy small cakes and cookies.

MEXICO AS IT IS TODAY.

A group of Chicago business men recently accepted the invitation of President Carranza and visited Mexico City, traveling over the main line of the National Railways of Mexico because it is the safest of all of the bandit menaced carriers of the country. They were denied government sanction of a trip to Vera Cruz and Tampico because there was no certainty of their safe return.

In this zone of safety their train was accompanied by a guard varying from one to three car loads of soldiers, as the prevalence of bandits varied. In the north the train spent all night at San Luis Potosi because travel in darkness in that section is a foolhardy gamble, even with three cars of federal sharpshooters or rurales.

A veteran Pullman conductor, who once traveled regularly between St. Louis and Mexico City, was going into Mexico for the first time in four years. Shortly after the party left Laredo he began pointing out spots of interest; here had been a hacienda, there a mine, everywhere places of wealth and splendor of a primitive sort.

All the tourists could see were roofless stone buildings, broken corrals, and endless stone fences winding across the valley, up a hill, and out of sight. These were monuments in a waste of cactus and mesquite. Destruction was complete.

The bandits had begun by demanding money until it was gone. Then went, in turn, live stock, crops, and household effects of value. The owner by this time had fled or died. Finally hungry bands took the hinges from the doors, pulled up the pump, and set fire to the roof.

This is not an occasional situation. As hundreds of miles and millions of acres of this Mexican safety zone roll past the eye, a human being, an animal, or a roof is a sight to draw tourists to the windows. Only when approaching a city in territory regularly policed is life found in rural Mexico.

A considerable percentage of this farm and ranch land has been confiscated from hacienda owners who gave employment to peons. The land was taken that it might be parceled among the peons and make good the Carranza rallying cry, Mexico for Mexicans. Yet the peons have been driven to the cities and villages, where the majority live briefly on a pittance and die of venereal disease. The throngs of them that flock about trains at railroad stations begging and peddling are so revolting that the Mexican government forbids the taking of photographs of them from the country.

The Carranza government, embracing bolshevism, socialism, and other radical beliefs, operating some of its states on syndical plans, has been unable to do anything for the peon in whose name the revolution was staged. Estates confiscated from owners of record have been given to the many generals who made Carranza and are now constantly threatening his undoing.

These generals, who constitute the military cabinet and rule over all civil functions of government, are typified by Gen. Juan Merigo, notorious throughout Mexico as the head of a gang of automobile bandits who robbed homes, kidnaped young women, and killed frequently, and by Gen. Rafael De Latorre, former chief of police of Mexico City, who commits murder in a public restaurant and laughs at the police.

The blight that was everywhere could not blind the Chicago group to the possibilities of development in a régime of order. In the vast wastes of central Mexico a garden bloomed wherever a Mexican had the temerity to till the soil and irrigate crops. Scratching the surface of the ground with a crooked stick, propelled by oxen, and watering it with precious fluid from a treadmill, the Indian farmers have grown wheat and corn to surpass the prize products of Kansas and Iowa.

When the council of the league of nations meets to assign mandates for the pacifying and the rehabilitating of minor nations, we are inclined to believe that Mexico will be among the first cases for consideration. It will be obviously an assignment for us, and one which we are morally obliged to obey. Our duty has been laggard, but it cannot be much longer evaded or postponed.

THE ROOSEVELT ROAD.

The Roosevelt memorial road to St. Louis represents a great idea. It will connect the great lakes with the great river. It will sweep down through a section of the land which loved Roosevelt, loved the intense Americanism for which he stood, loved the traditions which he upheld and the nationalism which he and his sons defended.

It will start, fittingly, at Twelfth street and the lake. We cannot make Twelfth street what it ought to be and continue to call it Twelfth street.

We are for the perpetuation of Chicago names in instances in which they mean something. But it is difficult to give a numeral a meaning and distinction. New York would not part with Fifth avenue and ought not to part with it. But Twelfth street means nothing to Chicago as Twelfth street, and is coming to mean much to it as a great thoroughfare.

Renamed Roosevelt road, it would gain distinctive character, fitting to its essential importance. With a wonderful start at the lake and with a penetration of the heart of Chicago, the great roadway would sweep down through the heart of Illinois, touching many of its important cities, decorated by these cities in memorial to the great American, and then would touch the Mississippi, a highway across a great country, a bond between watersheds, a connection of natural highways, a link of tradition to tradition, a link of people to people, a memorial in an intensely American country to an intensely American man.

It fascinates the imagination to foresee the building and use of this memorial roadway. It encourages the thought that we have been slowly gathering force for years which is to burst into sudden accomplishment and give us a richer United States, richer for the sympathetic perceptions of its citizens.

We are building, and we believe we are building wisely and are about to build with energy. More power to our elbow.

REPRESENTATION IN THE LEAGUE.

In the constitution of any representative body the basis of representation is fundamental. One of the most important considerations, therefore, as to the covenant for a league of nations is this:

Article 2 provides that the action of the league shall be effected through the instrumentality of an assembly and of a council, with a permanent secretariat.

Article 3 provides that at meetings of the assembly each member of the league shall have one vote and may not have more than three representatives.

In this general body of the league then, the nations are to be represented as equal entities, without regard to population, internal organization, wealth, or degree of civilization. Hedjaz, the newly formed Arabian kingdom on the Red sea, is to have the same representation as the United States. So each will Haiti and Liberia, Ecuador and Siam. The United States with its forty-eight commonwealths, Alaska, Hawaii, Porto Rico, and the Philippines will have one vote. The British empire, including India, Canada, Australia, South Africa, and New Zealand, will have six votes.

In the council the United States will have equal representation with Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan, Belgium, Brazil, Greece, and Spain, and such other nations as may subsequently be added.

We think no other nation with such power, wealth, population, and responsibilities as ours has ever indulged in such an act of self-abnegation. Perhaps it is safe and wise for us to make this sacrifice, but certainly we ought not to do it upon impulse. Certainly we ought carefully to consider the possibilities of the situation to which we are about to commit ourselves and our future.

It will be said in extenuation of this basis of representation that the league is largely advisory and voluntary, an institution of deliberation and free coöperation rather than an instrument of force.

But this argument, it seems to us, is rather specious. Either the league will be effective in action or it is not much worth bothering about. We shall consider later exactly to what action it binds its signatories, but meanwhile it must be conceded that its purpose is to influence, if not to compel action, and the question of the basis of representation is as relevant to influence as to the results procured by influence. In either case it would seem that the United States will not have the weight it might justly claim.

The adoption of a proper basis after the present simple principle has been accepted will be very difficult. Perhaps it is now too late, but we think the proposed basis is unjust and not in accordance with the interests of the league. Representation, it seems to us, should be founded on several readily ascertainable elements, the most obvious being the suffrage. Nations which, like the United States, have millions of citizens who have the franchise and habitually use it should have more to say in both assembly and council than nations less advanced in self-government. The present basis of representation is mechanical and reactionary if progress lies in the direction of a mitigation of national egos and an increased influence of popular control over international affairs.

PEACE GARDENS.

When we reflect that more than $525,000,000 worth of garden truck was produced in the war gardens of America last year it seems hardly worth while to cast about for other and better reasons for continuing back lot agriculture.

The immense success of the war garden should prove its value as a peace garden. If it was worth while in wartime to supply the table with fresh dainties crisp from the salad patch it should be worth while in peace time. War gardens have not only demonstrated that economy is a good thing during high pressure, but that gardening is a good thing for itself.

It is argued that gardening on a small scale is not profitable as against production wholesale. In a commercial sense this is true. One man giving his entire time can produce more vegetables than one who is able only to give a part of his time. But into the price of commercially produced vegetables must be included the wage of the worker; wages do not enter into the home garden; rather only the joy of creation, the health that comes of out of door exercise, and the knowledge that at the edge of the table there is a salad patch of surpassing excellence. Deduct the wages and add the health and happiness and there is the profit.

Let us again urge upon you the palatable dandelion greens. They cost nothing but the effort of gathering them. There is hardly a gardener in Chicago who wouldn't be glad to extend the hospitality of his lawn to the gatherer of dandelion greens. Gathering them will be food for you and riddance for the lawn. Dandelion greens, as we have pointed out, are delicious for salad, lubricant for the human machine, no strain upon the purse, and awful to look at. Dig dandelions.

Editorial of the Day

OUR GREAT LONESOME RIVERS.

[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.]

A Chinaman who travels in the United States is certain to remark, "What grand rivers, but how lonely!" By utilizing their rivers 400,000,000 Chinese have managed to get along without railroads, a feat incomprehensible in occidental countries. A visitor from continental Europe would say: "Your rivers of the Mississippi valley are unequaled as a gift of nature. But where is the commerce? Where the permanently deepened channels, united with correspondingly deep canals for heavy freight, like those connecting the Rhine, Danube, Rhone, Loire, and others?" Our only answer could be that we have as yet scarcely made a beginning with our splendid streams in the most productive valley on earth. Yet with remarkable energy, promptness, and success we constructed the great canal between the Pacific and Atlantic oceans, paying the entire cost ourselves, and opening it on equal terms to all nations. Our reason for the backwardness with our majestic rivers and their many navigable tributaries is that we have never taken up the subject with due seriousness and decisive purpose. We have been dismayed when told that the problem involved hundreds of millions in money. But since 1914, including the next fiscal year, congress has appropriated forty-seven billion dollars! The word "impossible" should not be reserved for use against a profitable investment like improved waterways.

THE Battle of the Brows, raging in these quiet precincts, recalls to us those dear dead days when we were intrusted with the agreeable duty of demolishing the odious contemporary; we were regarded as rather good at corrosive personalities; our juvenile motto then was, "Fools are my theme, let satire be my song."

WITH what glee did we excoriate the rival editor! And with what disappointment did we read his reply; for it was always so much better than we thought he was capable of. Although demolished daily, he declined to stay demolished, countering the strokes of our "polished razor keen" with mighty blows of his bludgeon.

ALAS! we no longer take pleasure in demolishing opposite opinions. Frankly, we find them rather more interesting than our own, familiarity with which has bred a judicious contempt. We get tired of them, as we get tired of a suit of clothes which has gone a season or two. One should get a new set of opinions every little while in order not to appear old-fashioned.

And Yet He Recovered!

[From the Fergus Falls, Minn., Free Press.]

I have been on the sick list for a week or so, but coming out all right with the help of Dr. Brubeo. During my sick spell I received 4 works I had sent for: Dr. Karl Leibknecht's "The Earth belongs to the People." He was a hero. Upton Sinclair's "Profits of Religion"—is a gem. Robert Blatchford's "Not Guilty," which is a masterpiece. Also "The Religion of a Socialist" by Mary B. Kules. Every preacher should read it. I enjoyed the study between pains and coughing. Very respectfully,

ZERO IN ART.

[From a Grand Rapids trade sheet.]

A new way of eating old dishes was tried out at the recent meeting of the Vincennes (Indiana) Rotary Club with their ladies. Everyone was compelled to eat his or her dinner with only a knife, and there was much rivalry to see who could do it in the most artistic manner.

CONSIDERING the quality of the booze now sold, there is a fair chance that the country will poison itself before the first of July. The bar gin is especially deadly.

A COOKSHIRE LAD.

The sunlight on the steeple
Gleams gold upon the grey.
I watch the well-clad people
Come gathering to pray.

Theirs is a hymn and prayer God—
Their prayers are doubtless heard;
But my God is not their God,
Mine looks for deed, not word.

What can they know, securely
Who live in Cookshire here,
Of what we lads knew surely,
Through mud and blood and fear?

Soft organ-notes come straying
From candle-litten dark,
But I shall do my praying
Outdoors here, in the park.

HEART-BREAKING PROBLEM OF CONDUCT.

[From the British Weekly.]

Mrs. James and an acquaintance she does not care for, Mary Colls, are in a tramcar, when another lady, Miss Beamish, who is quite a stranger, rises to leave the car, dropping a valuable gold brooch. At the same time Mary Colls drops her handkerchief, which falls near the brooch. Mrs. James observes that her friend picks up both articles and puts them in her muff. What should Mrs. James do?

CURIOUS golfers who may follow the learned arguments on "what constitutes a good hole" must conclude that the purpose of the architects is not to make the game easy for democracy. Par figures mean nothing to the average player; they are for the few gifted beings who participate in national tournaments. As courses are now laid out, there is a "short way to the green," calling at the outset for a carry of, say, 190 yards. The next thing will be to station a policeman at the bunker, to chase off the course a player so unlucky as not to carry the hazard.

TEETH HISTORY.

WE think of a tooth as a completed product, wearing a little and subject to decay, but otherwise unchanging. There is some ground for this opinion, but if we accept it as wholly true we make a mistake. A horseman knows that when a horse has worn away the enamel border of a tooth the dentine, and even the pulp channel, becomes as solid and hard as ivory. In fact, it occasionally happens that a man wears the enamel from a tooth and finds that the dentine becomes hard and dense and serves very well in place of the worn out layers.

There is a mysterious disease known as erosion to which teeth are subject. For many years investigators have tried to explain erosion on the basis of chemical and even bacterial action. The probability is that it is an illustration of the fact that the shape and constitution of teeth change.

It has long been known that decay was most liable to occur in children. If you could get a child up to 12 years of age without decay there was not much danger of this degeneration occurring during the succeeding forty years. Pickerill demonstrated that the reason for this fact was change in the character and composition of the teeth. The teeth of young children are white and soft—malacotic. With age the tendency is for them to become yellowish in color, harder, denser, and more resistant to decay—sclerotic.

The common name for the deciduous teeth is milk teeth. The central incisor is the tooth next the middle line. Its tooth body begins to harden at the end of the fourth month of fetal life. At birth the body of the tooth is completely formed, but it is without root. At 6 months of age its root is about two-fifths formed. It is about this time that the tooth erupts. At 12 months the root is four-fifths formed; at 18 months the tooth has a completed root, is in position, but is white or clear and soft. The longer it remains out the harder it becomes. But the process of absorption soon begins. At 4 years one-fifth of the root has been absorbed. At 5 years, three-fifths; at 6 years, four-fifths. At 7 the root is wholly gone and the tooth is lost. Marshall says the formation of this tooth is complete at two years.

The second tooth from the middle line is known as the lateral incisor. The body of this tooth begins to harden in the seventeenth week of fetal life. It is complete at birth. When the child is 6 months of age the root is two-fifths formed. It erupts at 7 to 10 months. The root is seven-eighths formed at 12 months and completely formed at 14 months. Marshall says its growth is complete at 28 months. At 5 years its root is one-eighth absorbed. At 6 years, three-eighths; 7 years, two-thirds; 8 years, wholly absorbed—and about this time it is shed.

The third tooth from the center is called the cuspid. It also goes by other names. It begins to harden in the seventeenth week of fetal life (this is more than five months prior to birth). At birth its crown is four-fifths completed. At 6 months of age its root is one-fifth formed. At 12 months, three-fifths. It is erupted at 14 to 20 months. At 18 months its root is seven-eighths formed. The tooth is complete at 22 months—28 months, according to Marshall. Then begins the process of absorption. At 9 one-fifth of the root is gone. At 10, two-fifths; at 11, three-fifths, and at 12 all. About this time the tooth is lost.

The fourth tooth from the center is the first molar. Its crown begins to harden in the eighteenth week of fetal life. When the child is 6 months old the crown is complete and the root is beginning to form. At 12 months of age the root is one-half formed. At 18 months it is seven-eighths formed. Eruption occurs between the fourteenth and eighteenth months. Marshall says this tooth is complete, root and crown, at 20 months. The root is one-sixth absorbed at 7 years, one-half at 9 years, and all absorbed at 10 years.

The fifth tooth from the center is the second molar. Its crown begins to harden in the eighteenth week of fetal life. When the child is 6 months old the crown is complete and the root is beginning to harden. At 12 months the root is one-half formed; at 18 months, four-fifths, and at 22 months the tooth is completely formed. Marshall gives 36 months as the time of completion. This tooth erupts between the twentieth and thirty-second months. At 8 years the tip of the root has been absorbed. At 9 the root is one-fourth absorbed. At 10, one-third, and at 11, five-sixths.

The permanent teeth succeed the deciduous teeth, but in many instances the nearest permanent tooth does not correspond to the milk tooth which it displaced.

The first permanent tooth to appear is the six year molar. This tooth appears while the deciduous teeth are still in the mouth. At that time it is the sixth tooth from the center and the last tooth in the series. The crown of the 6 year molar begins to harden or calcify in the twenty-fifth week of fetal life. This is almost four months before birth. Its crown develops slowly, reaching maturity at the 5th year of age. This tooth erupts between the fifth and the seventh years and its roots are completely formed and hardened by the ninth year.

Among the permanent teeth the central incisor is the tooth nearest the middle line. Its body begins to form in the first year of life and is practically complete by the fifth year. At 6 years one-sixth of the root has hardened. At 7, one-third, and at 10 the root is complete. It erupts between 6 and 8 years of age.

The second tooth from the center is known as the lateral incisor. Its crown begins to calcify in the first year of life and is complete by the sixth year. At 7 years one-sixth of the root is complete; at 10 years, all of it. The tooth erupts between 7 and 9.

The third tooth from the center is known as the cuspid. Its crown begins to calcify in the third year and is five-sixths complete when the child reaches 7 years. At 8 years of age the root is one-sixth formed; at 12 years, five-sixths formed. The tooth erupts at 11 to 14.

The fourth tooth from the center is known as the first bicuspid. Its crown begins to calcify at 4 years of age, at 8 it is complete, at 12 years the roots are complete. This tooth erupts at 9 to 11 years.

The fifth tooth from the center is the second bicuspid. The body of this tooth begins to form in the fourth and is complete by the eighth year. It erupts in the tenth to twelfth year and the formation of the root is complete by the twelfth year.

The seventh tooth from the center is the second molar. This tooth begins to form in the fifth and its body is completely formed by the tenth year. It erupts at 11 to 13 years. Its roots are completely formed by the sixteenth year.

The eighth tooth from the center and the last one in the row is the third molar or wisdom tooth. The calcification of the body of this tooth begins in the eighth year and is completed by the eleventh year. The roots begin to form in the eleventh year and are completed by the nineteenth year. The eruption of this tooth ordinarily occurs between the sixteenth and the twenty-first year.

During this period of tooth formation any severe illness, any infection, any profound disturbance of nutrition may mark itself on the teeth. Constitutional syphilis may show itself in the coarse notches which distinguish Hutchinson's teeth. While this deformity is generally due to syphilis it may also be due to other profound constitutional impairments. The fine serrated edges not infrequently found in the permanent incisors are due to infantile diarrhoeas and other profound illnesses of infancy. Of even more importance are the soft, crumbly, promptly decaying teeth which some children have. All of these conditions are the result of causes which operate before the teeth are erupted and generally several years before.

The principal reason for cleaning and, where necessary, filling the cavities in the deciduous teeth is not the milk teeth themselves, but is the forming permanent teeth (which lie below) and the jaws. If the milk tooth were the only consideration it might be just as well to neglect it, permit it to decay and, if necessary, pull it. But to follow that policy is to harm the underlying permanent tooth and to prevent the development of the jaw. That is the reason the milk teeth should be cleaned with thread, cloth brushes and washed almost from the day they erupt.

The Bridgeport board of health gives the following advice as to the care of the mouths of children from 1 to 7 years of age:

1—Do not feed the child on sweets and pastries. These foods quickly ferment in the mouth and aid in causing decay.

2—Do not let the child have food between meals. If he must have something give him an apple or some kind of raw fruit.

3—See that the teeth are thoroughly brushed after each meal and especially just before going to bed. Most of the decay takes place during sleep.

4—The teeth should be rubbed and polished at least once in three months. This polishing process helps very much to prevent decay.

5—Do not wait for the child to have a toothache but take him to the dentist every six months and make sure that any small cavities are filled with a material that will last during the life of the tooth. If a child eats oatmeal, and oatmeal is a good food for children, after eating, the mouth should be washed and the teeth rubbed clean.

TREATMENT FOR COOTIES.

L. M. writes: "Have been troubled with what I thought was itching. I now believe same to be caused by cooties. Have tried by various means to get rid of them, but to no use. Kindly advise at earliest possible date a cure for me."

REPLY.

Use kerosene oil and vinegar locally. Wash thoroughly with soap and water. Put on fresh clothing. Treat the clothing removed with carbon tetrachloride as follows: Get a ten gallon oil can and cut the top off (any other tall metal container will do as well). Into this container put your underclothing, top clothing, hats, shoes, everything. On top of the clothing place a layer of blotting paper. Pour on this about two ounces of carbon tetrachloride. Cover with about four layers of towel. Allow to stand for three hours. Remove clothing and hang in the open air for four hours. It is better to iron the seams of all clothing after treatment with the chemical. Cooties live in the clothing rather than on the body.

"RACIAL NEIGHBORLINESS."

Chicago, April 29.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The editorial in regard to "Racial Neighborliness" is well taken. Although I am a constant reader of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, and often am at variance with its opinions, the above mentioned editorial is without doubt clear and precise, and its suggestions will do much to further a mutual understanding and clear conception of conditions which will help to make just such ill advised and hasty disturbances as that of last Tuesday night improbable.

Racial antipathy is psychological and not biological, and the sooner people grow to understand that fact the better it will be for all concerned. Prejudice is not instinctive, it is founded upon ignorance of true conditions, and as soon as we shall stop regarding our black brother as a moral derelict, or otherwise as a person to be avoided, and attempt to know and appreciate his true sterling worth as evidenced by his progress "despite obstacles" during the last sixty years, we may go about arranging upon a suitable basis for the settlement of differences for the promotion of "forbearance and amity, justice and neighborliness."

In reference to the joint commission advocated by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, I beg leave to offer the name of one person with whom I am personally acquainted, who is best fitted to represent the Negro in matters of this kind. Mrs. Ida B. Wells-Barnett, whose name is familiar more or less to all of us, and who is being considered as a nominee to the next school board, is the best person needed to further conciliation between all parties concerned.

ANSWERS.

Aaron Dahlin, Knoxville, Tenn.—The headquarters and 2d battalion of the 20th engineers have been ordered home and are now awaiting available transportation.

Lena Proffer, South Holland, Ill.—The supply company of the 34th infantry will not be detached and sent home. The entire regiment belongs to the 7th division and is to remain on duty with the occupation army forces.

N. D. Loewenthal—Balloon Company 10 has been cited for early convoy.

Robert Thomason, Charleston, Ill.—We do not know when Company K, 22d engineers, will return. They have not been mentioned with the units which anticipate early sailing.

Tully McGrew—The 106th sanitary train will leave for home soon, but no date has been determined for their sailing.

Mrs. Martin, Little Rock, Ark.—Air service casual company No. 7 has been assigned early convoy.

Sara Washburn—The fact that your brother returned with a casual detachment does not indicate that he is ill. You are confusing the terms, casual and casualty. Casual detachments are composed of men from various units organized into a body for ease in handling for traveling.

F. B. H.—The 161st infantry complete is expected to sail for home very soon.

R. Farrell—The entire 79th division, including the 313th infantry, is scheduled for home-coming in June.

W. O. L., Tipton, Ia.—Evacuation hospital 9 is attached to the 3d army and is to remain in the army of occupation.

Irving Fisher, San Francisco, Cal.—You have been misinformed. The state of Illinois is not paying a bonus of six months' pay to its fighters. Upon your discharge from service you will be paid the bonus of $60 provided by the government.

Henry Atkinson—Mobile hospital No. 1 is on the list of units which are booked for early return. The date of their sailing is not known.

A. R. Jones, Paxton, Ill.—To recover your overcoat and shoes which you turned in at the time of your discharge either apply to the camp from which you were released or to the director of storage, Washington, D. C. This action of soldiers retaining their uniforms applies to those who have been discharged from service since Nov. 11, 1918.

P. C. Landsman, Buchanan, Mich.—The 3d corps gas school is not an organized unit of the army. The school detachments are on priority for sailing.

P. N. Y., Omaha, Neb.—The 444th engineers is now in the 686th transportation corps. It has not been cited for return.

Mrs. J. Flanagan.—Neither the 28th infantry nor the 142d infantry has been ordered home yet. The former is with the 1st division in Germany, and will not return for several months. The latter belongs to the 36th division, the infantry regiments of which have had sailing orders canceled and will not return before summer.

Mrs. B. K. Freud.—The 4th corps artillery park is with the 4th corps attached to the 3d army. It is not known when they will return.

A. J. Dickson, Kankakee, Ill.—Base hospital 65 and camp hospital 85 are not on the list of units which have been ordered home.

Blanch Norman—The 53d coast artillery arrived on the Nansemond March 11. The war department could probably give you the movement during the war of that unit.

T. Woods, Sturgis, Mich.—Company B, 415th telegraph battalion, has been designated for early return, but has not been assigned to a ship.

G. R. Edwards.—Replacement squadron 3 is slated to leave France at an early date.

Julia Christoff, Lafayette, Ind.—Mobile hospital 1 will sail soon. We do not know the name of the transport on which it will sail. When arrangements are completed for their departure they will probably take the ship available at that time.

Amelia Hasen—The headquarters of the Y. M. C. A. national war work council is [illegible] Madison avenue, New York City.

H. Johnson—The 315th labor battalion is not attached to any division. Very few of these units have come home yet. This one is not mentioned for early return.

Mrs. M. J. Pratt—The 13th [illegible] ordnance company is assigned early convoy, but it is not known yet on which boat they will sail. Their return will be announced in the papers a few days before they arrive.

Myra Polleth—A. P. O. 701 is in St. Nazaire. Yes, that is a port of embarkation.

B. B. Matthews, Brocton, Ill.—[illegible] company 304, now stationed in Mars-sur-[illegible], France, has not been issued sailing orders.

Mrs. Howard Thomas—Base hospital [illegible], near Nantes, France. No mention of its return yet.

Mrs. R. B. Thompson, Bloomington, Ill.—The units of the 36th division which are to remain in France until after July 1 are as follows: Headquarters of the 71st and 72d infantry brigades, infantry regiments Nos. 141, 142, 143, and 144, 132d and [illegible] machine gun battalions.

P. D. S., Belvidere, Ill.—Ordnance base depot 4 has not left France yet. It has not been designated for early home-coming. We could not possibly say on which boat they will sail. Such information is known only a few days before the units sail.

TO PROVIDE NEW GUTTERS.

Chicago, April 25.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Our neighbor has a very defective gutter and whenever it rains the result is that we always have a regular flood in our gangway and yard, causing a great inconvenience to us.

Is there a possible chance of having this fault remedied?
READER.

An investigation was made by an inspector from this department, as a result of which a notice was served on the owner to properly repair or provide new roof gutter for west side of building.

COMPENSATION FOR LOSS OF FINGER.

Cicero, Ill., April 25.—[To the Friend of the People.]—A few weeks ago I lost a finger between the first and second joints and the crippling of another. The company I was working for has its employés insured.

What remuneration can I get a week while laid up and can I get any damages for the loss of the finger? Am a married man with six children under 16 years of age.
READER.

Inasmuch as he has more than three children under the age of 16 he is entitled to compensation at the rate of 65 per cent of his average weekly wage during the period of temporary total incapacity and thereafter to compensation at the same rate for thirty-five [35] weeks for the loss of the index finger, if the amputation was through the middle phalanx, that is, the middle joint; if the finger was amputated at the articulation between the middle and distal phalanx or through the distal phalanx, he is entitled to compensation for the period of seventeen and one-half [17½] weeks.

It is impossible to determine the amount of compensation payable for the other finger which he refers to as "crippled." He should procure a statement from the attending physician or surgeon showing the percentage of loss of use of this finger and settlement should be made upon that basis.
THOMAS A. MURPHY,
Chief Industrial Examiner.

BELDEN AVENUE IMPROVEMENT.

Chicago, April 25.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Would you please tell me if Belden avenue is included in the streets that are to be paved this year?
B. M.

There are no proceedings under way at the present time. If you are interested in improving the street you should address a petition to the board with signatures of property owners which will be given due consideration.
M. J. FAHERTY,
President Board of Local Improvements.

7. Yes, but it is probably advisable to probate in this case.

LEOPOLD GODOWSKY

By James Gibbons Huneker

In a half-forgotten study of Flaubert's masterpiece, "L'Education Sentimentale," which he rightly calls "A Tragic Novel," George Moore compares the great Frenchman to Brahma "creating the passing spectacle of life to relieve his eternal ennui." . . . Now, Leopold Godowsky is not Brahma, and he has never suffered from ennui, thanks to his tremendous capacity for work; yet I can't help picturing him as a sort of impassive Asiatic deity seated before the keyboard of his instrument calmly surveying the eternal spectacle of music and its many shapes. All schools, all styles he knows, but upon this vast knowledge he has no desire to make any personal comment. Passionless, passionate, objective, and subjective, his crystal clear comprehension of the musical universe has made him apparently assume the attitude of an omniscient spectator, though he is neither one nor the other.

In an article several years ago I wrote that Leopold Godowsky is a pianist for pianists, as Shelley is a poet for poets. But everybody reads Shelley nowadays, and no doubt compares him unfavorably with the earsplitting verse of the cacophonous young poets of the hour. Leonard Liebling took exception to my ascription, and I fancy he is right; every musical person listens to the alluring playing of Godowsky quite impervious to the fact that there are aspects of his art which will always escape them. In his playing he is transcendental. This doesn't mean that he is frostily objective; he is human, emotional, and has at his finger ends all styles. It is the fine equilibrium of intellect and emotion that compels our admiration.

No one plays Chopin like Godowsky; no, not even that tricky kobold, Vladimir de Pachmann. Paderewski is more emotional; Josef Hofmann extorts a richer, a more sonorous tone from the wires; nevertheless, Godowsky is a Chopinist in a class apart. He doesn't drip honey in the nocturnes as does Ignace Jan, premier of Poland; he can't thunder the polonaises like his friend Jozio from Cracow; but these qualities he gives us in his own scale of tonal values. He is a powerful man with muscles that are both velvet and steel. When he wishes he, too, can sound the orchestral note; but, then, he seldom wishes this. His feeling for the limitations of the piano recalls the words of Rafael Joseffy: "I'm not a brass band"; Joseffy, who, in his abhorrence of a smeary touch produced his legato with the aid of the pedals, and what an aristocratic floating touch was his! What poetry! What atmosphere!

SETTING aside his Chopin interpretations, which we take for granted as he is Slavic, have you heard Godowsky play Mozart, or the neglected Haydn; or Schubert, Schumann? Of his Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms I shall not write. I can only repeat—all schools are at his beck, and if they are "perfect pictures, perfectly framed and hung," as Joseffy said of his beloved master, Tausig, there is also the personal equation, for me, full of magic. Sensationalism, the pianistic fracas, posing for the gallery, all the bag of cheap tricks this great pianist eschews. He is master of the art of playing the piano beautifully. His exquisitely plastic phrasing, artistic massing of colors, above all, the nobility of his conception—little wonder I call him a Brahma of the keyboard, as far fetched as the simile may sound.

It must be nearly twenty years ago, anyhow eighteen, that I entertained Vladimir de Pachmann in my Dream Barn on Madison avenue at Seventy-sixth street. The tenth floor, a room as big and as lofty as a cathedral. Alas! where are such old fashioned apartments today? After eating a duck, a kotchka, cooked Polish fashion, and borsch, beet soup, with numerous Slavic side dishes, preceded by the inevitable zakuska—those appetite slaying bonnes bouches—De Pachmann fiercely demanded cognac. I was embarrassed. Not drinking spirits, I had inconsiderately forgotten the taste of others. De Pachmann, who is a child at heart, too often a naughty child, cried to heaven that I was a hell of a host! He said this in Russian, then in French, Italian, German, Polish, Spanish, English, and wound up with a hearty Hebrew "Raca!" which may mean hatred, or revenge, certainly something not endearing.

But the worst was to come. There stood my big concert grand piano, and he circled about the instrument as if it were a dangerous monster. Finally he sniffed and snapped: "My contract does not permit me to play a piano of this make." I hadn't thought of asking him, fearing Chopin's classic retort after a dinner party at Paris: "Madame, j'ai mangé si peu!" Finally I saw the hole in the millstone and excused myself. When I returned with a bottle of abominable cognac the little man's malicious smile changed to a look of ecstasy, and he was not a drinking man ever, but he was accustomed to his "petit verre" after dining and was ill tempered when deprived of it.

Such is human nature, something that Puritans, prohibitionists, and other pernicious busybodies will never understand. And then this wizard lifted the fallboard of my piano and, quite forgetful of that "contract," began playing. And how he did play. Ye gods! Bacchus, Apollo, and Venus and all other pleasant celestial persons, how you must have reveled when De Pachmann played! In the more intimate atmosphere of my apartment his music was of a gossamer web, iridescent, aerial, an aeolian harp doubled by a diabolic subtlety. Albert Ross Parsons, one of the few living pupils of Tausig, in reply to my query, How did Joseffy compare with Tausig? answered: "Joseffy was like the multicolored mist that encircles a mighty mountain; but beautiful." So Pachmann's weaving enchantments seemed in comparison to Godowsky's profounder playing.

AND what did Vladimir, hero of double notes, play? Nothing but Godowsky, then new to me. Liszt had been his god, but Godowsky was now his living deity. He had studied, mastered, and memorized all those transcendental variations on Chopin studies, the most significant variations since the Brahms-Paganini scaling of the heights of Parnassus; and I heard for the first time the paraphrase of Weber's "Invitation to the Valse," a much more viable arrangement than Tausig's; also thrice as difficult. However, technique, as sheer technique, does not enter into the musical zone of Godowsky. He has restored polyphony to its central position, thus bettering in that respect Chopin, Schumann, and Liszt. I have called attention elsewhere to Godowsky's solo sonata, which evokes images of Chopin and Brahms and Liszt—only in the scherzo.

Instead of exhuming such an "ungrateful," unpianistic composition as Tschaikovsky's Sonata in G, pianists of caliber might more profitably introduce the Godowsky work. He is too modest or else too indifferent to put it on his program. It "lies" so well for the keyboard, yet there is no denying its difficulties, chiefly polyphonic; the patterns are intricate, though free from the clogging effects of the Brahms sonatas. De Pachmann delighted his two auditors from 10 p. m. to 3 a. m. It is safe to wager that the old Carrollton never heard such music making before or since. When he left, happy over his triumph—I was actually flabbergasted by the new music—he whispered: "Hein! What you think! You think I can play this wonderful music? You are mistaken. Wait till you hear Leopold Godowsky play. We are all children, all woodchoppers, compared with him!"

A SOURCE book of poverty is "The Fields of the Fatherless" [Doran], written with the rare art of utter simplicity and lack of literary artistry. It is an autobiography of a fatherless girl whose life was almost typically stark, whose mountain peak of joy was a convalescence in a hospital, and whose nearest approach to love is pathetically spoken in three paragraphs, where she says she is wondering about love and would like to ask the doctor about it!

"It was too delicate a subject to broach to him. Besides, I hoped he did not know about love. I had all my life felt a terrible loneliness and longed passionately for a friend I could trust. I liked the doctor and hoped to find a friend in him. If he knew about love then he would likely be getting married, and I liked him better as a bachelor."

With not only poverty but illiteracy and the shadow of her mother's violent drunken visits as a starting point, she trudged along a path of life so dull that it is amazing that a person so obviously endowed with sensibilities could have kept her balance. Jean Roy describes that journey with so little conscious art and so great a natural simplicity that she succeeds in transferring the dullness to the reader. One is impatient that nothing ever happens to her of importance. A less honest autobiographer would have gilded her emotions with adjectives or made the brooding tragedy of her life something to tear at readers' hearts. But not Jean Roy. Her life—to her—was neither fragrant with happiness nor too offensive for bearing, and it is her life as she lived it, not as a possible "lady" would have lived it, that she records. Having found the quiet pleasures of books, with a comfortable "place" where she has time to read and learn to paint—imagine!—she looks forward, as the book closes, to a gentle and happy old age in service. Jean Roy's autobiography is what the old fashioned reviewers call a "human document" of the most human kind.

"Henri Bachelin, the winner of the Vie Heureuse prize (a literary award second only to the Goncourt Academy prize in importance), is at once a native and an interpreter of that section of central France which is known as Le Morvan," writes a Paris correspondent. "In crowning his 'Le Serviteur' the Vie Heureuse jury has not only honored an individual author of sterling merit but has directed attention to the movement for intellectual decentralization commonly known as Régionalisme and, more particularly, to the part played therein by the group whose organ is the periodical Les Cahiers Nivernais du Centre and whose membership includes (or did include) Jules Renard, Romain Rolland, E. Guillaumin, Amédée Dunois, Hugues Lapaire, Marguerite Audoux, and Charles-Louis Philippe."

"Types of Pan" [Houghton Mifflin] came off the presses on Wednesday and here am I still sitting on the doorstep waiting for the postman to bring me a copy. I'd hate to miss him! I think Keith Preston is the funniest funny man that ever looked a book straight in the eye and told it what he thought about it. I am the only person in Chicago who doesn't write poetry, so I can't versify, but as my childhood friend Henry Sell says of himself, I am an expert picker of other men's brains. Here's a bouquet I plucked from the Line O' Type Calcitrosus:

The pipes of Pan! The pipes of Pan!
Their music through the woodland ran;
They fed the shepherds silvery notes
The while the shepherds fed their goats,
Till Vergil Pan, goats, shepherds took
And put them in his latest book;
Their music down the ages ran—
The pipes of Pan! The pipes of Pan!
"The Types of Pan!" "The Types of Pan!"
They daily in the Column ran.
We listened for his well known note
The while the poet starved—the goat.
Then came a publisher and took
Pan and his Types to makes a book.
Behold fresh from the printer man
"The Types of Pan!" "The Types of Pan!"

CALCITROSUS.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

THE CRIME WAVE.

I know we have policemen b[illegible]
In this, our lovely town,
Because I see them frequently
Meandering aroun',
And now and then, when I have time
To read the thrilling news,
I see where they have just unearthed
A brand new batch of clues.

A bank was robbed the other day—
I mean another one—
And all the bandits got away,
With all the checks and mon[illegible]
But our police were on the job,
They never nap nor snooze,
And in a week or two they had
A lot of lovely clues.

Most every night a citizen
Returning from his job
Is overtaken by a crook
And hammered on the nob.
But who could seriously regret
The valuables they lose
When well they know that in return
They'll get a lot of clues.

Some people sneeringly deride
The system here in play
Of letting all the thieving thugs
Go thugging on their way.
They say that our policemen shirk
But those are not my views—
I know the cops are on the job—
Just look at all the clues.

RETURNED SOLDIERS AND CRIME

By Robert H. Gault

IT is alleged hat Lee Landers, returned soldier, is criminally connected with the unhappy death of Maude Saunders. This brings to mind the statement attributed to Chief of Police Garrity that soldiers returning from the front and from our domestic camps are responsible for the crime wave that grips not only Chicago but the country at large. The chief does not say nor imply that all soldiers are thugs, but it is implied that many criminals and a host who were in peace times on the ragged edge of being criminals were caught up in the draft. Now they are being released and are compensating for their enforced rectitude in camp and trench.

This argument has force, but it would be stronger if the wave had not become a quite perceptible swell in 1918 before the heroes began the homeward march. I have it from New York City's police commissioner that within his jurisdiction at least the homicide rate increased from 3.4 per 100,000 population in 1917 to 8.7 in 1918.

That is a large step. It cannot be attributed to returning soldiers. They had not begun to return in appreciable numbers within the period covered by the report. In Cook county, according to the coroner's report, there was a decrease in the absolute number of homicides in 1918 as compared with 1917. The rate is high enough at that: 9.2 per population of 100,000. No finished conclusion can be offered at this moment concerning the total volume of crimes in 1918 as compared with 1917, and certainly the same negative statement is justified of the few months during which our military organizations have been returning to us in considerable numbers.

A SUPERFICIAL survey arouses the suspicion that an avalanche of crime is upon us, and it must be admitted, that, judging of the future by the past, we should expect an increment of crime following the war. This was notoriously true of the several years following our civil war if we may trust the thoughtful reports of the Wisconsin prison commissioners of the period, the officials of the Eastern penitentiary in Pennsylvania, and others.

But this expectation is based not alone upon the reports of a half century ago, but as well as upon the plain facts of today. The draft was no respecter of persons. It goes without saying that thousands of men were swept into the camps and trenches who were, at best, half-heartedly law abiding at home and on the ragged edge of a criminal career. They were unrecognized social tinder. Fortunately many of them had not got into the way of a spark. Others there were in large numbers who had already entered upon a criminal career. Some of them may be contributing to the present wave.

For such folk as these military life is not a panacea that guarantees the development of the civic virtues. The ardent partisan of the theory that military training is a strong character builder must remember that these men did not get into the system when they were as yet mere youngsters. They were in the khaki at the longest all too short a time to accomplish the rebuilding of character even in the best of circumstances.

NOT only so but there are certain factors in camp and trench life that make positively for the breakdown of certain characteristics that we strive for as civilians. For instance, we are all gamblers by nature, thrilled by a chance. Our soldiers have been gambling with life and death in the field and trench. Even in the course of their preparation in our domestic camps they have been mentally living over again and again, in anticipation the crucial moments of a desperate chance on the other side. It is natural that they return to us with a somewhat supersensitive disposition to take and even make a desperate chance in a clash with the rest of us. Especially does this apply to those who, before they went away, were in the vestibule of a criminal career or balancing on the edge.

Add to this what everyone will recognize in his own experience—the tendency to reaction after a great strain. A period of carelessness follows the completion of the long drawn out task that has required every ounce of our energy and restraint. The angle of the reaction is the test of preformed character.

The obvious antidote against these reactions is such preparation as Chicagoans and other Americans are busily trying to make for the easy reception of the returning soldier, without hitch or jar, into profitable and respectable industry. That is more easily said than done. No doubt when we have gone to the utmost in this attempt we shall still have to bear patiently and thoughtfully with crime problems of increased irksomeness during a post-war period.

LABOR AND EDUCATION

By Thomas Stockton Baker

AT the present time there is no phase of the life of the nation which calls for more serious thought than the position of labor. What can education do to help in this most practical of questions? How can the educational system of the United States bring greater enlightenment to the workingman and how can it improve his standards of achievement?

During the war there were not enough men to do the world's work. The laboring man has therefore gained an unprecedented importance. This is the day of the laboring man and Mr. Schwab's prophecy that the future also is his may be right. He has come to feel that he has a greater political importance than ever before. He has been told that the highest ideal of a national government is a democratic government.

It is clear that labor is to be a more important element in the government of the world and in the economic life of nations. It requires no great amount of perspicacity to foresee this new condition. Labor has acquired more power and more influence. Have the laboring men sufficient self-control—sufficient knowledge of the needs of the country to use this increased power wisely?

The war has been fought against the autocracy of a strongly centralized government. We must think of the danger that may arise from an autocracy of labor. If labor, with the great power which it already has and with the still greater influence which seems likely to come to it, is not made to realize its obligations to the state, we shall be in danger of a heedless and uncertain form of government which will be a menace to the safety of our institutions.

THE end of the war shows the workingmen more completely organized and more definitely aligned with respect to their employers than at the beginning. It will be seen that the issues between the two classes have become more sharply defined. If we are to get the full benefit from the victory in the struggle for the liberty of the individual we must have industrial peace. The advancement of the United States as a world power and as a commercial power cannot be realized if labor is to demand more than a just share in the future of our country.

We may expect some radical legislation. Some of this will be an entirely reasonable response to the demands of the times for increased safeguards for the health and security of the workingman. Legislation which has to do with health insurance, improved working conditions, old age pensions, profit sharing systems—we may expect to see pushed to the fore. But in order to win the poor man it may become the fashion to harry the rich. The penalties of being wealthy have become heavy and will continue. The rich men are being taxed in a manner which, a few years ago, would have seemed confiscation. The art of making the rich pay liberally for the maintenance of the state will not be forgotten. But proper relations of capital and labor can only be established by an enlightened public opinion, and this can be secured best by improving and extending the educational opportunities.

The most important development of the future in so far as education has to do with the laboring man, will be concerned not so much with the conventional school and college courses as with the special forms of training which are offered outside the regular curricula. The educator will not only have to develop these courses, but he will have to be a popularizer. He will have to show the laboring man the new opportunities which are presented to him and the advantages which will come to him from further study and from further training.

The starting point for the change in educational methods as they concern the laboring man is the idea that he is no longer an overworked individual. The teacher should be able to furnish him with the means of improving himself in his spare time if he has the inclination to do so. The man who wishes to prepare himself for a higher stage in his work is likely to be a more productive workman and he is much less likely to cherish unsound principles.

EDUCATION is confronted with a great task. It must see to it that the laboring man obtains a broader and more thorough general training so that he may understand the responsibilities of citizenship in a democracy and so that he can be prepared to take advantage of the opportunities for advancement that are open to him. The first essential in this program is that the schools shall do better work. The relation of labor to education does not involve merely technical training and training in the trades, but it means higher standards in every phase of instruction which the schools have to offer.

The schools would do well to strive to make every pair of hands available for some useful work at the time of a crisis. The war has taught us that leisure is waste, and that waste is a sin against the state. This idea has become fixed in the American conscience and it may persist. We shall demand that along with the pursuit of abstract studies the schools shall offer courses that can be put to every day use. How many men have felt the inadequacy of their education when they were called upon to fill out their questionnaire at the time of their registration for military service? They have realized their incompetency when they were unable to say that they could perform any one of the long list of practical tasks set forth in this paper.

The schools must on the one hand strive to meet the increased demand for skilled men and on the other hand promote a greater degree of enlightenment, so that laboring men will not adopt a program which concerns itself only with their own aggrandizement. The higher institutions of learning should encourage a thoughtful and scientific study of labor questions in the hope that specialists may be developed who can deal with the relations of capital and labor in a dispassionate, objective manner.

The time is past when we can afford to adopt an ostrich-like method of burying our heads in the sand whenever the aims of labor are mentioned. The more we know about the laboring man the better we shall be able to understand the change in his point of view. The desire to study the tendencies in the world of labor is illustrated by an expression that has come into vogue of late. It is the phrase "human engineering." It is a bad phrase. It places human beings under the same caption as electricity, mechanics, chemistry. Electrical engineering, mechanical engineering, chemical engineering—human engineering. The combination does not sound right, but back of the phrase there is a very pregnant idea and one that is especially significant today. Men are trying to find out the point of view of other men. Capitalists and executives are trying to understand the workingman, and the man who is the specialist in this branch of work is the "human engineer."

Even in some of the technical schools the students are required to take courses in industrial relations as a result of the theory that no matter how efficient an engineer may be he cannot be successful unless he understands the men with whom he has to work. These institutions may not attempt to train "human engineers," but they demand that every technical expert should occupy himself at least with this one of the "humanities."

This plan represents an important advance in technical instruction.

The discussions which used to be so fervent, of the relative merits of practical education and the traditional form of schooling, seem now to be trivial. We must think of education as one of the chief instruments to be employed in dealing with the new conditions of life. Its first duty at this time may be concerned with practical instruction, but there is danger of going too far. We dare not throw on the scrap heap all the ideal considerations which have formed an important part in every plan for the training of youth. We dare not think that the cultivation of the hand should take the place of the cultivation of the mind. We shall not give up the study of the impractical branches of knowledge. If we do, the advancement of learning will stop short.

But the education of the future will be practical in a larger sense than it has ever been before—not practical merely in teaching craftsmanship and manual skill, but practical in the sense that the school and college must have a closer regard for the economic and industrial, and even the political development of our country.

With this in mind the college of liberal arts will be modified. It should not sacrifice its ideal of the pursuit of knowledge for its own sake, but the college student must learn something of immediate service in his life's work. Nor can the college overlook the fact that there are national and social questions about which no well educated man can afford to remain in ignorance. Fathers in planning careers for their sons today are thinking less about the learned professions. They are thinking of a form of training for the new industrial life of America. The aims of the college of liberal arts as it has existed will seem rather indistinct to those who must prepare themselves for the changed conditions of living.

The schools of collegiate grade which furnish special and technical training should be enlarged in their scope and should be connected more definitely with our national industries.

The secondary schools should teach their curriculum more thoroughly, no matter whether it is classical or technical, and they should give to each boy and girl the opportunity of learning at least the elements of some useful occupation. No one should be graduated from high school without having followed at least one vocational course.

This educational axiom is also a measure of national security, since the war has shown an unsuspected and pressing need of men and women trained along technical lines. Such special courses would be in addition to the regular academic studies, which should not be allowed to lapse or to be neglected in any way.

EDUCATION cannot resolve all the world's difficulties. There has been a tendency to place upon the schools some of the responsibilities which should be borne by the home and by other social agencies. We knew that a little learning is a dangerous thing. We know also that the highly organized schools of Germany have not prevented the fatherland from destruction. In fact, they have hastened its downfall because the German educational system has lent itself to the malign purposes of Germany's rulers. But this is not the fault of education. It is the result of making militarism an adjunct of the schools, or, rather, making the schools the adjunct of militarism.

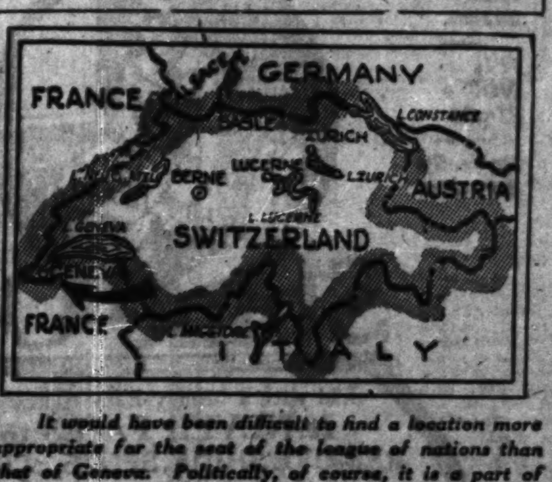
We believe that the security of our country depends on a well organized and well administered educational system. The spread of bolshevism is due to the fact that selfish and designing men are using ignorant or half educated men for their own purposes. The schools of the United States may not be able to scotch the hare-brained theories of the European revolutionists, but it is hard to think of any more effective aid in checking the spread of these doctrines.

The schools must become more than ever before the centers of serious work. It is impossible to take the millions of men who compose the armies of Europe and America from their usual pursuits and dedicate them to the work of fighting without subtracting a large amount from the progress of learning. It is therefore all the more important that the schools shall attempt to do all that is possible to balance this great debt, which has been made by the inaction, or, sadder still, the loss of many of the best minds of the world. We should be thinking of education as a means of repairing the wastage that has taken place. We should also be thinking of education as a means of checking the extravagant and eccentric social and political theories which are sure to show themselves.

Educators must not only teach, but they must preach the necessity of learning. But what changes should be made in the regular system of schools to make them helpful in meeting the new conditions? The standards of industry of the pupils and the standards of efficiency of the teachers should be raised. There is no need of a wholesale change in the curriculum, but the subjects that are being taught should be taught more effectively.

There is danger in thinking of education, especially practical education, as a means of getting rich quick. The schools will be called on more than ever to furnish men and women with the means of earning a livelihood. But if we accept this as the chief purpose of scholastic training, there will be little progress in the arts and sciences. By emphasizing the practical, people may forget that the advance of human society does not depend merely upon material things. There must be a higher ideal of education than the materialistic ideal. At present our minds are fixed on questions of reconstruction. In performing these tasks we must get all the help we can from the schools and the colleges, but we must not think that they exist merely for today. They must anticipate what the world will need tomorrow.

The Capital of the World



It would have been difficult to find a location more appropriate for the seat of the league of nations than that of Geneva. Politically, of course, it is a part of Switzerland, traditionally the one nation of Europe whose neutrality is least likely to be violated. Geographically, however, as indicated in the map, it is virtually a French city, the Swiss frontier forming a projection here which is almost entirely surrounded by France.

AN APOLOGY TO OUR READERS.

The rotogravure section of this issue contains a picture identified as a view of Geneva. The photograph was so described by Messrs. Underwood & Underwood, who supplied it. Since it was received and prepared for publication the photographers have notified "The Tribune" that this was an error and that the picture was taken in Zurich.

The correction followed the picture by several days and was received too late to rectify the mistake. Hence this explanation—and apology.

Don't WAIT for That Raise

You get a raise or a better job only when you have grown to its size. If you wait for advancement to come in the "natural course of events" you will wait a long time—and someone else may take what should have been yours.

Mere time "on the job" gets you nothing. It's growth that counts.

Outgrow your present job by qualifying yourself in what has become a recognized, well-paid vocation — the operation of Burroughs Bookkeeping and Calculating Machines.

News of the Religious World

Churches Welcome Returning Heroes in Practical Way

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

TODAY is the soldiers' and sailors' honor day in all churches. The celebration of yesterday was under the direction of the civic authorities. Today has been assigned to the churches.

The auditoriums will be decorated, words of welcome said, and a personal effort made to cause the men to feel they have done nobly abroad and are wanted at home.

A practical turn will be given the services by a careful canvass of employers, who will be solicited to open places for the men wherever possible. Cards will be circulated in the audiences, with the request that all having places or knowing of places of employment will indicate the fact on the cards.

The 70,000 minute men of the Methodist Episcopal denomination, who have been speaking in the churches and Sunday schools in the interest of the Methodist centenary movement for several weeks past, have volunteered to speak today exclusively in behalf of the employment of the returned soldiers.

All the denominations have indorsed the days, and it is believed the honor services will reach more people and will be more universally observed than any other previous services, unless it might have been Christmas or Easter.

Two mass meetings will be held today at 3:30 o'clock. The west side meeting will be held at the West Side auditorium, Ashland boulevard and Van Buren street. The speakers will be: Dr. Ozora S. Davis, president of the Chicago [Congregational] theological seminary; the Rev. John W. Melody, D. D., pastor of St. Jarlath's Catholic church and Dr. Rudolph I. Coffee, rabbi of Temple Judea. Miss Edna Worman and the Victory quartet will sing. The south side meeting will be held in Mandel hall, the University of Chicago. The speakers will be: Prof. T. G. Soares, University of Chicago; the Rev. P. J. McQuire, of Corpus Christi Catholic church, and Dr. Gerson B. Levi, rabbi of B'nai Sholom temple. The musical program will include numbers by Ambrose Wyrick of New York. There will be no admission or financial solicitation at either of the mass meetings.

May devotions will be held at the Cathedral of the Holy Name, North State and Superior streets, on Wednesday and Friday evenings at 8 o'clock and on Sunday evenings at 7:30. A novena in honor of St. Anthony will be held at the cathedral on Tuesday evenings at 8 o'clock.

The parochial school children's campaign for the Victory loan in all Catholic parishes will begin tomorrow. A German helmet will be given to the room in each school which obtains the largest number of subscriptions to the loan. Some one from the winning room will then be appointed to present the helmet to the school.

Clifford W. Barnes, founder and president for over ten years of the Sunday Evening club, will speak at 8 o'clock tonight in Orchestra hall. He has just returned from abroad, having served with the rank of major with the American Red Cross.

Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist church, New York, will preach today at 11 o'clock in Mandel hall, the University of Chicago.

The Rt. Rev. Mgr. D. J. Riordan
MOFFETT PHOTO

Seventy-one years a resident of Chicago, fifty years a priest, founder and only pastor of St. Elizabeth Roman Catholic church, Forty-first street and South Wabash avenue, is the unusual record of the Right Rev. Mgr. Daniel J. Riordan.

On Sunday, May 25, Mgr. Riordan will celebrate the golden jubilee of his ordination, which took place May 22, 1869. Archbishop Hanna of San Francisco, who succeeded in the archdiocese the late Archbishop P. W. Riordan, a brother of Mgr. Riordan, will preach the jubilee sermon.

Father Riordan received the title of domestic prelate to the pope from Pope Benedict on the recommendation of Archbishop Mundelein in February, 1917.

A peculiar interest attaches to the education of Mgr. Riordan. After attending St. Patrick's parish school, Chicago; the seminary of Our Lady of the Angels, Suspension Bridge, Niagara Falls, N. Y., and the University of St. Mary's of the Lake, Chicago, he went in 1863 to Europe. He took a classical course in the Petit Seminaire, Malines, Belgium, and a philosophical and theological course in the American college of the University of Louvain. He was ordained at Malines and then spent one year in study and travel in Germany and Italy. In September the following year, 1870, he returned to Chicago.

Mgr. Riordan was chancellor of the Chicago diocese under Bishop Foley and is now a consultor. He was at one time chaplain of Mercy hospital. He is the nephew of the late Dr. D. Dunne, pastor of St. Patrick's, who organized the Ninetieth Illinois regiment in the civil war.

Mgr. Riordan was born in Kinsale, County Cork, Aug. 6, 1846, and came with his parents to Chicago in April, 1848.

The Marlboro Presbyterian church, South Robey and Sixty-eighth streets, the Rev. John H. McArthur pastor, last Sunday burned a $3,500 mortgage, clearing it of all debt. The church is twenty-five years old. Mrs. S. Dalzell, the only remaining charter member, set fire to the mortgage. Others taking part were the Rev. E. H. Curtis and the Rev. J. W. Nicely. On the following evening a service of felicitations and reminiscences was held.

A special meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America will be held in Cleveland next Tuesday to Thursday. Dr. Frank Mason North of New York is president of the council. Dr. F. B. Meyer of London, England, will be one of the speakers.

The First Italian Methodist Episcopal church, Sholto and Polk streets, subscribed $5,500 for the Methodist centenary, an increase over its apportionment of $500. The Rev. F. P. Sulmonetti is pastor.

The First Methodist Episcopal church, Evanston, the Rev. Ernest F. Tittle, pastor, has raised $180,000 for the Methodist centenary. Its apportionment was $150,000. It is expected the church will reach a total of $200,000. This amount is for benevolent purposes and in addition to its regular annual benevolent and current budget.

Dr. J. S. Ainslie, pastor of the Community church in the Lakeside theater, 4730 Sheridan road, will baptize at the 11 o'clock service today the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Urquhart. He will bear the name of the late Lieut. Dinsmore Ely, who died in the war. The mother of Lieut. Ely will carry the baby.

The Rev. Bernard Iddings Bell will speak this evening at 8 o'clock in St. Andrew's Episcopal church, Washington boulevard and Robey street, on the subject, "The Work of the Church for Men at War."

NEW YORK SOCIETY—by MME. Y

One More Dance for Charity as Season Closes

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—What do you think! There is going to be another dance! I thought the dancing set—which includes almost every set there is—was just about all in. Also, when the aviators sprang their awfully swell, novel, natty, audacious entertainment, I thought they exhausted all the arts and devices for giving the pleasure while extracting the money that a gullible smart set would stand for in one year.

Still, undaunted, the chairman of that entertainment committee has emerged fresh and eager for new occupation to assume a larger, more responsible position as head of another similar ball—the same functionary being Mrs. Willie K. Vanderbilt Jr.

The fashionable set are mercifully warned that this last onset on their vitality and their pocket books will close the season. It will take place at the Ritz on Tuesday, and is absolutely the first affair given in favor of a home endeavor since the signing of the armistice, and long before. It is the Big Sisters' ball, or the Bal Bleu, and is for the relief of deserving cases coming to light in the Children's court.

Mrs. Vanderbilt in Charge.

There are three divisions of the Big Sister organization, the Protestant, the Catholic, and the Jewish. Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt is the chairman of the first, Mrs. Willie Jr. of the second, and Mrs. Sidney Borg of the last. Mrs. Vanderbilt Jr. evidently made such a success of the entertainment of the aviators' ball that as a grand reward they put her in charge of this rather important feature of the forthcoming event.

She has the coöperation of Ben Ali Haggin, Charles Dillingham, Flo Ziegfeld Jr., and Ned Wayburn. Tableaux will be shown in the main ballroom. They will be posed by far famed society women and arranged by Mr. Haggin. A gorgeous Ziegfeld review will be staged by Mr. Wayburn in the dining room, Conrad's orchestra will play for dancing, and a jazz orchestra with a Japanese prima donna will perform in the Japanese room.

Just the little touch this weird occasion needs has been thought of by Mrs. Vanderbilt. She has asked all of the women to wear either white or blue wigs. Society is evidently resigned to it and is settling down with abandonment and gayety of heart to having its last cent extracted from it at this last fête of the winter season.

Make Horse the Goat.

It semes to me that the horses are rather getting something put over on them, but then they always do, don't they? Of all the creatures inhabiting this earth they are the most overworked and underpaid. Now they are giving an exhibition of themselves—a horse show, in other words—at Durland's, and what do you suppose it is for the benefit of? The women's motor corps.

If they weren't the most long suffering of animals I should think they would, when approached on this subject, simply have replied, "Why don't you give a motor show for the benefit of the motor corps? We have too many needy among our own kind now to look after." But a horse never opposes man to any such extent as that, with the result that he is once more the engaging feature of a bright social occasion.

Members of the committee are striving to make it a bright success. Mrs. Burke Roche, chairman of the women's auxiliary, gave a dinner in honor of Lord and Lady Reading, who were guests of honor on the opening night. Others entertaining before and after the exhibition are Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, Mrs. Edwin Gould, Mrs. John Sloane, and Mrs. James Curtiss.

Has One Good Friend.

If some of the distinguished committee are merely using the innocent horse as a means to an end, at least he has one good friend on the committee, and that is Mrs. James Speyer. She is the president of the society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and I venture to say that she has had her eye out for his interests from the first.

It is one of the social events of the day, and at least with such emphasis on him as he is enjoying he cannot immediately become extinct—even if to maintain himself he has to help raise funds for a motor corps.

If the horses have turned out to aid motors and motoring at least they have rallied an able ally to their own aid. While they were out exhibiting themselves for charity, no less a star and intellectual than John Galsworthy was working for them. He read a paper and lectured at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Orme Wilson for the benefit of the Women's Animal league and Free hospital. Mrs. Frederick Vanderbilt, Mrs. Edward N. Breitung, and Mrs. Gouverneur Morris were among the patronesses. So you see the horses are not entirely abandoned yet.

Celebrate Slater Wedding.

It was a great day for the mill hands when Miss Ray Slater took Dr. James B. Murphy of Boston to be her husband. This simple event took place at the bride's mother's apartment in Park avenue, but the vacation was celebrated [illegible] where the family owns the Slater mills.

And, by the way, not only were the workers given a holiday but a piece of the bride's wedding cake. Those same mills have been in the bride's family for several generations and are bringing to this fortunate girl a large fortune.

FURNITURE AND "BON BONS"

Not very kindred, are they?

Let us talk about Bon-Bons first.

If a candymaker decides to produce a successful Bon-Bon, one that his patrons will like and talk about, there are just two things he has to do,

First, he makes it good "inside."

Second, he makes it good "outside."

Most of us, at some time or other, have selected one of most promising appearance only to find that it "wasn't there" when we got to the inside of it.

That's sort of slangy but it makes our point.

Our point is that Home Furnishings and Bon-Bons can be VERY KINDRED.

The Furniture Merchant that wants to produce an article that his patrons will like and talk about has to make it good INSIDE—then he has to make it good OUTSIDE. The wrapper must be good—so must the filling.

And that is the kind of Home Furnishings you will find in the JOHN M. SMYTH Store.

It is the only kind we buy or make.

Our Furniture looks good to you when you buy it—it looks good to you when it is delivered—and it looks Mighty Good To You when you use it.

It is made of the best of materials—it is constructed, put together and finished by skilled workmen. It is inspected by efficient Furniture Craftsmen in our own stock-rooms before it is offered for sale.

We guarantee that the Home Furnishings you buy in the JOHN M. SMYTH Store are of a quality that can know no betterment for the price we ask.

And there is not such a great deal of difference between Good Furniture and Good Bon-Bons after all.

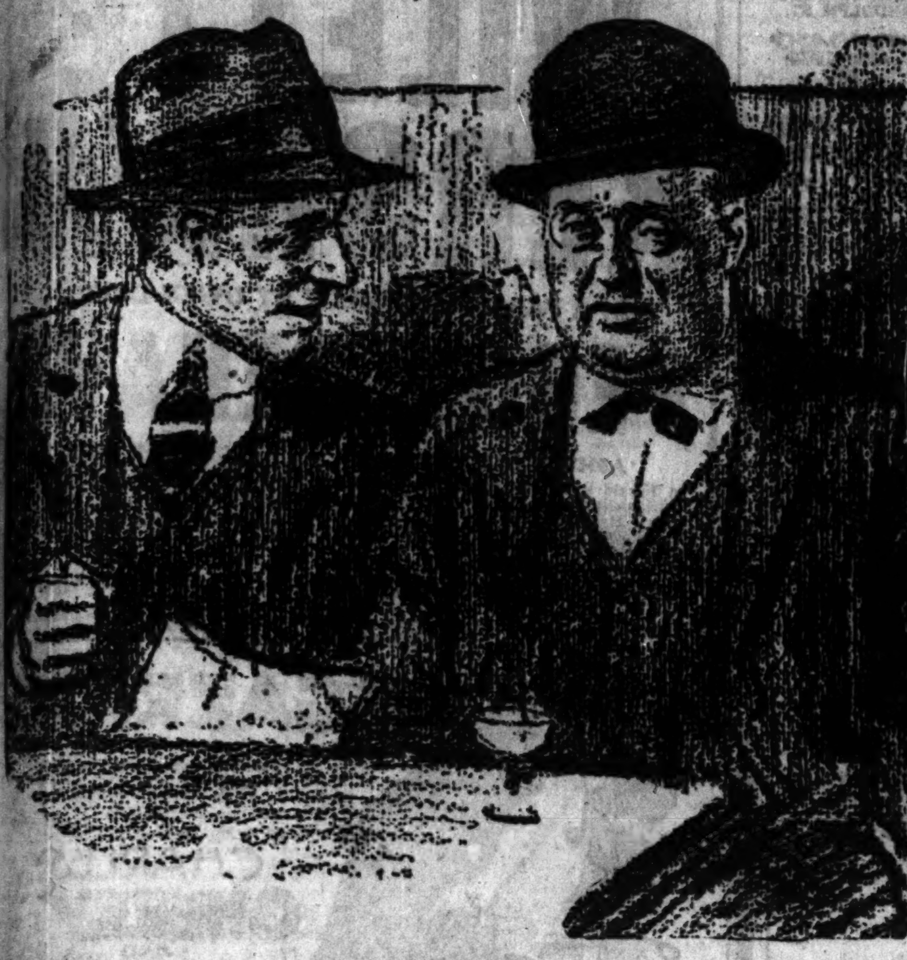
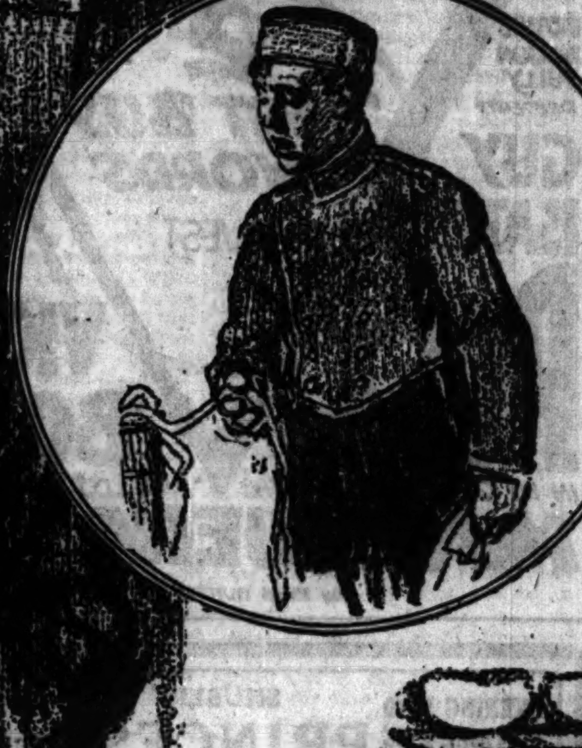
AMONG US MORTALS

"THE HOTEL BAR"

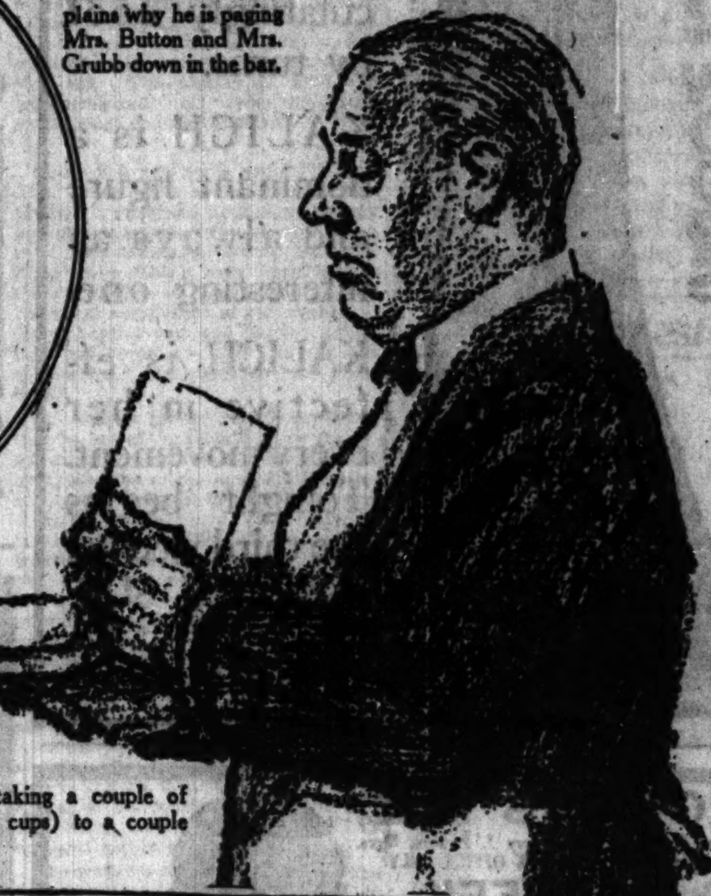
By W. E. HILL



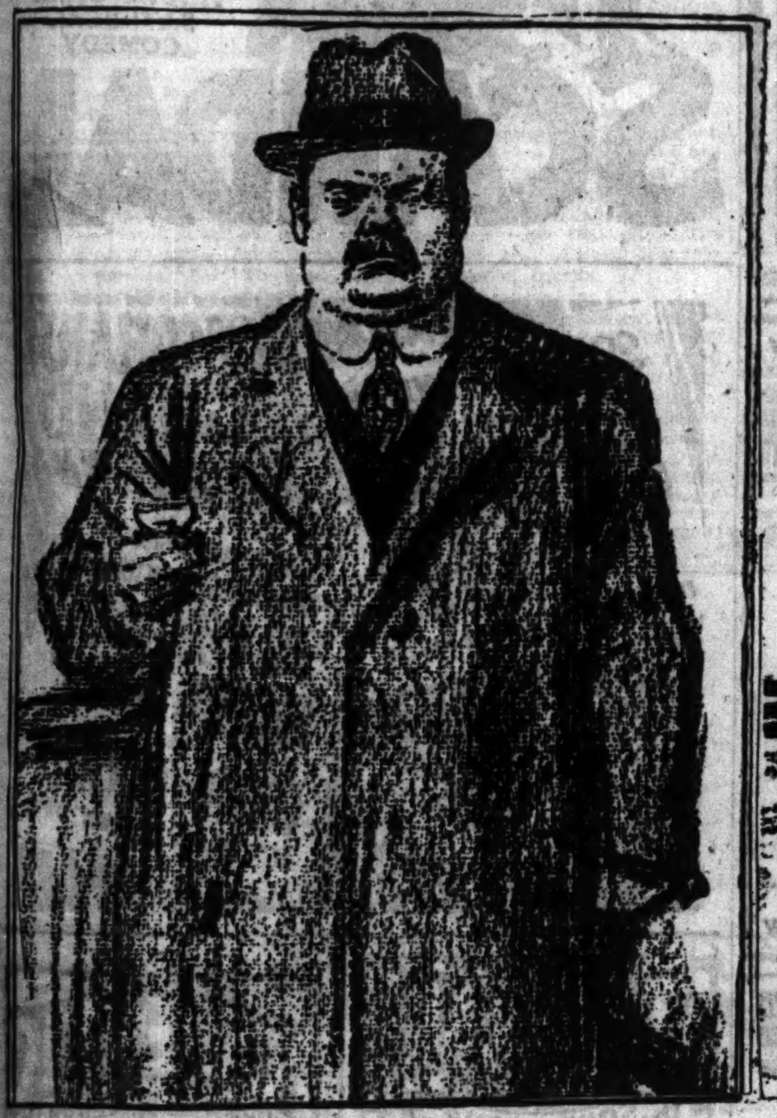
Over at a side table Mr. Bunn, the press agent, has been captured by a friend who admits having written a whale of a farce, in eleven acts and two changes of scene. "Now, here's the big idea: Unless the hero can produce a wife in twenty-four hours he loses the fifty million!" Mr. Bunn is unconvinced.



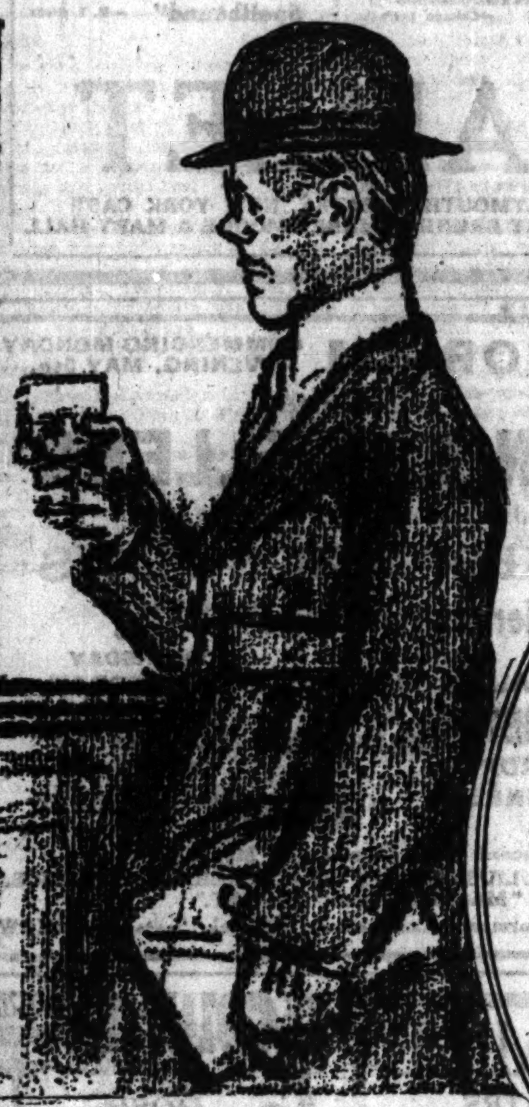
Clement has had very little luck paging today. That, and the fact that he wants a look at the ticker, explains why he is paging Mrs. Button and Mrs. Grubb down in the bar.



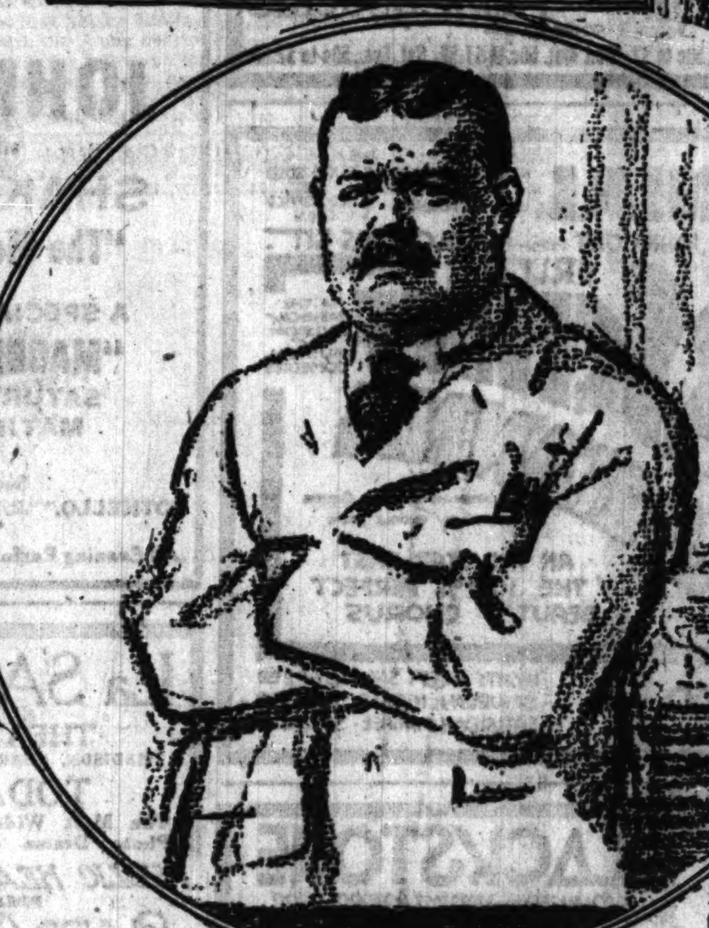
Joe, the obliging waiter, is taking a couple of clover clubs (served in coffee cups) to a couple of men in uniform in the grill.



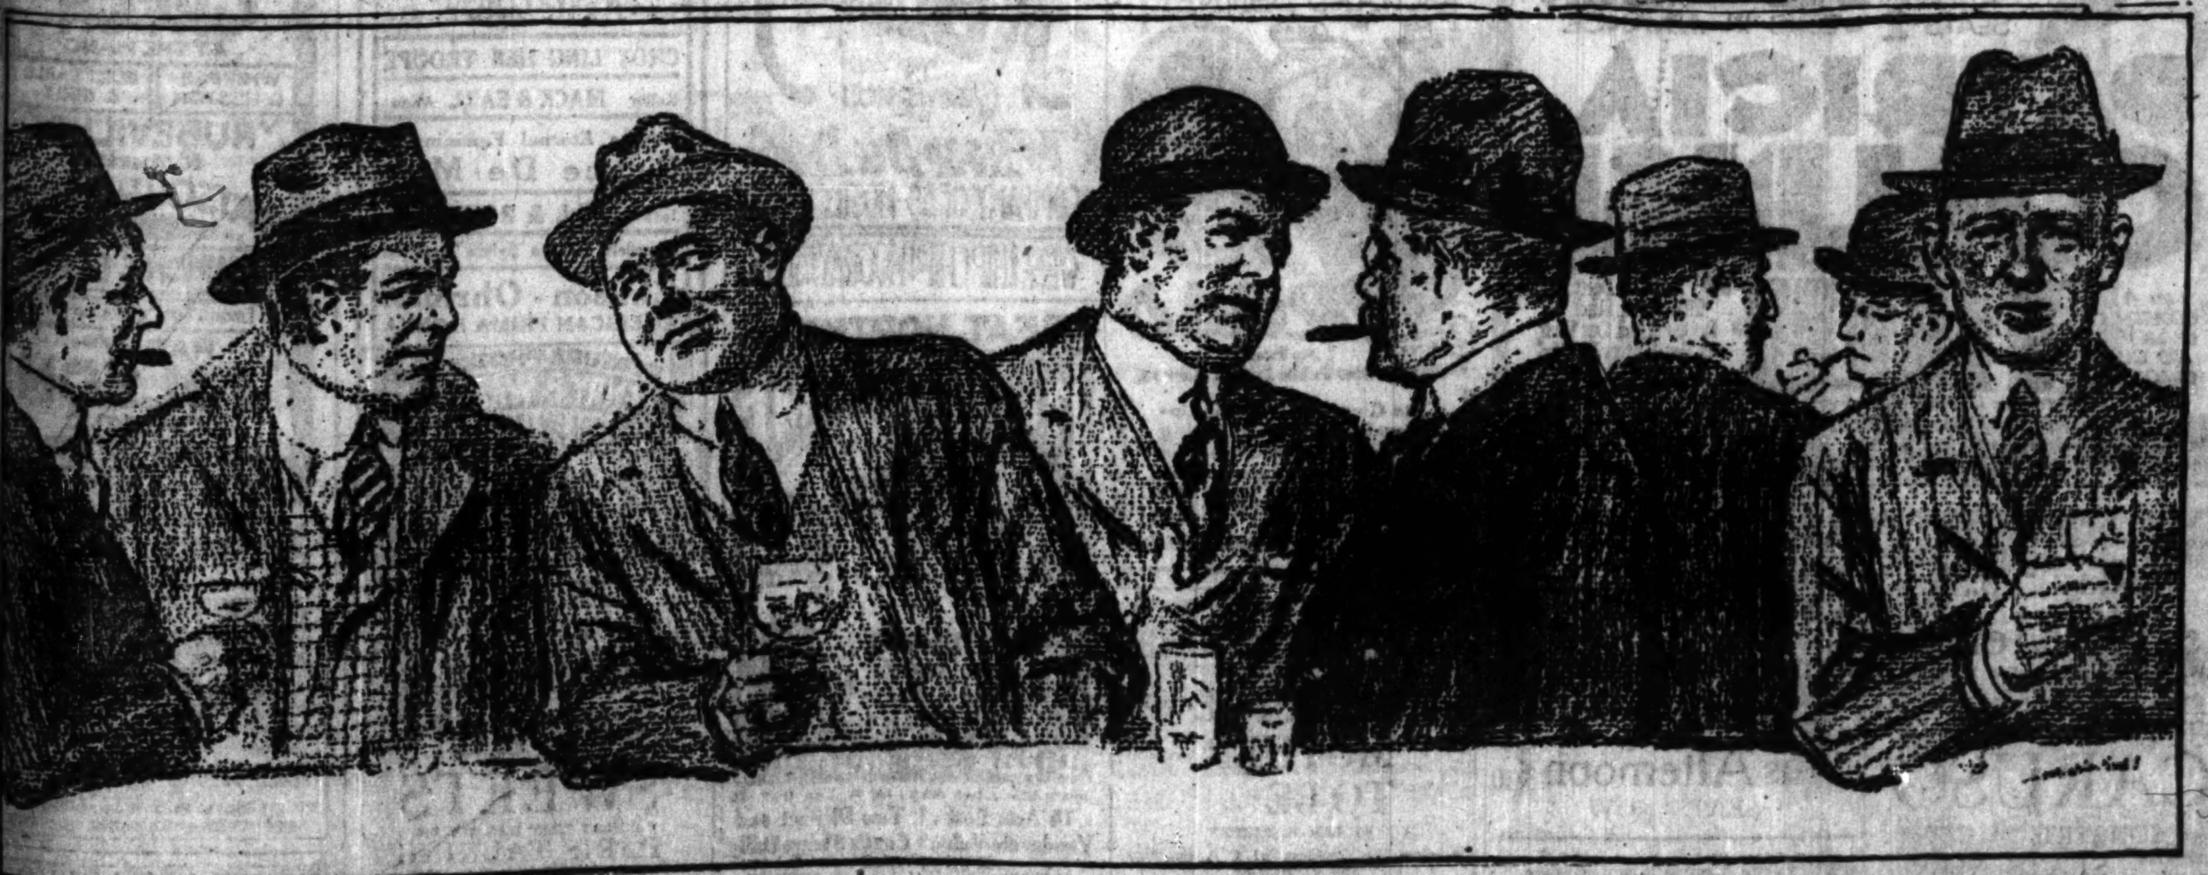
The gentleman from out of town doesn't think much of his cocktail. In fact, the only cocktail worth drinking, in his opinion, is to be had at a roadhouse "out home in Sedalia."



Harry, who works in a law office downtown, stops in for a bracer on the way home. "Well, here's to crime!" remarks Harry, whose forte is subtle and dry humor.



Mike, the bartender, thinking things over.



"Gee, fellas, I cert'nly was soused last night! I bet there ain't a glass in the place today!" Mr. Luckenbeck, third on the left, tells of his last night's party. To the left of Mr. Luckenbeck, Mr. Wurts, the rubber merchant, is expounding for a chance acquaintance's benefit just what would happen to the league of nations if Canada should decide to declare her independence, Mexico and Sweden league against the United States, and, at the same time, Japan should declare war. On the extreme right of the picture a young man from the suburbs is about to ask the meaning of the mural decoration (Old King Cole) over the bar. All of which goes to show that, considering what a bartender listens to all day, the 30th of June may not be unwelcome to a few.

The Theaters

By Percy Hammond.

THE news of Mr. Cohan's desertion from the cast of "A Prince There Was" on the eve of its Chicago season inspires again the hurt outcry of the disappointed provincial. Letters of complaint are always at hand, lamenting the New York managers' habit of lightening their packs ere they hit the long trail, but the moaning is especially audible when the defection is that of so illustrious a celebrity as Mr. Cohan. Outside playgoers seem to think that he belongs not only to New York but to the colonies as well, and they feel cheated and humiliated when he bereaves them of his presence.

Mr. Cohan is nearing the age when sails are furled and the prosperous actor grows loath to leave his comfortable haven. In New York are his apartment (the singular, please, Mr. Printer), his clubs his hotels, his theaters, his enemies, his friends. The bright routine of Broadway engages him there; and it is his Home. In Chicago there is naught in summer to mitigate his ennui, save baseball and the Art institute, both of whose distractions are available to him at the capital. So he elects to be happy, and he remains away. We shall not rightfully blame him, gentle protestants, for we should do the same. And we must not always blame the managers for the diluted troupes sent hither. Other, less conspicuous, figures of the stage look upon the inlands with reluctance if not with disdain. When, for instance, Mr. Harris, the manager of "East Is West," last week told Mr. George Nash that if he did not play in Chicago he could not play in New York. Mr. Nash replied that in that event he would play neither, and left the cast. It can be said that, with one exception, the New York producing firms usually desire to present the "original" companies in the smaller cities. And it is the actors' not the managers' fault that they do not.

April 24, 1919.—[To the Managing Editor.]—As a faithful and appreciative reader of THE TRIBUNE, I wish to register my protest against the character of dramatic criticism you oblige your subscribers to accept. We recognize Mr. Hammond's brilliancy, his sardonic wit, and his fondness for quips and jests, but we object to his lack of discrimination in his choice of subjects for the exercise of his peculiar brand of humor.

In our opinion Mr. Hammond's review of Mr. Walter Hampden's Hamlet was a disgrace to the profession of dramatic criticism. There are plays enough on the boards every week that are fit subjects for his delightful bantering, so why should he choose to poke fun, even though subtly, at a serious effort to give this generation of theater goers a dignified Shakespearean production?

If Mr. Hampden's interpretation were untrue, if his support were poor, if his staging were unworthy, by all means let the critic in THE TRIBUNE point out these shortcomings, so the unsuspecting public could stay away. But no! beneath all his airy, inconsequential treatment of the subject one could see that he could not criticize either the acting or the production. Why, then, could he not have approached them in the spirit of reverence that so sincere and beautiful an effort deserves?

The lovers of good drama are sorely in need of a guide, philosopher, and friend on your paper. We need to be advised and instructed by one who himself takes to the playhouse a sincere love and respect for the high callings of both actor and dramatist. That we have never felt in the reviews of Mr. Hammond. Boredom and bandinage, yes; kindly, constructive criticism, seldom; sincere enthusiasm, never!

Let Mr. Hammond continue to entertain his hundreds of admirers who laugh over his clever phrases—and stay at home from the theater, because nothing seems worth while. Let him hold up to ridicule, as no one else can do so well, certain risque plays and musical comedies—but when a production is announced that commands at least a respectful and dignified treatment, can you not send some one to review it who is not ashamed to admit that he loves good drama as an art and occasionally expects to find it interpreted worthily on the stage of Chicago? ISABELLE J. MEAKER,

Mrs. John W. Meaker Jr., 2431 Pioneer road, Evanston, Ill.

"THE DANGEROUS AGE" crept away from the Illinois last night after having done the theater hereabouts a serious, though an innocent disservice. Many plays are bad enough to be successful; but this one was so bad that it failed. Those who paid their leisure and money to see it will, I suspect, ponder a long time before they go to the theater again. "The Dangerous Age" will cause showmen of this neighborhood to lose many a dollar. A peculiar thing about this play was that its producers, men of experience in the theater, saw it in rehearsal and did not recognize its fatal demerits. Yet the laymen in the audience, without exception, knew it for what was before the first act was over.

Mr. Richard Fairchild, director of Y. M. C. A. publicity, writes to me and the manager of the Palace Music hall in complaint of Mr. "Johnny" Cantwell's ribald remarks about the "Y" in the war. He calls attention to the 214 casualties suffered among the 12,000 workers of the organization, and to the 172 decorations awarded them for gallant service. Mr. Fairchild thinks it is unjust and in bad taste for an actor to sneer at the men and women of the Y. M. C. A. overseas expedition, and he asks the powers of vaudeville to censor the contemptuous jocularities of their performers.

Mr. Cantwell, having worn the Red Triangle on his blouse as an entertainer at the front, is entitled, if any actor is, to jest at the Y. M. C. A. Still, as one who had some slight experience with the "Y" in foreign parts, I believe that Mr. Fairchild's protest is justified. The theater, considering its conspicuous aloofness from the war, is no forum for jests about any one, however incompetent, who participated in it.

Not long ago Mr. George W. Perkins and Mr. Mortimer Schiff visited the Army of Occupation to investigate the causes of the general dissatisfaction with the Y. M. C. A. effort overseas. In Coblenz they called together the score or more newspaper correspondents stationed there and asked them to explain the doughboys' hatred of the "Y." The symposium followed a feast at a Coblenz hotel—a feast which, though from the yawning larder of that starving republic, exceeded in quantity, quality, and variety of food the gustatory adventures of the most experienced Trencherman present.

But well-fed and comfortable as they were, not a journalist had a kindly word to say for the Y. M. C. A. They talked of overcharges and the selfishness of the canteen superintendents. Of tired, hungry soldiers who had marched miles in mud and darkness, and who were refused coffee and cigarets because the "Y" hut was closed for the night. Of sanctimonious secretaries who scolded the weary doughboy for profanity and similar crimes, and told them to come back in the morning if they wanted food and drink. All of those things happened—because patriotism and the draft had limited the Y. M. C. A. in its choice of representatives. Many an incompetent got into its personnel, because so many of us competents remained at home.

Mr. Johnny Cantwell must know a lot of fine and interesting things to say about the Y. M. C. A. in war. In my vagrant flitting across the tragic trail of the Americans in France I found many brave and unselfish Y. M. C. A.'s. Pale and pretty girls in remote and wrecked villages, looking out upon a hopeless horizon of filth and ruin, waiting only to cheer the casual and cheerless doughboy. Genial men with cigarets and the right word of encouragement. Actors, like "Johnny" Cantwell, singing and dancing in dim shacks, helping to make possible the most impossible of all impossibilities. "Dick" Little, in tears, saying his own burial service over a dead doughboy from Iowa; Jarvie, from Chicago, superintending a soldiers' hotel in the wet hell which is Brest. The lonely child in Ste. Minnehold who in the rain and desolation quoted Marcus Aurelius to me and said "A contented heart," and then choked. Take it from me, vaudeville, the Y. M. C. A. in the war, is no proper topic for your jeering. If you have to sneer, sneer at the actor who did not go.

So well has "The Royal Vagabond" turned out, according to a reliable bit of gossip, that Mr. Cohan is at present engaged in converting "Hawthorne of the U. S. A." into a musical comedy. This play, it may be remembered, served Douglas Fairbanks for a season in the days before the richer rewards of the screen had tempted him.

Mr. Belasco's next play for Ina Claire is said to be now in process of preliminary casting. After two seasons in "Polly with a Past," Miss Claire will be seen next year in a play by Avery Hopwood. It is Mr. Belasco's announced intention to move Miss Claire gradually along the histrionic ladder, incorporating into each successive vehicle, a trifle less of comedy and a corresponding increase of drama.

The Theaters

From this morning's New York Times:

THE signs of the times are that Willard Mack will be the most active playwright in this vicinage in the season to come, despite everything that the Messrs. Megrue, Shipman, Marcin et al. can do about it. Not only is Mr. Mack preparing innumerable new plays for Broadway consumption but he will bring himself still further into prominence by acting in several of them—a diversion which is denied most of Broadway's playwrights. In the first place, Mr. Mack has made over—and radically, if the gossip is to be credited—the Bolshevistic play called "Red Heart," which was recently played at the Republic for a single private performance. In its Mackian form this piece will be known as "Not Over Here," and it is already in rehearsal, with the author in the leading rôle. He will continue to act in this play until Pauline Frederick (Mrs. Mack) is ready to come back to the stage from the films. Then he will play a rôle in the play which he has written for her—"Lady Tony" by name. Then, too, he has rewritten for David Belasco the play called "Alias Santa Claus," which Mr. Belasco tried out a year ago, and which was said at the time to be awaiting David Warfield's convenience. Next season, presumably without Mr. Warfield, the play will be reproduced under the title of "Greed." By way of rounding out the summer Mr. Mack will rewrite Florence Moore's next bedroom farce—a little thing entitled "Breakfast in Bed"—and still other plays are said to be likely to come from his pen at any moment.

Edward Locke's comedy, "The Dancer," which was tried out on the road recently with Martha Hedman in the leading rôle, is being held for next season. In the interim it is being vigorously rewritten by that well-known theatrical tinker, Max Marcin.

Tattle of the Tuneful

By Frederick Donaghey.

In her recital this afternoon, Galli-Curci's program differs in all its matter from the one she sang last month: she is "up" in six; and that is prodigal industry for a soprano whose business was [illegible] until she came to the United States little more than two years ago. This aspect of her sweeping success in America is more piquant, maybe, than the steady piling-up of a répertoire in English text, and her quick, right selection of the best things in the lore of old songs and of old melodies. The trace of Latin accent in her English diction does not prevent it from being better English diction than we hear, season in and out, from most of the singers, including those who have been cannily specializing in the language since German went out of fashion in the halls.

Two arias from the operas are in today's bill—"Ah! non credea mirarti," which is in Bellini's "La Sonnambula," and the shadow-song of "Dinorah," which she has restored to the live répertoire of the theater. A new song is "Garden Thoughts," by her accompanist, Homer Samuels, who came through with a good one in her April recital. From the reserve of durable songs that are aged she draws the lovely "Shepherd! Thy demeanor vary" of Brown.

When through with the recital, Galli-Curci will go over to the Victory Forum for one song—one: a contribution to the day's activities there elicited by the literature committee for the fifth loan.

The Isadora Duncan Dancers of this afternoon are in the roster as Anna, Theresa, Irma, Lisa, Margot, and Erica; and I take it that their other name is Casey or something. They are said to have been trained by the [illegible] and passional celebrity whose name they carry in trade; and they do their dancing to tunes by Gluck and Schubert, and by Schubert and Gluck. George Copeland, who shares the program with the girls, is said by those who have heard him to be a gifted man of the piano when he plays Debussy and Chopin; and both composers are [illegible] in his catalogue for the afternoon. He is not a newcomer: some antiquarians tell me of his being in Chicago a decade ago, maybe. He qualifies as a somebody in Boston and vicinity.

Caruso's specialties for next Sunday, when he will sing in Chicago for the first time since the season of 1910-'11, will be what they would have been had the flu not kept him from coming hither in the autumn: "Celeste Aïda," the Lament of "Pagliacci," and "Una furtiva lagrima," by his way with which he has put Donizetti's "The Elixir of Love" into the sell-out pieces of the Metropolitan. Then, with Nina Morgana, he finishes with "The Star-Spangled Banner"; and I believe he will toss, as an added number, "Over There," which he sings, like most of us, with the advantage of perspective. Miss Morgana, who is to go into the Chicago Opera in the autumn, is new here, I believe. She is a coloratura; and, helping out Caruso, puts herself to "Caro nome," the "Dinorah" shadow-song, and other pieces which Galli-Curci sings better than anybody else within either hearing or memory. Elias Breeskin, who is far from the foot of the violinists' category, also is in Caruso's bill. Among them, they ought to make a tolerable afternoon.

Mrs. W. L. L. writes in from Oak Park to ask and to say, in whole, as follows:

"Does it ever occur to you, Mr. Donaghey, that you would be just as effective ('just!' as you would add to decorate the phrase) if, even occasionally, you would express an opinion rather than utter a sentence or issue fiat? Your very 'I guess' and 'maybe' get on the nerves of some of the readers who more often than not agree with you. Even when we don't agree with you and are, 'maybe,' right and you wrong, we should be less happy over it if you were less cocksure and self-sufficient. You know, musicians there were—pianists, singers, violinists, conductors; all kinds—who came, were appraised in Chicago, and rewarded or turned loose long before you undertook to tell us what was what, and why.

"You have, on the whole, been a lucid and effective pleader for your views, and have been happy, of course, in seeing your judgments approved. We admired your stand for Mr. Stock, and your plea that Godowsky be esteemed among the great, and your undiminished ardor for recognition of Mme. Raisa as the best of the dramatic singers, and your speedy and unhesitating recognition of young Levitzki's talents. But don't be so sure of yourself! You haven't always made your point with the public. I don't mean to be unkind to the lady in citing the case of Miss —— ——, in whose cause you were valiant, but who has disappeared. I might mention one or two others.

"You print some of the letters 'calling' you, and seem to think they are good reading. If you have that mind about this one, although it is written in downright resentment, please cut the signature to initials and omit the name of the singer. If I'm catty, it is because of you—not her."

So, the singer's name is blanked out. The reference is to Frances Ingram, the contralto, who has been engaged to sing next season in the Metropolitan.

On Page 7 in the Editorial Section of this issue is an article by James Huneker on Godowsky; and, like any other Huneker article with whose notions I am in agreement, this is a good one. Huneker, on such occasions, is the best of the men who write about music for the eastern newspapers. What he says here about Godowsky as pianist and as composer is right. To say that any one in a competent list of ten is the "greatest" or the best pianist is to be absurd: each of those ten is supreme in an aspect. But Godowsky belongs not only in that list, but in any correct list of five, or even of four; and he is in Henry L. Mencken's list of three.

"The Elixir of Love," long unsung in this neighborhood, is in the list of operas Mr. Eckstein hopes to put on this summer in Ravinia Park. Mabel Garrison, whose engagement for the resort was announced last week, asks that it be among her conveyances there. The woman's rôle is a good one, although the opera is regarded, in the trade, as a tenor's piece. The Boston Ideals used to sing the work as "Adina," the title made from the heroine's name, with Zelie Lussan in the part, which Sembrich sang when the Metropolitan first put "The Elixir" on for Caruso. Hempel, whom Miss Garrison is to replace, has been singing it in the later revival. Emma Trentini, known in Chicago in operetta only, was in a revival which Hammerstein made for her and Bonci.

Mr. Eckstein gives out the names of Alice Gentle, Thomas Chalmers, and Léon Rothier as additions to the Ravinia roster. Rothier was there last summer, and was among the several reasons why the performances in that period were far better than in any earlier Ravinia season. A well-schooled basso of the French theater is he, with rapt love for his native répertoire and a sound respect for the Italian pieces. His performance of the blind father in "The Love of the Three Kings" stood up well alongside Didur's: Didur it was who sang the rôle when the opera, new to Chicago, was given by the Boston-Pavlowa venture in 1915 in the Auditorium. José Mardones had the part when the company returned for its week in the Blackstone theater; and Clarence Whitehill, miscast, sang it in Campanini's production, the same season. None of the French bassos since Plançon and the mammoth De Reszke has been any better than Rothier.

Mr. Chalmers was in Chicago with the Century Opera in its sad emprise of two-dollar opera, in the season 1914-'15, when Campanini didn't function, and again, the following season, with the Boston-Pavlowa troupe. He has been making good in the Metropolitan, where he has been for two seasons. Pasquale Amato, an invalid, was out of the casts in the season recently ended; and his absence gave to Chalmers an opportunity in some of the big baritone parts. He will be a newcomer in Ravinia.

And Miss Gentle will be a newcomer in the neighborhood. Like the others so far announced, she is from the Metropolitan, where she has been among the contraltos for two seasons. I have read in that time many a "notice" which palpitated in praise of her doings there. Like every woman of opera in the years since 1875, she believes that God made her to sing Carmen; and, with Farrar's clutch on the rôle unrelaxed, Miss Gentle did not have a chance in the Metropolitan. She is to get it in Ravinia, Mr. Eckstein explains; and I am without a nice reason for regarding the prospect of a new Carmen as calamitous. One of my fierce regrets is that I did not hear Patti in the part, in which, the elders tell me, she was awful.

If you are to write an a-capella piece in eight voice parts, the Mendelssohn Club of Philadelphia may give you one hundred dollars for it. The club asks that such works be submitted in care of its conductor, N. Lindsay Norden, 7200 Cresheim road, that city. The club's, unlike the Chicago Mendelssohn's, is a mixed chorus.

The undecided piano contest of last Tuesday night by pupils of the Chicago Musical College is to be played off on May 24 in the Ziegfeld theater, President Borowski explains. The entrants will be students in the classifications to which last week's tied battlers belong; and the piano then withheld from award will be substituted for a medal which is the customary prize. The opinion of the judges in Orchestra hall, it seems, was not that none of the three youngsters was better than the two others, but that none played well enough to deserve a verdict.

Arthur Dunham's second concert in the Studebaker with his reorganized Philharmonic Orchestra will be next Sunday, when Oukrainsky will appear with some of his pupils-in-dancing; and on the following Sunday his teammate, Pavley, will do likewise. Bettina Freeman, a soprano who was with the Century Opera, is to take part in the final concert of the series, June 1.

Nobody paid much box-office attention to John O'Sullivan when he sang through the winter for Campanini in the Auditorium; and he was not classified as a source of revenue in the New York City engagement of the Chicago Opera. But he went to Boston for a recital, mussed the city up with enthusiasm, and is now being advertised in the trade-weeklies as Sell-Out O'Sullivan. He was, while here, a better tenor than the returns indicated, but luckless in all save one of his best opportunities: the exception was in "Monna Vanna," in which he did so well that Mary Garden called him immense.

Josef Hofmann has been, within the year, through an experience which is, perhaps, a comic footnote on the unending blah and blither in behalf of the native composer. Neither an American nor a Teuton, he listened and he read, and decided to prepare for use in recital an all-American program. He passed the word along; and his reward was a request from the local management, wherever he was booked, that he should devote his recital to Chopin and the other staples in his ready répertoire. Nobody cared to take a chance with the home-made pieces.

We have tried to be sane in the matter of popular prejudice against German music; but, when a five-piece picture-show orchestra undertakes to play the Ride of the Valkyrier, then the A. P. L. and its allied forces of supression cannot act too quickly to suit us!—Kansas City Star.

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Fine feathers, acushla, may not make fine birds. Yet again they may. Much depends on the selection of the feathers—and the birds. But, either way, they have saved many a Belasco play from the storehouse. There's "Dark Rosaleen" as a recent example. As fine a bit of stage flubdubbery as ever you sat through. Dion Boucicault himself never wrote a more conventional three acts of blarneyin' humor touched with the heroics of melodrama. Chauncey Olcott never saved with song a flimsier plot than this. And yet with a Belasco staging "Dark Rosaleen" is likely to run the blooming summer through at the Belasco theater and continue well into the fading fall.

The play has at least a suggestion of timeliness, accepting this as an Irish year. Once at least during each act some good word is spoken for the fighting Sinn Feiners, and in each instance the cheering of the radicals is no sooner started than the heroine craftily observes that whether they come from the north or the south, sure they're all Irish, God love 'em, and ought to be fightin' shoulder to shoulder.

She is Moya McKillop of Glenmullet, this heroine, and she loves dreamy Corny Donagh, potboy in his father's pub across the road. She would marry him the day, too, if her "da" didn't hate his "da," even as the Montagues hated the Capulets. It was always fightin' they were. And when the will of the elder Donagh was read, leaving his public house to that one of his heirs who would put the McKillops out of business, the feud was on in earnest.

Sure, it looked dark for Moya and Corny at the end of the first act. And darker still at the beginning of the second—for then Mister Melden, who held the mortgage over the fightin' head of Moya's "da," was threatening to foreclose. With money as scarce as it was in Glenmullet there was only one chance of Moya's raising that mortgage. If the good St. Patrick would only listen to her prayers and let Dark Rosaleen, the swiftest bit of horseflesh in Galway, win the Innishore cup at the fair!

She could win, too, and would win, with Mickey Dowdall in the saddle! Good old Mickey! Hadn't he timed her out the day and found her fast? But Mickey, bad luck to him, proved false at the last minute and sold himself to Mister Melden! Which left Dark Rosaleen, at 20 to 1, with no one to ride her!

No one, did we say? But what of Corny Donagh? Aye, there's the boy that would leave his father's pub any day to ride a sweetheart's horse! So into the saddle with him? He has the jockey's colors (the colors of the Irish republic) under his arm and he can change his pants on the way! Let the McKillop-Donagh feud take what shape it will—there's Moya tendin' bar for a Donagh and Corny riding a McKillop horse for Moya!

And so it comes to pass that Dark Rosaleen does win; that Mister Melden is paid, and that with the young people married it will be easy for a Donagh to close up McKillop's place—for a day or two only, mind—and thus comply with the provisions of the will.

"Dark Rosaleen" was written by Whitford Kane and W. D. Hepenstall. It has a lot of Irish humor and a fine assortment of characters—a bit overdrawn, a few of them, but generally so well played by Mr. Belasco's cast that they seem almost as human and as real as those the Irish players themselves played here some years back.

Eileen Huban is the heroine. She is the little Irish actress who came suddenly to notice a few seasons back when she first appeared in a play called "Grasshopper," a talented child and pretty and so earnestly Irish as to win a genuine sympathy for the native characters she plays, however stagey they may be. Beryl Mercer, Dodson Mitchell, Robert Cummings, Henry Duffy, John Daly Murphy, and a lot of other competent actors are in the cast. The setting is solid and handsome and "real" from bar pumps to the dust on the windows.

There is a new farce called "I Love You," in which a young theorist with $100,000 a year and nothing to occupy his mind is willing to wager that there is no such things as love in the world. People who "fall in love," says he, are merely victims of environment. Given the usual assortment of moonlight and spring, soft music and shaded lights, they are bound to "fall" in spite of themselves. Propinquity is their Cupid.

To back his theory he will bet $5,000 that he can automatically force the engagement of any two persons selected by those who argue against him, providing each subject is reasonably presentable. Take Betty, for instance. Betty, who is a trifle lofty and rather bored with society and her friends, would fall in love with the first man she met under the right conditions, provided he boasted a reasonable arrangement of features and a full complement of legs, arms, etc.

At which moment the electrician arrives to fix the lights. He is an honest workman, a bit of a Socialist, well read and self educated. Take him, suggests the anti-love theorist—take the electrician, dress him up, introduce him as an old college chum, throw him and Betty together and they will be engaged within the month.

The wager is made, the stage set, the "environment" skillfully arranged to include settees in cosy nooks, with soulful violinists playing near by, and the experiment is on. Everything works beautifully. The spell of Eros settles over the house. Everybody loves somebody—but they fail to pair off as expected. Betty, in place of loving the electrician, falls hopelessly in love with the butler, who, it happens, is a Harvard man "finished" at Oxford and so wonderfully educated that he is practically ruined for real work. The electrician in turn is rather taken with the fiancée of the hero, and also her maid, and a grass widow deliberately tries to kidnap the man who made the wager. The little play starts splendidly, but peters out before it finishes. Which is the way with most farces. William Le Baron, author of "The Very Idea," wrote "I Love You." Being an original person and keen, his dialogue is excellent. John Westley, Richard Dix, Diantha Pattison, Gipsy O'Brien, Doris Mitchell, and Gilbert Douglass are in the cast.

BURNS MANTLE.

DEPRESSING PRECEDENTS

By Guy F. Lee

I used to view my four feet, ten, with undisguised disgust,
And ruminate in gloomy wrath on such a fate unjust,
Until I got to poring over history, which stunt
Disclosed the fact Napoleon was more or less a runt.
That helped a heap, for Bonaparte's ingrowing size spelled not
A handicap when he set out some rival state to swat.
And I deduced if he could switch a hemisphere askew,
I ought to cut a modest swath and amble round a few.

Then I got hep and likewise wise that Hinky Dink would tip
The scales at less than I command. That gave me added zip.
He owned the city's richest ward, and helped to run the town,
And what he said went—who and what he did, he did up brown.
His sliver like physique was nix; he always got the goats
Of large and influential gents who horned in on his votes.
And so I said, it's not so worse to sport a pygmy frame,
It doesn't hurt a jitney's worth in copping jack and fame.

And then the blamed reformers came, and, for the love of Mike,
What's to become of Kenna is a prospect I don't like!
They shook the whisk from whisky and they nicked the kick from brew,
And that leaves Little Michael minus anything to do,
Which made me ponder, and brought on a retrospective shiver
As I recalled with startled pain the St. Hel-e-na flivver.
And I'm afraid we Lilliputes can't hit a lasting lick—
We soar and burst in rocket style, then tumble like a stick!

"FOR BETTER, FOR WORSE."

By Mae Tinée.

WITH broad and sweeping strokes "For Better, for Worse" paints a picture of a new kind of soldier. This is the soldier who fights his battle not in the trenches, but in the ranks at home, where everybody turns to point the finger of scorn at him and call him "quitter," because when the bugle called to the world's strife he stayed at home. The object is to show that it took as much bravery on the part of some men to answer the call of duty here as on the part of others to go overseas.

Elliott Dexter is the man who stayed at home. In the picture he is a Dr. Edward Meade, a specialist in the treatment of children's diseases and head of a hospital for children. A captain's commission is his, and he is about to accept it when an older doctor says to him:

"My hand is too unsteady to operate. These children in your care are suffering just as much and are just as much American as the soldiers in the trenches. There are many ministering to soldiers over there, but what can you say if you neglect these little ones, whom your care might make into strong American citizens?"

This Dr. Meade is engaged to an American girl. She is the kind of American girl who cannot imagine any man staying quietly at home in time of war. Another man is also in love with her. (He is Tom Forman, by the way, who really went to war and has returned.) When her fiancé announces that he feels his post is home, in a furor of patriotic excitement she marries the other man.

Her husband goes forth to fight the foe. The man she loves stays home to fight disease. Her motor car cripples a little child. In her search for some one to care for the baby she realizes just what Dr. Meade has done in remaining behind. In her quest for a doctor she finds the old men and the women, but no young man who is capable of performing the operation on the baby she has hurt—until she finally seeks out her former fiancé and finds him ready.

On the field of battle the husband, apparently terribly disfigured for life, sends a friend back to his wife with the news that he is dead. She and the doctor, believing her to be free, after some months are about to announce their engagement. But they have reckoned without the United States government, which when a man is injured makes him over new.

The soldier husband comes back. How events shape themselves is something for you to see and me not to tell, if you are properly to enjoy the picture.

As a picture it is a rather well worked out treatise. The heroine, Gloria Swanson, has some exceedingly bad moments, pictorially and historically, but she has some moments that are so good they overshadow the others. Tom Forman and Elliott Dexter both appeal greatly to the sympathy. Wanda Hawley in her slight part is pleasing. The picture is interesting and well done, though I think it should have been about a reel shorter. However, as it is you will undoubtedly enjoy it.

Tom Moore is to be seen in the picturization of "The City of Comrades," the story of which, by Basil King, appeared in a weekly publication.

I'm told that Thomas H. Ince has insured the lives of his stars for $100,000 each. This arrangement includes Dorothy Dalton, Enid Bennett, and Charles Ray.

Some one who went to see Constance Talmadge in "The Veiled Adventure" said to me the other day:

"You know, I think Charlie Chaplin and Mary Pickford are wise. They don't risk their popularity by appearing in just any picture that may be wished on them. We don't see them often, but when we do, it's in something that's at least reasonably good. It is too bad to waste Miss Talmadge on such pictures as 'The Veiled Adventure.' The people who like her have grown to expect a treat when they visit a theater where her name is featured. A few disappointments such as the picture mentioned will effectually dampen their ardor."

The man was dead right, I think. We like Constance, but we like her as we like her. She's worthy of good comedies and good comedies she should have. Keep her off the screen for six months, if necessary, but for pity's sake spare her the mediocre story.

Dorothy Gish has been ill for some time because of a cold caught "on location." She went away up in the mountains and got mountain fever, chills, temperature, etc. It is supposed she will not be able to work for several weeks.

Ask Me! Ask Me! Ask Me!

JUST HELEN: How bright you are, Helen! You're the first one that ever came right out and called me by my right name, "afternoon performance." You know Tom Forman went in the army. I reckon you'll be seeing him in pictures again before long. Yes, isn't it careless of them to keep right on thinking I'm a man. Funny things!

MARY E. P.: Moving is the divil, isn't it? I quite understand your not writing before. When one has landlords and decorators on one's mind, to say nothing of moving the parrot without giving it hysterics, one hasn't much time or energy for anything else. I'm sure Miss Talmadge will reply to you.

ONE BUG: Hello, there! said the other bug—I think so, too. Yes, I remember the picture well. Miss Dalton showed great ability in her latest picture.

R. H.: Address Richard Barthelmess in care of Paramount, Hollywood, Cal. You're welcome.

L. V. H.: I have not heard that Miss Brady is coming here in the production you mention. If she does, however, it will probably be extensively advertised. Sorry not to give you any authentic information.

H. M. S.: I did it.

M. M.: Can't say I think much of your title. I'm with you on the silver lining business, however.

MADGE: The last picture in which I saw Eugene O'Brien was in "The Ghost of Yesterday." He played the lead with Norma Talmadge. Tom Moore's with Goldwyn, Culver City, Cal. He shows up about every week. What more do you want? Awfully glad you like the column. So do I.

"You ought to run two miles without stopping."

"All right; stand still and I'll run around you twice."

"Never mind, Memory."

"Say, what do you mean calling me Memory?"

"You look like something that used to be but isn't."

"You're jealous of my shape. Why, it's the style to be very, very thin."

"Yes, and you're about ten years ahead of the style."

"Well, you should worry about your shape."

"Is that how you lost"

"Say, Shadow, are you trying to make light of me?"

"What do you think I am, a steam roller?"

"You look more like a"

"How do you like my new suit?"

"If you don't look out you will"

"Will what?"

"Bust your suit."

"I will go with thee and be thy guide."—Everyman.

This is the second of a series of articles by Carl H. Grabo, a member of the department of English at the University of Chicago and an editor of the Chautauquan. Another article will appear next week.

EDUCATION FOR CITIZENSHIP.

By Carl H. Grabo.

WHEN Woodrow Wilson, as president of Princeton began reforming the university on more democratic lines, some student complained that he was endeavoring to make an institution of learning out of it. This, though doubtless unpopular with the students, seems no unreasonable ambition for a university, and one which it will realize more and more as its graduates lose social prestige.

Undoubtedly universities are now more democratic than they were once, but there is yet room for improvement. When a college education lies open to any one worthy of it, and is socially no more valued than an education in the use of tools, we shall be on the way to a truly democratic university. There are yet persons, however, who think manual work degrading and intellectual work ennobling, a superstition which sends students to college who would be more profitably employed elsewhere.

A university education is a great mistake for many a boy, spoiling a good mechanic or carpenter and producing a poor lawyer, teacher, or man of business. Universities spend much time and effort weeding out the unfit and yet rid themselves only of the most incompetent at that, for it is a poor student who, with a decent attention to business, cannot stay his four years.

Programs of labor parties here and in England urge reforms which will bring educational opportunity freely to every one and will make education itself more practically useful. The criticism seems directed chiefly to the public schools, for I know of no specific suggestions for the improvement of universities. Yet there is no doubt room for such. It is, for instance, easy to suggest changes whereby university students could be better trained than now to be citizens and leaders in a democratic society.

Surely an education which fails to make a man a better citizen than he would be without it is not a success. By better citizen I mean, simply, one interested in the betterment of his town or community, one who can pass intelligently on public questions, and who is not taken in by the camouflage of politicians. None too many citizens meet these specifications.

A democracy, of all forms of government, needs men trained to leadership. In an autocracy the matter is cared for simply by heredity; a man is born to position, and may or may not be properly educated for his duties. In intelligent autocracies he is, however, carefully trained, though necessarily with a bias in favor of his own ruling class. In this country we have assumed that a man who could get people to vote for him must necessarily be fitted for the office sought, whatever that might be. The spoils system has been the logical outgrowth of this belief, and few people nowadays will regard it as a success. Though Bill Jones is a good fellow, he is often a poor postmaster.

Were university training open freely to any one able to profit by it, I can see nothing undemocratic in training men to be leaders, men qualified to fill public offices intelligently should they be elected to them. There is, of course, no means whereby voters can be made to select the best candidates offered them; the trained man in such a country as ours has simply to take his chance with the rest. But it is plausible that the more men there are fitted to lead the more chance there will be that some will find their way into public life and show the value of their training.

Just what, then, could a university do to train men for citizenship and leadership? There is, first, the question of time. If the university is to continue to train men for vocations and professions, it can spare no more than the freshman and sophomore years for work of a more general character. Most of the university specialists would, indeed, like to monopolize these years also, leaving no time at all for general education of a broader kind. But suppose the specialists placated. What use could we make of our two years?

We must decide, first of all, the kind of society we wish to train our man for. We say, in this country, a democratic society, which, though not easily de-

Dort simplicity is supplementary to Dort accessibility. Wherever an adjustment is made easier, a part is made less trappy and better within reach, there is bound to be an added accessibility.

The block motor with its detachable head and well-balanced crankshaft, the clutch and transmission in unit with the motor, the simple torsion tube in which the drive shaft is enclosed, and the compact rear axle form a clean-cut power-transmitting assembly which permits of owner repair without difficulty.

It is easy to remove any part, from a spark plug to the whole engine or rear axle. It is easy to take up wear at any point where it may occur.

Ask us to show you the total freedom from trappiness or inconvenience in the Dort car.

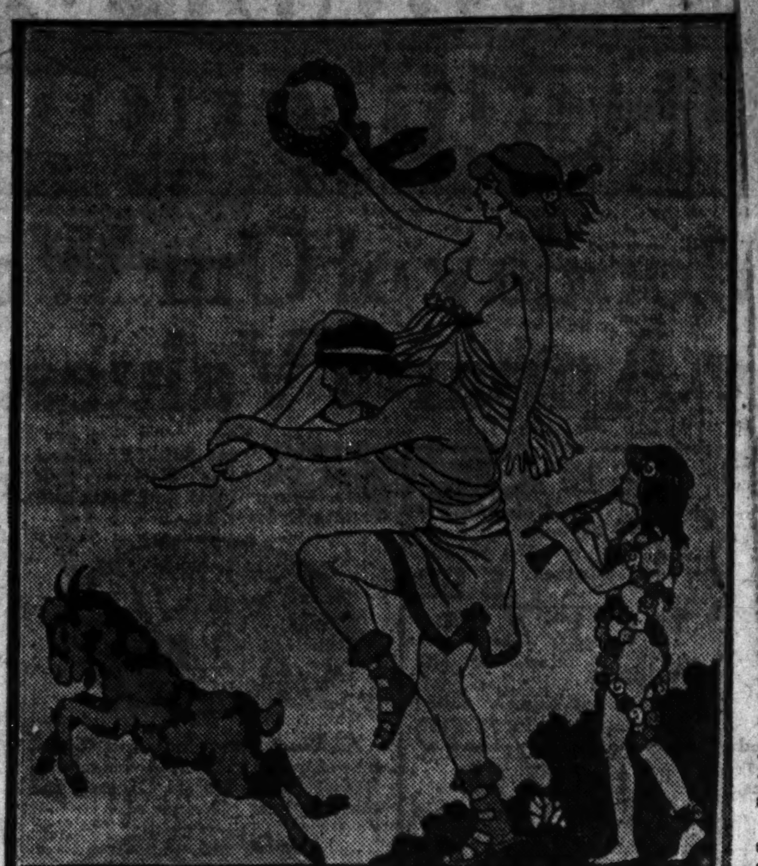
ART

by Eleanor Jewett



"Gifts to the Gods," a mural panel by Harry W. Armstrong, in the exhibit of Chicago architects at the Art institute.

THE last week has been an exceedingly quiet one in the lives of those who follow the twists and turns in the turbulent career of the capricious spirit of Art, as she occasionally brushes with her glossy wings our gray hued metropolis in the casual opening of a fresh venture in the exhibiting of pictures or sculpture.

Possibly the most important event in the last seven days, excepting the new exhibits at the Arts club, which saw the light of day for the first time on Friday—unfortunately, too late to be dwelt upon at length in this recital—was the lecture given on Sunday afternoon in the picture gallery of the residence of the late Mrs. Potter Palmer by Frank W. Bailey of Boston on the portraits of our famous early American artist, John Singleton Copley.

It is never an easy task to translate the charm of color, which appeals to the eye, into the colder medium of spoken prose, which appeals to the ear alone. So to help a bit in this difficult translation, Mr. Bailey presented a number of lantern slides illustrative of the best work of Copley. And to break the black and white monotony of the slides, he poured out on each the details of its costume and setting, presenting at second hand, as it were, the reds and blues, greens and crimsons, yellows and purples, of whose values this artist had such a keen appreciation—colors which his brush applied as fluently to the canvas as it did the sterner lines of form and face.

But of more value than Mr. Bailey's adjectives in bringing close the realities of these portraits were the anecdotes with which the lecturer interspersed his talk. Rather amusing was the tale of the lovely widow, who, the week after burying her husband, was led again as a bride to the selfsame altar from which the Saturday before the same minister had committed the body of the dead to its last resting place.

There was humor, too, attaching to the portrait of a remarkably strong minded woman. Her husband was dying. The clergyman asked him: "Do you not fear the power of death —the prince of terrors?"

"Not at all," said the man. "I've been living with the queen for the last twenty-five years."

I happened by chance last Wednesday to wander into the rooms of the Artists' guild, where there is still on exhibition an interesting number of articles that were entered in the competitive exhibit of applied arts. The Fine Arts building price of $100 was awarded to four contestants. Miss Elizabeth McCormick received $25 for her pieces of exquisite needlework; the Misses Blanke were successful with their entry of decorative embroidery; Ernst Hergberg was awarded a prize for his really remarkable bookbinding, and Lawrence Kennedy won $25 for his attractive book plates.

The needlework by Miss McCormick has been spoken of before. But one must needs see it to appreciate adequately its charm and exceeding fineness. The various pieces are not only decorative but many of them tell stories. And where a practical story may seem lacking, still each tells a tale of many hours lovingly spent with wools and silks copying the master workers of other centuries and other countries, or expanding their themes with details and features of a fresher period.

The collection of etchings and block prints under the care of the Chicago Society of Etchers at the Art institute closed on Thursday. I heard or read—I forget where—that sixty-nine or more prints have been sold for some $1,113. The four Logan prizes were awarded to E. D. Roth for his "Old Palace, Venice"; J. C. Vondrous, for "Portal—Prague"; J. W. Winkler for "Telegraph Mill," and George Senseney for his "Mill River."

The eight prints which have been secured for the permanent collection of the institute are "Boat Houses, Jackson Park," by Elizabeth Colwell; "Shrimp Wagon," by J. W. Winkler; "North Shore Bluffs at Ravinia," by Ralph Fletcher Seymour; "Jimmie O'Connor's," by F. T. Wood; "Draped Head," by A. W. Heintzelman; "Sunflower Stalks in Winter," by George Resler; "Step Sister," by Helen Hyde, and "Celestial Figs," by Alice H. R. Smith.

On Tuesday there will open at the Art institute an exhibition of the work of the Western Drawing and Manual Training association. The print makers of Los Angeles will give an exhibit in the print rooms from May 9 to May 30.

On May 15 a number of exhibits are scheduled for the institute. Among them are the annual exhibit of American water colors, the four artists of Taos, the Art Students' league, the Chicago Camera club, and drawings in black and white by James Cady Ewell.

There is open now at the Arts club an interesting exhibition of work by Joseph Steela, Oscar Bluemner, Jennings Tofel, L. Mortimer Block, Hunt Diedrich, and Gaston Lachaise. This exhibit will be discussed next Sunday.

The Packard car in business

Every morning many Packard cars go to business. They supply the means of transportation for busy men. They go where they are commanded. They respond with just the kind of alertness that business demands. Quick at the crossings — steady in the traffic; strong on the country hills —swift on the highways.

Packard qualifications meet the demands of many corporations that buy cars for their executives.

From the standpoint of scientific transportation, Packard engineers have designed them to withstand the strain of daily business.

The Packard people are transportation experts; they have more to tell you on this subject than any other organization in the world. You can ask them to discuss your car problem without obligation. It is to your interest and profit to do so. Packard passenger cars are not bought as luxuries alone.

They are chosen as you would choose anything from which you expect the best. All considered, from the utility point of view, the Packard is well balanced with no sacrifices or false economies.

Here is a Packard 3-25 five passenger phaeton at work. It is one of the three Packards in operation for the real estate firm of F. A. Hill & Co. "Judged by the number of years you will drive Packards — as against the life of another car — you will find true economy in their use, as we have for the past fifteen years."

Wear Longer, and Save Gasoline

CARS equipped with Federal Cord Tires will go farther with the same impetus because of the wonderful flexibility of these tires.

Their remarkable resiliency effects easier and smoother traction, saves unnecessary wear, and also saves fuel

Friction and internal heat are minimized because every cord is insulated by impregnating in live supple rubber.

The cords are built up diagonally in layers, each layer running transversely to the other, thereby affording the greatest possible strength and flexibility.

Road shocks do not damage some particular part of the tire because all strains are equally absorbed by the whole tire—every cord bears its quota of the impact.

For this reason Federal Cords are more satisfactory and economical.

The famous exclusive Federal tire improvement—the Double-Cable-Base that holds the tire permanently correct upon its rim—is also included in our Cord black tread tires, as well as in our "Rugged" white tread and "Traffik" black tread non-skid tires.

ASTRONOMY

LIFE ON THE PLANETS.

THERE are four planets in the solar system where life can possibly exist. The earth, we know, is inhabited, Mars probably is, Venus either is now or will probably be at some future time, and one of the moons of Jupiter has conditions favorable for life.

Life, in the forms we know it, can exist only between the temperatures of freezing water and about half way to the boiling point. Moreover, air and water are essential factors. It is remarkable that there are three worlds so near us, out of the myriads of bodies in space, which can fulfill these conditions.

The moon has no life on it, because it has neither air nor water. There are thousands of little worlds totally devoid of atmosphere, and in the same class with the moon. On the other hand, the giant planets—Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, and Neptune—are made almost entirely of gases, but they are so hot that no life could exist there. Moreover, they have no surfaces such as objects here on earth have. In changing from one level to another the dense and light gases merge into each other by imperceptible gradations.

There may be habitable bodies among the stars, but they are still undiscovered. The only stellar satellites that have been found so far of huge dimensions, while considered cool as stars are classed, are still much too hot to be worlds.

The earth is without a doubt the most favored of all the planets at the present time. The conditions on the other three possibly inhabited worlds find some natural counterpart here.

Venus is our neighbor lying next nearer to the sun. It is like the earth in all its characteristics of size, clouds, and atmosphere. We should expect Venus to be a tempestuous planet. The sun blazes on one side with twice the heat of the hottest equatorial noon, while the other hemisphere is turned toward the intense cold of outer space. These variations of heating might be thought to produce violent storms, but Venus, in the telescope, is the most tranquil of all the planets. The storms there are much milder than on earth, and the winds less violent. The fleecy clouds and heavy dense air of the planet let in only enough heat to give it an even, unchanging climate.

As seen from space, the earth would look like some bright, bluish white ball. Its surface would be of various tints of blue over the water and green, brown, or yellow-red on the land. The ball would appear roughly crossed by great white belts, the clouds. They would lie mostly in three zones, equatorial clouds and a belt in each temperate zone. The tropics would be usually clear. The great wealth of changing details would indicate a varied and changing climate, due to the fact that heat can get in and out at the clear places more easily than at the cloudy ones.

Mars, the planet just outside the earth's orbit, is a much smaller world than the earth. It is only 4,000 miles in diameter. Theoretically, Mars should be quite cold, but, in fact, we find open bodies of water there, channels, or as some have called them, from their similarity to terrestrial aqueducts, canals. Vegetation grows on Mars and behaves much as it does here.

Venus and the earth are cloudy worlds, but Mars is clear. Clouds are rare, and the land there is like the arid areas on earth. Its air prevents it from becoming a total desert.

The third satellite of Jupiter, so called because it is third in order away from that planet, is a body about as big as Mars. It is cloud laden like Venus, and seems to have a dense atmosphere. Sunlight is feeble out on Jupiter's moons, but it must be remembered that Jupiter itself is a great semi-sun and sheds large amounts of heat. The other satellites of Jupiter are without air and seem to be dead worlds.

The secret of whether a world will support life or not depends on its air. Small bodies cannot hold the struggling mass of molecules which make up an atmosphere, and so the gases escape. This is what happened on the moon. Large planets pull their air down until it is so dense that the internal heat of the ball cannot escape, and so they remain permanently hot. There is a happy medium, as is represented by the four favored planets, when the air shuts out excessive changes and preserves an equal balance of climate all the time, and on such worlds life finds it possible to exist.

Questions and Answers of School Counselor

"I would like to ask your advice on going to school. I have been a stenographer for a number of years, coming from the eighth grade and taking a business course. I find more and more each day that a high school course would have been the best and then the business course. My parents, however, did not have the money to send me through school and it became necessary for me to earn money as soon as possible. I have now saved about $200 and have decided to go somewhere to school, and start in with the first year high school work. I would also like to earn par' of my way through. I would like the full course, but feel that even one year would benefit me greatly. I have been wondering if a person could take up high school subjects at night or by correspondence and receive their credits by turning in the work at some high school."

If you will send me your address I will send you the names of a number of schools which offer high school work in day and night classes. There are many ways of supplementing your $200; with a knowledge of shorthand and typewriting and experience as well you should be able to earn a large part of your expenses here in Chicago. Many of these preparatory schools are accredited to the universities, and colleges, and their credits accepted by the Chicago high schools. There are also correspondence courses which offer high school work. Your success in them depends of course on the amount of time you spend in the study of your lessons. By working summer and winter you should be able to complete a high school curiculum in two and one-half or three years.

"Can you tell me where I can obtain information concerning the city examinations for Chicago teachers, how often they are held, and where?

"M. G."

If you will write to Mr. Campbell, examiner, board of education, Tribune building, he will give you full information on the subject of city examinations.

Reasons Why Michelin Tires Have Become So Popular

Consider the following facts about Michelin Universals, and see if you do not agree that you should use these tires. Now is the time to reach a decision—which, if properly made, will spare you much expense and annoyance during the months ahead.

1—UNEQUALLED EXPERIENCE. The illustration shows Michelin demonstrating the world's first pneumatic automobile tire, which he introduced in 1895. For 24 years Michelin has concentrated on pneumatic tires exclusively. No other tire maker has this unequalled experience.

2—BETTER MATERIALS. The quality of the materials used in Michelin Casings and Inner Tubes has always been the best that money can buy. This well-known fact largely accounts for the superior durability and economy for which Michelin Tires are famous the world over.

3—THICKNESS. Measure the thickness of Michelin Universals in comparison with other makes and you will find they contain more rubber and fabric than do other tires. All this extra material is of the highest quality, as already stated, and hence means greater mileage.

4—EXTRA WEIGHT. A simple comparative test will also show you that Michelin Universals weigh twelve to fifteen per cent more than other tires—additional proof that Michelins are more generously made and have greater mileage built into them. This weight test is important.

5—BROAD FLAT TRACTION-SURFACE. A broad flat eraser wears away more slowly than the small rubber on the end of a pencil. So with tires—the tread that is broad and flat lasts much longer than one with small projections. Note Michelin's superiority in this respect.

6—MODERATE PRICES. Despite their high quality and superior design Michelin Casings and Inner Tubes are moderate in price. The truth of this statement is easily proved by comparing Michelin prices with the prices asked for other tires of anything like the same quality.

In view of the fact that Michelin has devoted 24 years and all his world-wide resources to the manufacture of pneumatic tires exclusively, are you not willing to test Michelins on your own car and be convinced?

STERLING Seamless Red Tubes are pure gum tubes—a section will float in water—only the very highest quality of pure rubber will float, and only the highest quality of rubber is fit to go into a tube which is expected to give service.

Each Sterling Tube is made of a sheet of rubber rolled over upon itself four times, producing a cross-grained lamination, giving strength and toughness otherwise not procurable. (Do you know that there is a definite grain in a sheet of rubber—that it will tear more easily in one direction than in another?)

When a Sterling Tube is punctured, the air comes out of the hole, but the tube is not torn to pieces. Because of this, and because of the quality and thickness of the rubber, the tube can be repeatedly repaired. Because of the quality, the thickness, the lamination, Sterling Tubes stay alive for a long time. When they must be removed from the tire, they are not shapeless, dead, rotten things. Sterling Tubes exposed to light and air for five years have been found satisfactorily serviceable.

THE SCHOOL COUNSELOR

fined, apparently means, in part, a society in which men are equal before the law and in which every one is free to live a decent, comfortable life with opportunity for development of his best powers and a little leisure for recreation. If we mean even no more than this by the term, democracy has never been realized to any great extent as yet and we have still a long way to go.

Democracy is, of course, only a hope, an ideal, a trend of social development; it changes and grows like everything else. But it has a history, a long and complicated history, which may be profitably studied. The late Lord Acton collected one of the finest private libraries of modern times, 70,000 volumes, all bearing on the growth of human liberty. He spent a lifetime in study, making innumerable notes in preparation for a vast history which, at his death, he had not even begun. The best meaning university in the world could not do for its students in two years what Lord Acton, a great mind, failed to do in a lifetime. But yet a university could do something, and far more than it does now.

Any right minded young man should be interested in the world about him, with its trusts, labor unions, political bosses, party conventions, divorce proceedings, newspapers, and all the other things that go to make up our too complex modern life. It should be possible to interest him also in the history of these, provided he can be made to see that they are not fully intelligible until one knows how they came into existence. Once he has some little grasp of the growth of society, particularly the society in which he is to live, perceiving the problems which it must solve, he is in a fair way to become a useful citizen and help things along a bit.

Social history, the history of modern civilization, in short—here is a modest two years' course of study for a carefree boy coming to the university for a good time and to play football! Yet think how much time largely wasted now in our preparatory schools and colleges might be saved, leaving space for the important things. Let the old lumber, the dates, the kings, the battles, all sorts of unimportant facts be swept into the dustheap. I have dim memories of lists of dates supposedly important in ancient history, of diagrams showing the position of the English archers in the battle of Crecy, or of Washington's troops at the battle of Princeton. Many weary hours they filled, but then or now were of no earthly value to any living creature. Also I have spent other hours in a laboratory distilling evil gases and breaking apparatus, and yet other hours memorizing irregular verbs and the use of the ablative. If any of these things have value it is slight as compared to that of many things I should like to have learned, but which no one ever taught me.

Suppose the first two college years devoted solely to the history of democracy and democratic institutions, the course of study working back from our own day as far, perhaps, as the England of Oliver Cromwell's time. Democratic ideas weren't first conceived then, to be sure; indeed there seems never to be a beginning to ideas, run them back as far as you can. Yet this is a convenient starting point for a survey of modern political institutions. The Levelers, a Puritan sect of that day, held democratic ideas, some of which found expression in the bill of rights half a century later. Locke, the philosopher, a short time later still, smashed the divine right of kings theory. His ideas in turn influenced the French thinkers, the encyclopedists, headed by Diderot. This French philosophy helped bring on the revolution and incidentally its ideas are expressed in our Declaration of Independence.

On the economic side one needn't go even so far back as this to have an intelligent understanding of the modern world. The industrial revolution and the age of machine industry began about the year 1760. All the problems of capitalism, machine industry, labor organization, and the like have grown up in the century and a half since then.

But what of the wisdom of the ancients, the classic literatures, modern languages, English literature and composition, and innumerable things else, including science. Let them be omitted or let them wait. A boy should learn enough French or German in high school to read the language passably well, enough to do the reading in French or German books assigned him in college. His English literature would come in by the way as he traced the history of ideas which are expressed in literature. His writing would be done in papers for his course in social history. Of science he would need little except the history of some of the most important scientific ideas, such as the theory of evolution.

In all our education—elementary, secondary, and advanced—we teach too many facts. What we should do is to point out the significance of a carefully selected body of facts, try to make the students think for themselves, and help them to work out the bearing of ideas upon the world in which they live. There never was a bigger or more interesting world than now. Never have human beings been so vitally concerned with all parts of it. The Japanese in Corea and the disposition of the German colonies in Africa are as important questions to the mid-western farmer—whether he realizes it or not—as the choice of the next Republican candidate for president. And never could one learn so readily and in so interesting a fashion as now, from newspapers, books, and moving pictures. Yet one needs some history to make this bewildering world intelligible, history of political and social institutions, and the history of the leading ideas of our time.

Even in two years the university could do much to give it all meaning if study began with the living world about us and worked back as far as time permitted, instead of beginning far back and oftentimes never arriving anywhere in particular—though incidentally contriving to lead the student to believe all knowledge, unless immediate and practical, of no human use to any one. If the university student is not interested in at least one side of the world in which he lives and curious to know something of its meaning and history, surely the college has failed dismally in its most important duty, that of making a good citizen out of him.

When the university does, however, succeed in interesting him he carries into his more specialized training of the last two college years and of the professional school something which will make his work therein mean more than it otherwise would. The world about him and his own need to earn a living will suffice to make him sufficiently self-centered and self-seeking. But if he is a young doctor he will be a better citizen and doctor, too, if he has learned to look upon disease as something more than a scientific problem peculiar to the individual body and sees it for what it largely is, a social product due to bad food, bad housing, bad laws, bad habits, and bad traditions.

The young lawyer needs to see in the law something more than a means for extracting fees. The law, with all its defects, sums up the human desire for an orderly free life, and as this desire takes new forms it expresses itself sooner or later—usually later—in human law. Nor will the young business man who has had a glimpse of economic history talk of labor unions as though they were the recent invention of some grafting labor agitator.

It should be no impossible thing to ask that the university—and to some extent the high school, too—teach young people that society is a living, growing thing, which, if it should cease to change, would decay and fall to pieces. But whether it is to change for the better or the worse depends absolutely upon the intelligence and the clearly defined wish of those who compose it. It gets somewhere only as it sets itself a goal.

A HOT SPOT Chalmers flattens the hills

A GREAT many persons enjoy the rare luxury of fooling themselves about the hill-climbing ability of their prided cars.

If you put enough power underneath the bonnet you'll get over any hill this side of the Alps.

But big engines don't make the best hill-climbers any more than a bear can climb a tree faster than a cat.

Take the Hot Spot Chalmers. You don't have to make up your mind a quarter of a mile away to turn loose the power for a fast run up the hill.

You can slow down and take it at a slow speed. For it "hangs on" and goes over without a whimper. That is the real test of a hill-climbing car. Try it.

Just why a Chalmers flattens the hills is explained in three major words: Hot Spot and Ram's-horn. These simple little devices mean that for every pint of gas that goes into the engine out comes every bit of power that Mother Nature stored away in that pint.

It means you're getting more for your money every time the engine "turns over" than with any other car.

Which ought to make anyone buying a car now take a look at this present day Hot Spot Chalmers.

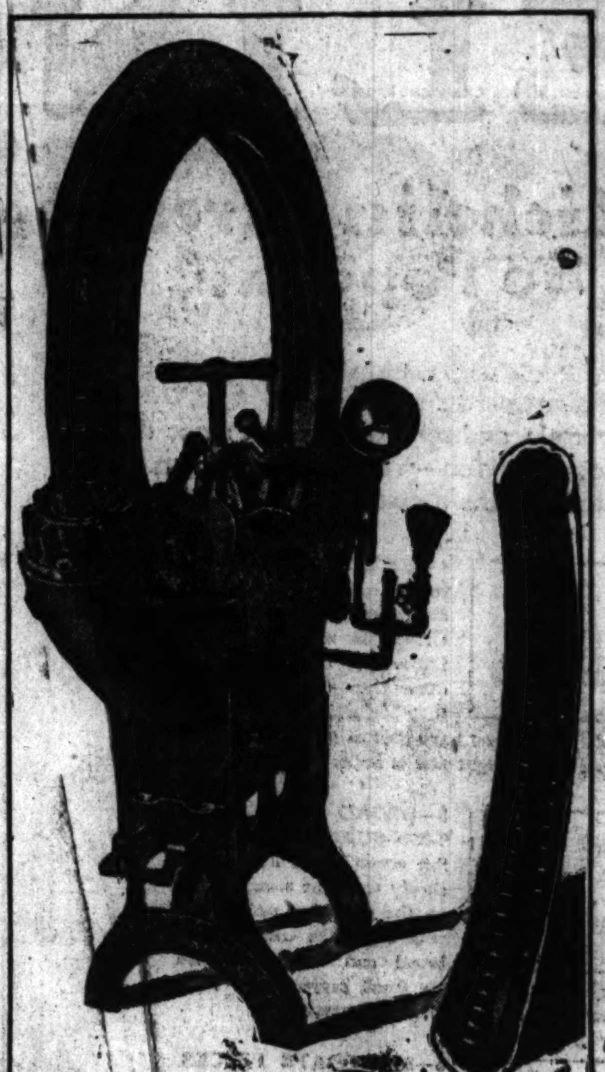
Wilkinson Vulcanizer Retreaders



These are the machines that have revolutionized the tire repair industry. They retread and rebuild a tire so that it looks like new, wears like new and costs less than half the price of new.

These machines are furnished with the new Wilkinson Aluminum Matrix, which may be removed, allowing the operator to make a plain ribbed or non-skid tread.

As our time in this territory is limited, we would ask those interested to get in touch with our special factory representative at the below temporary address at once, as our carload shipment, now en route to Chicago, is nearly all sold in advance. Those wishing to take advantage of delivery from this stock should write or wire the below temporary address.

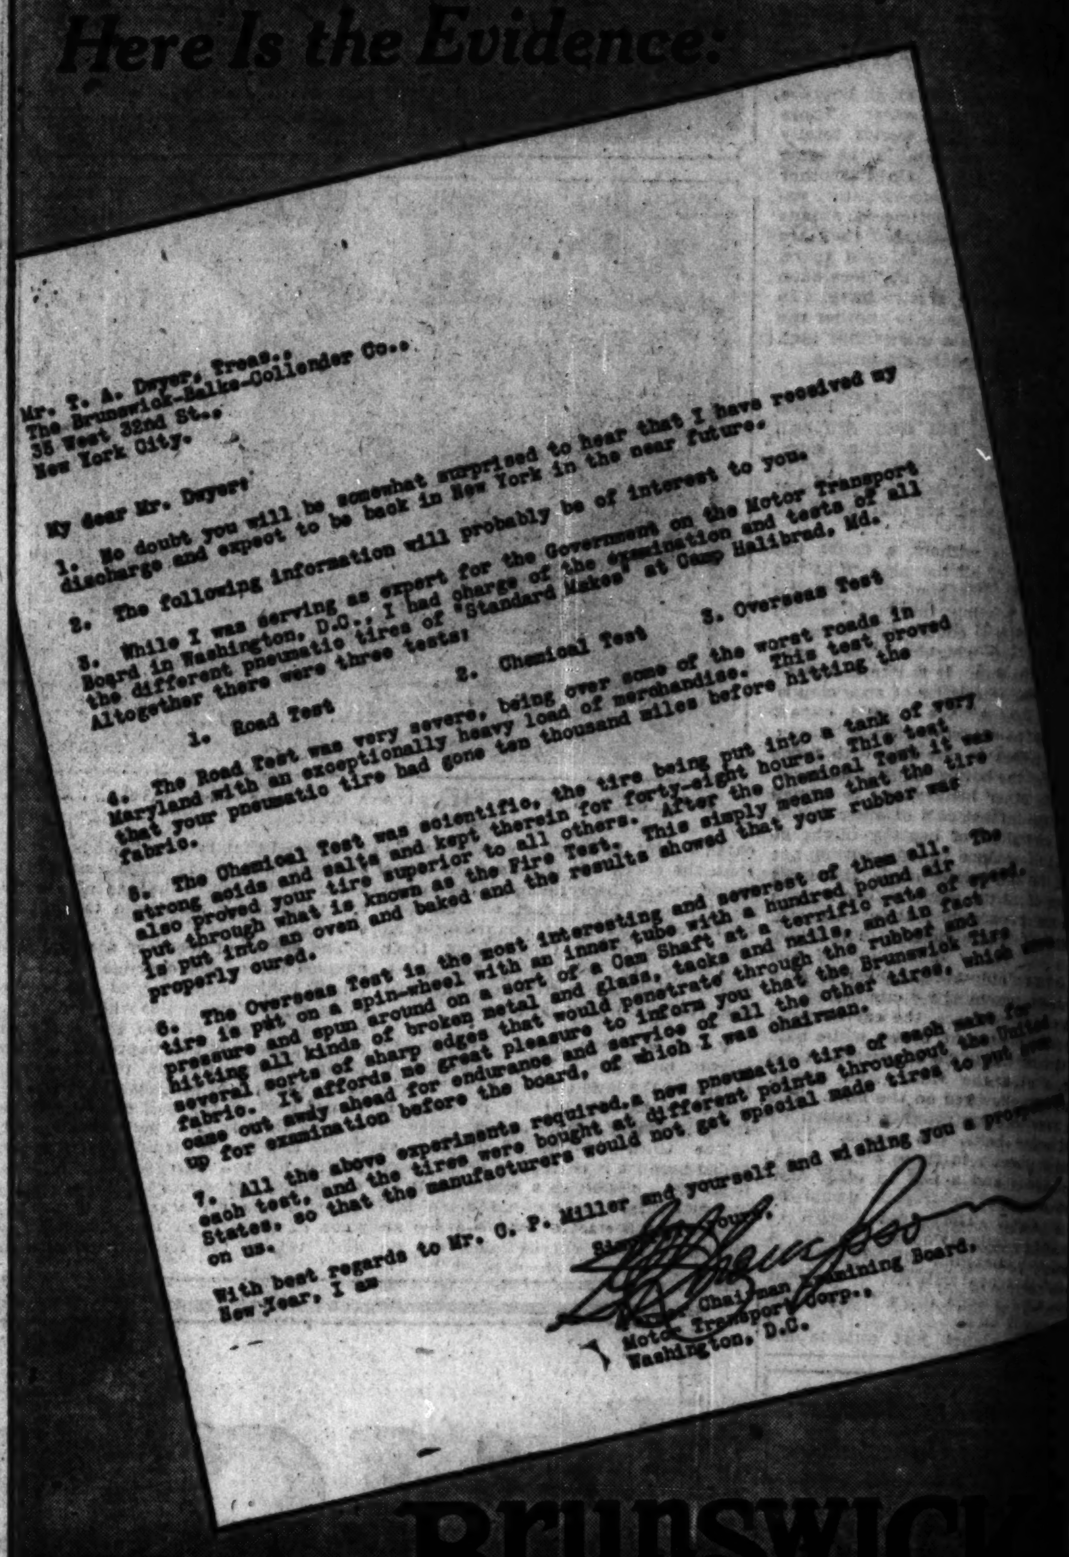
Official Tests Give Brunswick Tires First Place
Here Is the Evidence:



Mr. T. A. Dwyer, Treas.,
The Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co.,
35 West 32nd St.,
New York City.

My dear Mr. Dwyer:

1. No doubt you will be somewhat surprised to hear that I have received my discharge and expect to be back in New York in the near future.

2. The following information will probably be of interest to you.

3. While I was serving as expert for the Government on the Motor Transport Board in Washington, D.C., I had charge of the examination and tests of all the different pneumatic tires of "Standard Makes" at Camp Halibred, Md. Altogether there were three tests:

1. Road Test 2. Chemical Test 3. Overseas Test

4. The Road Test was very severe, being over some of the worst roads in Maryland with an exceptionally heavy load of merchandise. This test proved that your pneumatic tire had gone ten thousand miles before hitting the fabric.

5. The Chemical Test was scientific, the tire being put into a tank of very strong acids and salts and kept therein for forty-eight hours. This test also proved your tire superior to all others. After the Chemical Test it was put through what is known as the Fire Test. This simply means that the tire is put into an oven and baked and the results showed that your rubber was properly cured.

6. The Overseas Test is the most interesting and severest of them all. The tire is put on a spin-wheel with an inner tube with a hundred pound air pressure and spun around on a sort of a Cam Shaft at a terrific rate of speed, hitting all kinds of broken metal and glass, tacks and nails, and in fact several sorts of sharp edges that would penetrate through the rubber and fabric. It affords me great pleasure to inform you that the Brunswick Tire came out away ahead for endurance and service of all the other tires, which were up for examination before the board, of which I was chairman.

7. All the above experiments required a new pneumatic tire of each make for each test, and the tires were bought at different points throughout the United States, so that the manufacturers would not get special made tires to put over on us.

With best regards to Mr. C. P. Miller and yourself and wishing you a prosperous New Year, I am

Sincerely yours,
Chairman Examining Board,
Motor Transport Corps.,

Consider the Transmission of Your Car

It must work all the time you are driving.

And it must work smoothly—and because of the heavy work it has to perform even the slightest friction eventually becomes a tremendously serious thing.

Oil or grease, as the case may be, are all right for a time. But heat breaks them down. Cold reduces their effectiveness. They get "pressed out" of place.

But under practically all conditions of heat, cold or pressure the full lubricating qualities are retained by Dixon's Graphite Transmission and Differential Lubricant.

It not only forms a lubricating film between the surfaces of the moving parts, but the graphite permanently works itself into the microscopic depressions that always exist on the surfaces themselves making them absolutely smooth.

Dixon's Graphite Transmission and Differential Lubricant is made with a special flake graphite mixed by a special process with highest grade grease.

It is furnished to motorists in convenient cans. Simply put it in the transmission and differential boxes as you would any other grease or oil and it will last a long time and make your whole car last longer.

Don't try to do your own mixing. You'll never get the same excellent results that you will from Dixon's.

Your dealer or garage man can supply you.

LAUNCH APPEAL TO NATION FOR SAFER STREETS

Big Campaign Starts This Week; Chicago Death Toll Shows Need.

A NATION-WIDE campaign to make the country realize the need of "safety first" traffic regulations, particularly in cities, is being launched this week by the highways transport committee of the Council of National Defense.

Hundreds of authorities have been asked to take part in the movement, including all the national traffic associations, state highway engineers, many chiefs of police, governors, secretaries of state, and other officials who have to do with traffic problems in one way or another.

As a first step a series of regulations have been drawn up which summarize the best thought of the country on the subject of safety. These are to be placed before the various municipal governing bodies with urgent recommendations for their adoption in one form or another.

At the same time, hundreds of thousands of safety bulletins will be distributed broadcast through the aid of volunteer local organizations.

During 1918 automobile accidents in Chicago caused the death of 374 persons. Of these 140—approximately two-fifths—were children.

Greater New York, with a population more than twice that fo Chicago, had but 548 fatalities. Detroit's toll of lives was 192 and Boston's 101.

Eastern cities, it would appear, have found a way of reducing serious traffic accidents that the middle west has not emulated.

A detailed analysis of last year's automobile accidents in Chicago, showing exactly how each happened, has just been completed by Coroner Hoffman's office. This, the coroner believes, provides some definite suggestions as to what can be done about the future.

The most significant figures in his report, Coroner Hoffman thinks, are those having to do with street accidents. Of those which caused fatalities only 177 occurred at crossings, while 181 did not.

"If we had a law compelling us to go to street intersections instead of crossing over in the middle of a block, and the law had been observed, it would have saved 181 lives in one year," said the coroner.

"Such a law seems a simple and reasonable thing, but it has never been passed or even vigorously urged. This is just one example of the need of public safety campaigns. The only way to accomplish what is needed is to talk about it.

"No one is a more bitter enemy of the reckless automobile driver than I, but he is not the only one to be considered. As a matter of fact, statistics show that in a majority of cases where people are killed by automobiles it is not the driver's fault. And our traffic regulations should take this into consideration."

The tragedies of "the middle of the block," of course, take their heaviest toll among children. Playing in the street, darting across on roller skates, running out after lost balls, and the like are responsible for scores of deaths every year.

Guarding the children on the streets is the most difficult task faced by the "safety first" campaigners, and it is in this direction that their greatest efforts are to be directed.

"Don't play in the street" is one of the first rules of safety for city children. Nevertheless, a "Tribune" photographer had no difficulty in finding this game of hop-skotch going full tilt on the pavement in a residence neighborhood, directly in the path of passing automobiles. A driver must be quick witted, indeed, to dodge the small players, absorbed in their game and continually on the move.

"DONT'S" FOR CHILDREN

Here are some of the warnings which "safety first" campaigners have prepared for parents and teachers to impress upon children whenever the opportunity offers:

Don't step off the sidewalk without looking in both directions. The left is most important, because all traffic should be coming from that direction.

Don't walk behind a street car without looking carefully for automobiles or other street cars coming from the other direction.

Don't run. If others are with you, hold hands tightly and don't separate. The driver can miss you if you become confused, providing you stay together, but if you separate one of you is almost sure to be struck.

Don't read letters or books when crossing the street. Keep your mind on the fact that there is danger and you must be on your guard.

Don't take a chance, if the streets are slippery, because an automobile is approaching slowly. A quick stop is impossible, and the machine may skid.

Don't run after a ball if it goes into the street without stopping first at the curb to make sure there are no machines approaching.

Don't be a "jaywalker." Cross the street at street corners.

Don't play in the streets.

Don't "hop on" for a ride on someone's spare tire. The greatest danger is in getting off without being able to see in all directions.

Sauce for the Gander.

Every Buffalo traffic officer must know how to run a car. An order requiring all traffic directors who are not at present skilled chauffeurs to take lessons and undergo tests showing their ability to drive a car through congested streets has just been issued. Each traffic officer will be given a test consisting of driving through Main street when it is most crowded.

Motor Show at Field's.

A tabloid automobile show will be staged in the motor supply department at Field's all this week, beginning tomorrow. Among the more pretentious exhibits will be Cadillac and Cole chassis and a Marmon engine on the block, with experts from the factories to explain their intricacies; a special Cole touring model, and an elaborate display of automobile camping paraphernalia—tents, luncheon outfits, camp stoves, and the like.

The processes of tire building and oil testing will be demonstrated, and a variety of accessories will be shown, including everything from spark plugs to baby cribs and vacuum feed systems. Special decorations will lend the proceedings an air of spring festivity.

S. A. E. Plans Meeting.

The summer meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers will be held at Ottawa Beach on the east shore of Lake Michigan, six miles from Holland. The society has secured the exclusive use of the Ottawa Beach hotel and cottages for June 23-27. Accommodations will approximate 1,000 members and guests.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS by HIGH SPEED

Readers who wish measurably prompt replies to requests for motoring information will do well to provide a stamped and self-addressed envelope, so that they may be answered by mail. Limitations of space are such that only a few of the many inquiries received can be answered in this column.

When are they going to fix the road that extends from the end of the Rand road pavement to Lake Zurich? I went through that road last Sunday and there are three or four spots that are the limit. One spot is 15 to 18 inches deep, in grooves, and in such bad condition that you have to trust to luck that you do not break your steering wheel or have to have a team of horses pull you out.

A. E., Chicago.

I know of no plan at present for improving this particular road into Lake Zurich. It is unfortunate that the Rand road pavement must stop at the Cook county line, but that is one of the disadvantages of the county system of road building. Some day, perhaps, we shall build roads as the railroads do—with the idea of getting somewhere. Meanwhile let's be thankful that things are no worse. This Lake Zurich road realy isn't so bad in the summer touring season; almost any unpaved road in these parts is likely to be bad in April or May.

Kindly publish the best automobile route from Chicago to Seattle, Wash.; also the number of miles and the best time to make the trip.

W. O. S., Chicago.

Please publish the best route from Chicago to Seattle, Wash. Is it best to make this trip in August?

G. NIELSON, Chicago.

Drive north through Lake Geneva, Wis.; Oconomowoc, Waupun, Berlin, and Waupaca to Brantwood. Then go west through [illegible] to Abbottsford and follow the Yellowstone trail from Abbottsford through Eau Claire, Menomonie, and St. Paul to Minneapolis. From Minneapolis take the National Parks highway the rest of the way through St. Cloud, Minn.; Alexandria, Fargo, N. D.; Bismarck, Glendive, Mont.; Billings, Butte, Missoula, and Spokane, Wash., to Seattle. The distance is 2,470 miles. August, or any part of the late summer, is an excellent time to make the trip.

Kindly print the best route from Chicago to Newcastle, Ind., and give the distances between principal towns en route. Are the roads in Indiana in good condition the latter part of May?

HARRY B. AULT, Chicago.

Indiana has enough good roads to provide many interesting ways of driving to Newcastle. I would suggest going south through Lowell (forty-nine miles) to Goodland (forty-eight miles), east to Wolcott (thirteen miles), southeast through Lafayette (twenty-[illegible] miles) and Frankfort (twenty-five miles) to Lebanon (seventeen miles), and east through Noblesville (twenty-five miles) to Newcastle (thirty-five miles). The roads should be in excellent condition by the latter part of May.

REO

With Electric Starter and Lights, and on Pneumatic Tires This Reo "Speed Wagon" was the Forerunner of its Type

IN 1915 WHEN this Reo "Speed Wagon" was first introduced, those features—electric starter, electric lights and pneumatic tires—constituted a liability.

TODAY, THEY ARE its greatest asset.

THEN, REO DEALERS said that the one "sales resistance" was the reluctance of buyers to "experiment with pnuematics on a truck."

NOW, THOSE SAME dealers say that it is mainly because of these features that this Reo enjoys such a tremendous popularity and demand.

THEN, THERE WERE only a few Reo "Speed Wagons" in hands of a few daring owners.

NOW, MORE THAN 20,000 in hands of the most conservative and critical class of customers.

THEN, THERE WAS a fear of "punctures and blow-outs."

NOW, THOSE bugbears are forgotten in the light of the great proven efficiency and economy of this Reo.

THEN, EVEN the tire makers were skeptical of this Reo innovation.

NOW, TIRE MAKERS, without exception, advocate pneumatics for trucks not only of this type, but up to five tons and over.

THEN, THE AVERAGE buyer considered an electric starter a non-essential and electric lights superfluous.

NOW, HE WOULD as soon buy a "street starting" automobile with kerosene lamps, as a motor truck of that obsolete type.

THEN, ONLY THE REO engineers appreciated the superiority—the greater efficiency, speed, economy and lower upkeep—of a truck mounted on pneumatics.

NOW, RIVAL ENGINEERS are copying this Reo as closely as they can.

THEN, ONLY DRIVERS knew the saving of time and fuel and motor wear effected by the electric starter.

NOW, THE OWNER knows even better — through his cost accountant.

NOR NEED WE NOW show how the working day is lengthened and the radius increased by the electric lighting system — for that, too, is patent.

AGAIN, IS REO "conservative progressiveness" justified.

AGAIN, IS THE LEADERSHIP of Reo shown—and by imitation, that sincerest form of flattery—is the leadership of Reo design and the soundness of Reo engineering proven.

Valve Troubles: How to Cure Them

BY HIGH SPEED.

WHEN poppet valves do not function properly, due to warped heads, pitted faces, bent stems, worn stems, etc., there is a considerable falling off in the power developed by the engine, and the owner immediately discovers it in the form of poor performances.

The time honored method of testing the compression by cranking the engine by hand slowly to determine the relative resistance offered is a fairly satisfactory way of determining compression loss, but does not indicate where that loss exists.

The owner of a car should bear in mind that valve heads work in an extremely hot atmosphere, since the heads are in the combustion chamber and consequently are exposed to the flame of the explosions. They must therefore be able to withstand the terrible heat without warping, because if they should warp the effectiveness of the valve to make a perfect joint with its seat would at once be destroyed.

The reason car manufacturers state that "valves are surrounded by adequate water space" is because they wish to show that the valves, being properly cooled, are not likely to be affected very quickly by the heat. In some engines where provision has not been made for the proper cooling of the valves the engines give continual trouble from loss of compression, valves sticking, valves requiring frequent grinding, misfiring due to irregularities in the valve action, etc.

The only safe way an owner can tell whether a valve head is warped or badly pitted or a stem bent or badly carbonized is to remove the valve, examine it, and measure it.

After a valve is removed by means of a valve spring compressor, which permits the valve seat support to be slipped out, it should first be carefully cleaned by immersion in kerosene, then wiped with a clean cloth. Examine the face of the valve for small black spots.

Place the valve upright on a level surface and measure four or five distances from head to plate. This will give you a good check on the trueness of the head. A variation that can be measured with an ordinary rule may be taken as being enough to cause poor valve seating, hence leakage of mixture past the valve when it is closed. A valve with a warped head should be replaced.

Test the stem for straightness. Place the stem on a level plate, while the head of the valve hangs over the edge of the plate. The eye can instantly detect if the stem is not straight. If it is bent a little it may be straightened in a vise. A bent stem may cause the valve to stick open or it also may cause it to return to its seat too slowly.

If the valve stem is straight it should be checked for diameter. The best way to do this is first to polish the stem with a piece of emery cloth and then try it in its particular guide. Place it in the guide (when the tappet is all the way down) and holding one hand on the stem and the other on the head (to force the valve against its seat) feel for side play. There should be none perceptible. If the valve stem can be shaken in its guide it will allow oil to leak down and air to leak up.

Some of you may notice that there is oil all around the valve springs and the tappets and on the side of the engine on which the valves are located. That oil usually comes out through the valve guides, which, by the way, may themselves be worn.

It is possible in some cases where detachable guides are used to install a new guide to fit the worn stem, but where this construction is not used a valve with an oversize stem must be obtained and fitted to the guide. It should be just free enough so it falls to its seat after being lifted about an inch.

When the valves are out of the engine and the heads are badly carbonized grinding is resorted to to make the joint between face and seat accurate. In the shops the grinding is a matter of a few minutes because the valve is refaced with a special tool and the valve seat has a new surface cut with a reseating tool. Then the valves ground as a sort of finish operation.

Without these tools compound must be used to grind the valve to its seat. Valve grinding compound may be bought at any supply store. A little of it is spread over the face of the valve, the valve placed in its proper position and a valve grinding tool or screw driver or brace is used to oscillate the valve until the face and seat are an even gray tone. The valves are removed occasionally to see whether they are finished.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

AUTOMOBILES will be bringing a premium before the 1919 season is over, in the opinion of A. J. Banta, Maxwell distributor in Chicago, and one of the veterans of Motor row. "People will be astonished," says Mr. Banta, "to know that dealers in used cars actually have agents out skirmishing the country over, picking up all the good used cars that can be procured. There is not a single automobile or part factory in the United States that isn't working to its utmost, but it will be physically impossible for the makers to take care of the demand for the next half year. The public may take this as so much 'trade talk' to frighten them into lining up with their orders, but I am willing to stake my reputation on what I have said."

The capacity output of the Haynes Automobile company will be increased to 15,000 cars a year under plans decided upon at a recent directors' meeting. A large new factory building and a forge shop will be constructed, and the concern's capital stock increased to $5,000,000.

The post-war boom in road building activity is stimulating the ingenuity of the manufacturers. Over in Buchanan, Mich., the staff of the Clark Equipment company has designed a new type of steel wheel for motor trucks used in highway work. It has a broad band surface, which permits it, on a loaded truck, to act as a road roller, packing down the newly laid roadbed as fast as it is put in place. The contraption is interchangeable with ordinary wheels, and may be put on or taken off at will.

Is the use of graphite on wheel rims and in tires injurious to the rubber? One authority was permitted to hint as much in this department recently, but W. F. Crist, lubricant expert of the Joseph Dixon Crucible company, enters an emphatic denial. "Properly prepared graphite," he says, "is as beneficial to rims and tires as it is to transmissions and differentials. It is entirely free from all oily substances, prevents rusting and sticking, and prolongs the life of the tires and tubes. It may be used freely, as one would use talc."

Four Packard trucks, operated by a North Carolina tobacco concern, carried 37,166,000 pounds of freight in three months, according to the records of the last Packard truck efficiency test.

S. R. Swiss, a veteran advertising man, formerly identified with the affairs of the Gramm-Bernstein and Day-Elder truck companies, has been appointed advertising manager of the Republic Motor Truck company.

A tire famine is in prospect, thinks Horace De Lisser, president of the Ajax Rubber company. "The whole rubber industry," he says, "cannot produce the tires this year that will actually be needed. Every car that boasts wheels and an engine is running and is going to continue to run as long as its motor can function."

The Autocar company announces a new chassis with a 120 inch wheel base as an addition to its standard ninety-seven inch model. Both are rated at the same capacity, one and one-half tons, but the longer is designed to take bodies up to twelve feet in length.

The BOLTE TRACTOR
A 1919 MASTER PIECE

Brake Test, 60 H. P. Weight, 5,000 Pounds

Not a Mechanical Contraption, but a Practical Farm Implement!

THE BOLTE TRACTOR is the final word in tractor construction. It represents the soundest principles of mechanical engineering applied expressly and practically to farming necessity. Ordinary mechanical faults are absolutely obliterated because it was built by a man who knows what is demanded of a tractor. J. G. Bolte, a farmer as well as an engineer, knew what had to be avoided and what had to be accomplished before he started its construction. After 14 years of severest test he has evolved the tractor which he knows will meet every demand without failure.

Only Four-Wheel, Square-Turn Tractor Built

THE BOLTE TRACTOR is of four-wheel construction but will turn within its own length. This is an all important feature in itself, meaning ease and facility of operation. Any farmer can operate this tractor as easily as he can the simplest piece of farm machinery. Simple in construction, with no complex parts to cause trouble, it is built to withstand the hardest strain that it can be forced to undergo,

Choicest territories are now open and this tractor will be in great demand. Don't delay in taking advantage of this opportunity. Write us!

Inquire immediately for full information regarding operation, cost and construction. One trial of this tractor will convince you of its reliability, speed and economy. It will save you dollars and increase your production. Write us today.

FULTON Endurance

"FIFTEEN thousand miles through Pennsylvania winter snow and mud," writes C. H. Johnston. "My Fulton has never been hung up, although loaded as high as two tons, and hauling in mud feet deep." Ruggedness with speed and economy are recognized features of the Fulton Truck. The Triple-Heated-Gas Motor is an important factor in its enduring efficiency.

Fultons in the fleets of such great national concerns as Standard Oil Co., John Wanamaker, Borden Farm Products Co., and others, is evidence of their fitness.

Let us show you proofs of Fulton Evidence—it will convince you as it has others.

Tribune Tours 1919

IV.—Chicago to St. Joseph, Mich.

THE trip to St. Joseph is one of the "dependables"—just about the right length for a half day run, with towns at frequent intervals along the way, alternating with mildly interesting stretches of open country, roads that are weatherproof for the most part (though somewhat the worse for wear [illegible]), and, at the journey's end, one of the most beautiful drives in the middle west—that along the bluffs above the lake into St. Joseph. Not an adventure exactly, but a thoroughly enjoyable week end diversion.

Road work beyond New Buffalo has kept the tourist, in past years, jumping from one route to another between that point and Stevensville. Improvements on the "shore road" are now sufficiently well along to make it the best as well as the most direct way. One or two detours will be necessary early in the season, but these are short and easily followed. Folks who want to drive a little farther may still continue west to Three Oaks or Galien, turning north from either town.

Indiana Housekeeping.

If you are a race fan read this to your wife. The night before the 500 mile race at Indianapolis one sprinkling wagon and eleven men actually scrub every brick on the two and one-half mile course. Sure, it only comes once a year, but who wants a race course for a kitchen?

Resta's Peugeot Seeks New Glory

RAY HOWARD, one of the unknowns in the racing game, has been entered in the Victory sweepstakes at Uniontown, Pa., May 17, in the Peugeot car that Dario Resta used to wheel his way to the 1916 A. A. A. championship. No one was ever able to find out just how much speed the car had in Resta's hands, and it will be interesting to see if Howard is expert enough to "baby" the French car to victory and make it live up to its nickname, "Luck car."

Wilbur D'Alene, the "wild man from the west," has also entered the Uniontown speedway event, which opens the season. D'Alene will tool a 1916 Deusenberg. Tommy Milton will drive an eight cylindered Deusenberg and Eddie O'Donnell will have a four cylinder "Deusey." The eight that Milton will drive is similar to the King-Bugatti aviation engine that Deusenberg was building during the war. The eight cylinders are in parallel "fours" with two crankshafts geared to the fly wheel and rotating in opposite directions.

PROOF!

The rising tide of demand for Essenkay, the BETTER-than-Air Tire Filler, has again forced us to increase factory space. This time we are taking over the entire 5 story building adjoining our present plant, thus doubling production facilities.

This practical evidence of ESSENKAY'S whirlwind growth, coupled with the fact that over 20,000 new users have replaced air in their tires with ESSENKAY during the past few months, should be convincing PROOF that the "TIRE FILLER ERA" is here, and that ESSENKAY is an ASSURED SUCCESS. Watch for "Essenkay Week"—all over America—May 28th to June 3rd—the sensational climax of our big national advertising campaign, and an event of interest to millions of motorists and thousands of progressive dealers from coast to coast.

Free Trial Offer

ESSENKAY is installed by us on FREE TRIAL. We do not say "buy" ESSENKAY; we say "try" ESSENKAY. We ask you to test it in your tires under your own loading and road conditions. If your passenger car carries five people, crowd in eight. If your truck carries a ton, put on two tons. Ride over smooth roads, then over the roughest you can find, including hilly and sandy country. Allow the car to remain under maximum load on a concrete floor to prove that it will not flatten. Then if you are not convinced that ESSENKAY rides like air—that it will end your tire trouble—that you will no longer be bothered with punctures, blowouts or slow leaks—that ESSENKAY will not flatten, crumble or deteriorate—return it—THE TEST WILL COST YOU NOTHING.

This Is the PRODUCT
Proved Better-Than-Air That Satisfies Motorists Everywhere

The foundation of ESSENKAY'S success rests on the PROVEN merit of the PRODUCT itself.

If ESSENKAY were NOT, in fact, a BETTER-THAN-AIR TIRE FILLER, it would be manifestly impossible to convince over 75,000 passenger car and truck owners who have used it for varying periods from a few months up to five years that it rides like air, prevents punctures, blowouts and slow leaks, doubles and trebles tire mileage, and saves all expense of inner tubes, extra tires, spare rims, pumps, jacks, etc.

But merit—UNTESTED—and claims—UNPROVEN—avail nothing. PROOF was demanded, and ESSENKAY supplied it in most convincing detail. Probably no commodity offering a special service of increased efficiency was ever more strongly fortified by FACTS than ESSENKAY.

The PROPOSITION back of ESSENKAY—the unusually liberal FREE TRIAL OFFER—contributed, perhaps, almost as much to ESSENKAY'S success as the remarkable qualities of the material itself.

This Is the PROPOSITION
That Offers by Test To Prove That Essenkay Really Is Best

Please read the above ESSENKAY FREE TRIAL OFFER, the PROPOSITION that has helped to "put over" ESSENKAY in a BIG WAY all over America.

If you are a passenger car or truck owner, or a dealer interested in automobiles, tires or accessories, you cannot DOUBT the quality and unusual merits of a tire filler that could "make good" on a test like that. Please remember that this FREE TRIAL OFFER is the ordinary, every-day basis of ESSENKAY sales and satisfaction. Every prospective user of ESSENKAY is first asked to TEST it, and abide by the results. Every ESSENKAY Dealer builds his trade on the solid rock of his FREE TRIAL OFFER.

It is not surprising that a PRODUCT backed by such a PROPOSITION should grow and keep on growing, forcing increase after increase in production facilities.

☛ Over 75,000 Car Owners Now Use ESSENKAY ☚

Read These Letters from Users:

The expressions below are only a few of many hundreds of similar letters received from car owners. Some of the more than 75,000 users of ESSENKAY were supplied direct from factory, but we ship ESSENKAY direct from factory only in OPEN TERRITORY where no Dealer has been established. Wherever there is an ESSENKAY Dealer, the sale is made by him. Our present expansion in factory space has been forced by the big increase in volume of Dealers' orders.

"I have used the Essenkay filler in my tires for the past [illegible] years in my large 7 passenger touring car and find it very satisfactory. It is such a pleasure to ride along and know that the tires are both safe and free from blowouts. I would not do without Essenkay for the world."—Richard Peters, Wilmette, Ill.

"My tire trouble ended when I had Essenkay installed, which was over two (2) years ago. It has proven entirely satisfactory in every respect."—W. E. Gray, 211 W. 31st St., Chicago.

"Upon our first trial of Essenkay filler in the tires of one of our trucks we were skeptical as to its proving satisfactory. However, after three months' use we had all our trucks equipped with it and we can truthfully say we have never regretted it. The trucks are never out of service because of punctures and we get a great deal more mileage from tires. The trucks ride easier than with air tires, as the Essenkay acts as a shock absorber."—F. G. Morse & Son, Cottage Grove Ave. and [illegible] St., Chicago.

"We are using Essenkay in our car. We have found it very satisfactory. It is not necessary at any time to stop for either air, punctures or blowouts. We drive the car day and night, and besides this great convenience we find that we get 50% more mileage out of our tires than we would with air. The convenience and saving on inner tubes and casings is so great that we hardly feel that any argument could be produced which could make us change our mind as to the merit of your product."—Kuhl & Bent, 732 Sherman St., Chicago.

We have been using Essenkay filler for some time and find it very satisfactory, and we cheerfully recommend it."—Adam Schillo Lumber Company, Chicago, Ill.

"We have used Essenkay in the tires on our commercial cars for the past year and are perfectly satisfied with results. It increases the life of the tire and eliminates punctures, thereby saving time and the cost of inner tubes."—N. I. Bremner Co., Chicago.

"After having used Essenkay Tire Filler for the past two years, we take pleasure in recommending it and would not do without it."—Anderson Bros., 3131 Sheffield Ave., Chicago.

"I installed Essenkay in my tires in July and from the first considered that I had found just what I had been looking for ever since I owned a car. I have not added one dollar of expense to my car since installing Essenkay and figure I have already saved the price of it."—E. P. Ley, Bridgeport, Nebr.

"I installed Essenkay in my tires last August and can say after six months' use that I would hate to be without them. I have not had a bit of tire trouble, excepting wearing out some old tires that I could not have gotten any good from if I had been using air tubes. My car runs just as good, rides as easy and with a lot more satisfaction, knowing that I won't have the annoyance of punctures or blowouts."—H. E. Bryant, Worland, Wyo.

"I have been using Essenkay in my car for more than two years and put it through every possible test, except boiling, and have always had the very best of results. I had my tires filled in December, 1916, and have used it continually ever since with fine results."—J. L. Wagoner, 1935 Charles St., Lafayette, Ind.

"I have had Essenkay in my tires for some time and believe the demand is going to be great for it in this section this summer. I would not put air tubes back in my tires if they were furnished free of charge for a year."—G. H. Elder, Hebron, N. D.

"I have used Essenkay in my Ford for two seasons and I have gotten very good results, even better than I expected. My tires have given me 100% more mileage and I have everything good to say for Essenkay Tire Filler."—E. J. Bernard, 324 Fisher St., Marquette, Mich.

"I bought the Essenkay Tire Filler of you in October, 1917, for my tires, and have used it ever since in casings that were not good enough to use with inflated tubes. The filler has been very satisfactory and saved me money and made motoring a joy instead of a dread."—N. Myers, Barryton, Mich.

"We have been using Essenkay in our tires for over 18 months. During that time we have been very pleased with the results. Some of our cars make long country trips and when they start out with tires that are filled with your product, we have the comfort of knowing that we shall not have to go miles out of town to help them on account of tire trouble. Some people have brought up the question of rear axle trouble. I am pleased to say that we have had no more, if as much trouble in that direction."—Salvation Army, 1325 Congress St., Chicago.

"We wish to state that we have used Essenkay Filler on our Ford nearly all summer, and it has given us what we consider splendid satisfaction."—Chicago Pulley & Shafting Co., Clinton and Monroe Sts., Chicago.

"I was concerned about the additional unsprung weight which I thought might affect my car on the 'pickup.' I find, however, that the additional weight, the exact amount of which I do not know, is obviously not enough to interfere with getting away from a standing start apparently as rapidly as I did before inserting the filler."—D. S. Campbell, Sec. Tuthill Spring Company, Chicago.

"It rides just as easy as air filled tires. I, for one, would not be without it. Me for Essenkay Tire Filler first and last. I would not take double the price I paid for it and have to go back to air-filled casings."—Dr. L. T. Lear, 1134 Broadway, Gary, Ind.

"I have used Essenkay in all four of my tires since last April and I have found it very satisfactory. It is a great relief to forget there is such a thing as punctures and blowouts."—Rev. S. I. Spencer, 7300 Coles Ave., Chicago.

Essenkay Week

How Dealers Feel About Essenkay

The exclusive right to handle ESSENKAY in any territory is a recognized asset, which is becoming more and more valuable, as the consumer demand for ESSENKAY keeps on increasing in volume. The success of ESSENKAY Dealers is due not only to the merit of the product and the sales building Free Trial Offer, but also the fact that all inquiries from ESSENKAY advertising are turned over to our Dealers and that we stand behind them with a complete system of strong, effective selling helps. There is still some "open territory" available for those who can qualify.

"In the last 15 months my sub-agents have netted me approximately $1,800.00, besides what I have made myself. I think I can prove to you that my sales and agency profits were considerably over $5,000.00. Things are lined up for an enormous business next year. I have about 600 applicants that I have not been able to see as yet."—Essenkay Distributing Company, Wellesley, Mass. (Essenkay Dealers for 2 years.)

"Advertising brings excellent results. Filling tires rapidly as possible. Booking orders several days in advance."—Snyder & McNulty, 1824 14th St., N. W., Washington, D. C. (Essenkay Dealers for 2½ years.)

Since that time we have had every occasion to feel that our actions were fully justified in every way, as Essenkay has lived up to its reputation throughout the entire time of our connection with it. We may be unusually enthusiastic about Essenkay, but if we are, it is because we have been so successful and are becoming more and more so each month. On the whole, we are well pleased with our experience as Essenkay dealers. We find it now easy to sell, as every satisfied customer is a valuable solicitor."—The Essenkay Sales Co., Baltimore, Md. (Essenkay Dealers for 2½ years.)

"On Nov. 13 I received my first shipment of Essenkay and I just run over my books and find I installed over $900.00 worth of Essenkay. HOW DOES THAT SOUND TO YOU?"—The Essenkay Company of Youngstown, Youngstown, Ohio. (Essenkay Dealers for 1 month.)

Wurlitzer Offers Great Values in Used Players, Grands, Uprights

There is economy in purchasing a good used piano, providing you know what you buy and of whom. Many supposedly advertised used bargains by private parties are not bona fide bargains. In most cases they are misleading advertisements. When you purchase a used piano from Wurlitzer, the world's largest music house, it is guaranteed and backed by a house of over 60 years of successful, honest business dealings. We must reduce our stock of used pianos. Every odd style, slightly used, second hand, discontinued style instrument must be sold. An exceptional opportunity to own a beautiful piano for your home. Before purchasing a piano anywhere be sure and see these wonderful values. Lowest possible terms of payment can be arranged and reservations may be made for future delivery. Call tomorrow for best selection. Liberal allowance made on your old piano.

SALESMEN,
CHICAGO & ELSEWHERE.

After you have looked over a number of sales propositions without being "sold" on any particular one, drop in and see us if in the city or write us if out of town, and get our version; you'll find it conservative but backed with real merit. As to the qualifications, you should be a specialty salesman, preferably with experience in selling insurance, advertising, typewriters, checkwriters, adding machines, real estate, etc. This company, after seven years of constructive work and through extensive national advertising, has become a recognized leader in its field.

We are making a big drive throughout the country, with an office device of great merit—a necessity for every one having a bank account, large or small; we count about eighteen million prospects in the United States (250,000 in Chicago alone). Our organization today is national—extends from coast to coast—and we need good salesmen here as well as in every other city in the country.

'OBTAIN YOUR OWN HOME'

is the slogan and the earnest advice from many different sources, including the U. S. government, and it will continue to be ours until you have become a happy member of our little EDISON PARK community.

We have previously, through these columns, given numerous reasons for the desirability of a home some distance from the center of the city, and, in the same line of argument, take liberty to quote a few forceful sentences from a recent TRIBUNE editorial entitled "A Home in the Country," namely: "Those who are becoming restless because of the advances in rents, etc., are recommended to the open air, the front and back yard, the trees, and the liberty of a home in the country. Offhand this suggestion has a smug sound, as if all one has to do is to pack his furniture and move out among the skies and the waving meadows. But it is offered in all sincerity. Think it over.

"There are dozens of fine suburbs all about Chicago, with plenty of room for homes of all kinds—from the cosy three room bungalow up. Away from the smut and grime of the city; from the soot and cinders which render the lot of the housewife anything but pleasant. With clean atmosphere and healthy surroundings for the children; with yards for them to play in, and an absence of the contagion that breeds in crowded quarters; this aside from the infinite delight of 'owning your own home' where you may putter and fuse as you like.

"These and numerous other advantages are offered if you are willing to listen to the lure of the fresh air. And surely, the mention of fresh air should have its weight with those whose lungs are coated like automobile tires with Chicago smoke.

"The flat dweller doesn't take root. He lives on the jump all the time, the high spots in his career coming at the expiration of his leases, when he must summon the moving van and join the innumerable caravan of spring and summer Bedouins. His flat is hardly more than a cot in a hotel. Its liveableness depends upon the sanitary code of the preceding tenant. His lips are always forming the sentence, 'Where do we go from here?'

"Quite obviously, not all of the flat dwellers are going to take up their beds and walk to the country. Most of them prefer to keep on carrying their beds perennially over into the next block. The Wandering Jew has nothing on the average flat dweller. Life is one janitor after another.

"Take a Sunday off and go look at the country. Nose around the suburbs and pick out the one that fits your purse, and then, instead of pouring your money into the landlord's pocket pour it into your own. While taking money out of one pocket and placing it in another may seem an empty transaction there follows a salubrious sensation upon discovering it in that other pocket."

While our EDISON PARK SUBDIVISION is within the city boundaries it is nevertheless so far removed from the center and the manufacturing districts as to be entirely free from above mentioned disadvantages. It is a well settled community, recognized for its natural beauty, high altitude and sanitary perfection, where rural charm and environments combine with city conveniences to make it a most desirable spot for the permanent family home. Join us there today for an investigation. Take any surface car leading to Jefferson Park, and from there, a short distance, the train; or take the 1:29 or 3:30 train from the Madison street station direct to Edison Park.

OWN A FRUIT RANCH.

I have a 180 acre fruit farm in Idaho that will make a good living for any one who would like to make his home in this wonderful, healthful state. I cannot run both this big farm and attend to my business in the east at the same time, so I am obliged to sell. My farm manager estimates the crop this fall will be about 60 car loads of apples and prunes. The trees are young and are just beginning to bear fruit and the crop will greatly increase as soon as they mature and reach their full bearing capacity.

Here is a good opportunity for some one to obtain a producing farm and not have to wait six or seven years after planting young trees before they begin to bear. Unlimited water supply and the finest climate to live in. Farm three miles from railroad town. Address owner, K O 40, Tribune.

Michigan.

THE SAME CHANCE

About 35 years ago a large tract of land in one of the best agricultural counties of Illinois, along the line of the Illinois Central Railroad, was advertised in the county's newspaper for sale at $8 per acre. Some bewhiskered gents put on their specs to see what the ad was all about and, as they read it, passed the paper along to their cronies in conference assembled. Next they got out jack knives and commenced whittling while puffing cob pipes, chewing Battle-Ax plug, and spitting accurately at long range, and declared, "By heck, the land ain't worth the money and never will be."

There was another class of men in the town who were busy about their own affairs, but were in touch with the best movements in their community and did their own independent thinking with the result that when they read this advertisement they got busy and bought some of this land. Some of them lived to see the day when they sold it for $150 per acre; others who held it longer sold it as high as $300 per acre, and others, after farming it and becoming independent, passed it on to their children, who were then well fixed for life.

Young men, do you know that the best way to success is to learn and profit from the experience of others? If you live in any fertile agricultural settlement you must know of many farmers who bought land when it was cheap and have become rich and independent because of it. In the fertile hardwood counties of Antrim and Kalkaska, Michigan, we offer you right now the same chance over again.

Do you believe that our country is going to increase in population? Do you believe that the land in America which since the time of George Washington has been steadily increasing in value is going to continue increasing? Do you believe that the cost of farm products and all things that we eat will remain higher than they were ten years ago? If you believe these things and have the courage of your own convictions, then are you willing to act on an opportunity if it is shown you?

We offer you this splendid chance and will assist you to investigate. We are selling this land for only $15 to $30 per acre.

$10 TO $25 STARTS YOU ON THE PURCHASE OF 10 ACRES, $50 ON 20 ACRES, OR $100 ON 40 ACRES.

At the rapid rate these lands and all good farm lands are advancing who knows what these lands will sell for, say in 10 years' time?

THE SOIL produces big crops of potatoes, oats, wheat, rye, clover, alfalfa, beans, fruit and all vegetables. The natural blue grass and timothy sod makes cattle raising very profitable.

THIS DISTRICT already has the advantages of good schools, market towns, railroads, telephone and R. F. D. lines. You can buy in tracts of 10, 20, 40, 80 or 160 acres. Different sizes for different purposes. Lands with no swamps or stones. Expert farm advisers and financial aid given settlers to help them, buy live stock and build.

If you want to do truck farming—write us.
If you want to do general farming—write us.
If you want to do stock farming—write us.
If you want to do poultry and fruit farming—write us.

We can take care of you in whatever you want to do, as our 20 years' experience enables us to analyze your needs, therefore write and tell us what you want. Don't let this good chance pass by.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Wisconsin.

A FARM HOME

offers you a good chance to make money and out-of-door work from which many people obtain health and happiness. A new district may not offer you some conveniences to which you are accustomed. It will, however, open up a life of adventure to you that far offsets the few things you will miss, and get you away from the drawbacks of factory and city, or living on a rented farm which you may never call your own. Working for yourself in the good fresh air, drinking pure water, eating fresh foods off your farm, enjoying fishing and hunting now and then, should be of much benefit to you. The element of risk in starting on a farm has been greatly eliminated provided you post yourself on soil, climate, rainfall, capital needed, etc., through reliable sources of information such as state and county agricultural departments. If you buy sand, swamp, hardpan clay or any other soil unfit for agriculture it is because you have not made the proper investigation through above mentioned sources.

Splendid Opportunities

are open to get good land in Forest and Oconto counties, Wisconsin. The soil is a rich clay loam. You can buy it at $20 to $30 per acre for agricultural land and at much lower prices for grazing land. You can take your choice from 100,000 acres. On some of this land you will find timber for cordwood, pulpwood, ties, etc., that will furnish you ready cash while clearing. Our sales plans below are within reach of most any man's pocketbook. They relieve you of financial worries during the first few years on your new farm.

Location Important.

The Oconto River Valley Lands are only a short ride from Minneapolis and St. Paul, the great milling center of the nation; Duluth and Superior, the world's largest iron ore shipping points; Milwaukee and other Lake Mich. ports, each a manufacturing city with outlet to eastern markets; Chicago, the most important railroad and packing center of the country; and within the state lie many cities close by, such as Appleton, Neenah, Menasha, Fondulac and Oshkosh, furnishing further markets for your crops.

Sales Plans Nos. 1 and 2.

No. 1—We build you a house and barn; furnish cow, calf, pigs, sheep, chickens, fruit trees, tools. We will also rent you clearing and farming machinery and extend further credits for developing your farm. On this plan we require $500 down, with no further payments for five years.

No. 2—Land without improvements. $25 down, $10 to $15 per month, or annual payments of $100 down and $120 per year. When $500 is paid we give you the settler's privilege under our Sales Plan No. 1.

JEWELRY, WATCHES, ETC.

WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT THE PRICE OF DIAMONDS

Do you know that ¼ carats are now retailing for $100; that ½ carats are now $300, and carats are now $700? To stimulate your interest in the price and value of fine diamonds I am offering one of the following 10 diamonds at $50 BELOW MY OWN COST.

I have picked up ALL these diamonds for cash way below the wholesale value. On account of having no "overhead" expense to speak of, and because I figure on a big volume of sale, I can afford to take a 3% profit on these diamonds. But one of the 10 bargains is priced at $50 less than I paid for it. Can you tell which one? Study the guaranteed descriptions, weights, and prices carefully:

GUARANTEED DESCRIPTIONS.

Carats.		My price.
1.85	Wonderful BLUE Rivers, PERFECT	$595
1.77	Top Silver Cape White, PERFECT	550
1.65	Jagers VIOLET BLUE, eye-PERFECT	625
1.30	Top BLUE Wesselton, PERFECT	495
1.26	Steel BLUE White, PERFECT	465
1.16	Robert Victor Steel Blue, PERFECT	433
1.12	Silver Cape White, PERFECT	410
1.12	Steel Blue, slightly imperfect	245
0.98	Jagers VIOLET BLUE, PERFECT	395
0.90	Fancy BLUE Wesselton, eye-PERFECT	365

And hundreds more from $5,000 down to $5

ARE YOU LUCKY?

You will be fortunate to buy any of these bargains, for my price is always less than WHOLESALE; but you may be the doubly lucky person to first choose the ONE which I have priced at $50 less than my own cost. I will publish the name or initials of the winner in next Sunday's "Tribune."

I Protect You Absolutely.

by giving you a written guarantee of the carat weight, color, quality, and value; and I agree IN WRITING to refund every cent of your money if you are not satisfied. My guarantee is dependable because I am financially responsible (references 2 National Banks). I can furnish anything in mountings. Come in and look over these diamonds any time from Monday to Thursday.

Investments Need Protection.

There has been much talk recently about having the government give more protection to American investments in foreign enterprises in order to stimulate such investments and thus stabilize exchange and facilitate export trade. Is not this going rather far afield? Would it not be better for investors to get reasonable protection at home first?

There has been a long series of partial confiscations of investors' property in the United States. The latest is the refusal to permit the Chicago traction lines to collect fare enough to pay bond interest and dividends. This decision in effect confiscates the property of holders of stock and junior bonds and gives it to the patrons of the lines.

Is there any wide difference between the seizure by Mexico of 100 electric plants worth $250,000 each and the confiscation by the state of Illinois of half the value of the Chicago traction lines? The principal difference seems to be that the amount confiscated in the latter case is twice as great as in the former.

The Illinois board sees a "reasonable probability" of future earnings large enough to pay dividends, but the confiscation is none the less real at the present time.

Similar actions by national and state boards in the last few years have either confiscated or destroyed investments amounting to billions of dollars. If investors do not join hands and start a campaign of education the result will be bad, not only for them, but for everybody else. Such a policy makes for poor service first, and, if continued, must inevitably increase the cost of service.

Brief Answers.

E. J. H., Pass Christian, Miss.—The Victory loan 4¾ per cent notes are subject to all the taxes imposed by the war revenue law except the "normal" income tax. They are also subject to the inheritance tax laws of states. The 3¾ per cent notes are subject only to inheritance taxes.

W. H. L.—The American Can company has much money tied up in inventory, due to the present high prices of materials. It recently borrowed $12,000,000 for six to nine months. Probably dividends on common stock will not be considered for some months yet.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The position of American exporters of iron products has been improved by the report from England that at the iron masters' meeting an advance of 2 pounds 15 shillings on orders and contracts have been made on a fluctuating basis. Those who have watched the steel situation closely forecast that the present muddle will be settled during the week and that the railroad administration will begin placing orders.

The copper situation is expected to show considerable improvement as soon as the steel price problem is setled. Buying has already begun because of the belief that a settlement in the near future is probable.

Marshall Field & Co. reported yesterday that the gross sales during the week had been the largest in the company's history.

Stock of the American Linseed company, it is reported, is being absorbed in a quiet way. This is ascribed to the fact that there is an increasing demand from abroad for the company's products, which has resulted in a constant advance in the price of oil, etc.

Late in the week sterling exchange reached the highest figure it has attained for several weeks. Other exchanges were quiet.

Railroad administration officials express the belief that railroad expenses will decline through the next six months.

W. Frank McClure, vice president and for eight years advertising director of the Redpath Chautauqua, has resigned to become manager of the department of advertising of the Fort Dearborn Trust and Savings bank and the Fort Dearborn National.

The Harris Trust and Savings bank announces the appointment of A. F. Miche as manager of the credit department.

Beginning June 1 the Canadian Pacific railways will put on a train that will make the journey from Montreal and Toronto to Vancouver in less than four days. The actual time from Vancouver to Montreal will be 92 hours and 15 minutes. The best time from New York to the Pacific coast is 98 hours and 50 minutes.

Officials of railroads operating east from Chicago and St. Louis report that there is little change in the tonnage that has been carried for several weeks.

Less Idle Wool Machinery Since March 1, U. S. Shows

Washington, D. C., May 3.—Wool machinery in operation on April 1, 1919, showed an increase for the first time this year in the monthly active and idle wool machinery report issued by the bureau of markets, department of agriculture. There were 10 per cent fewer wide looms idle, 3.5 per cent fewer narrow looms idle, and over 4 per cent fewer carpet looms idle on April 1 than on March 1. Decreases in idle woolen cards and spindles and worsted combs and spindles are also shown. Idle machinery on April 1 expressed in percentages was: Wide looms, 48.4; narrow looms, 38.9; carpet looms, 57.1; woolen cards, 28.8; woolen spindles, 38.4; worsted combs, 34.2; and worsted spindles, 36.1.

VISIBLE SUPPLY OF COTTON.

New York, May 3.—The world's visible supply of cotton is reported to be 5,832,950 bales, as compared with 4,800,684 bales last year. The American supply is 3,677,900 bales, against 2,865,684 bales last year.

INSURANCE NEWS IN ALL BRANCHES EAST AND WEST

Many Changes in Work of Federal War Risk Bureau.

BY THOMAS R. WEDDELL.

Radical changes have been made in the work of the war risk insurance bureau by the demobilization of the military forces. Very little new insurance is being issued, but an enormous amount is being lapsed as the men are discharged, in spite of the strenuous efforts made by the government and insurance men to induce the soldiers to keep up their protection.

The total of insurance death awards made by the bureau up to the date of the signing of the armistice had a commuted value of $135,261,500, while the total death awards to May 1 have a commuted value of $800,000,000. More claims for compensation have been made in the first four months of this year than during all of 1918. Since the organization of the bureau in October, 1917, it has paid out $496,000,000 in allotments, allowances and awards.

INSURANCE MEETINGS THIS WEEK.

The annual meeting of the National Fire Protection association will be held Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday at Ottawa, Canada, preceded by the annual meeting of the National Uniformity association on Monday. This is the first time these bodies have met outside of the United States, and the Canadian session is in recognition of the large membership in that country and the notable revival in fire prevention and fire protection interests which is being shown by the Canadian government and business men. The annual meeting of the Western Insurance bureau will be held on Wednesday and Thursday at Philadelphia. The legislation recommended by the joint conference committee of the union and the bureau will be considered, and, if approved by the bureau, will then be promulgated. The Fire Insurance club of Chicago will hold its annual May party and ladies' night Tuesday evening at the Hotel La Salle. There will be dancing, music, and refreshments.

PROHIBITION AND BONDS.

Prohibition will have a material effect upon the surety business, as a large number of statutory bonds have been required by the various laws governing the liquor business. Many states and cities require bonds guaranteeing compliance with the law and the maintenance of order on the part of saloonkeepers, and there also was a large volume of premiums on revenue tax and other bonds.

INSURANCE NOTES.

The automobile committee of the workmen's compensation service bureau has changed the plan of writing fleets of commercial cars. Hereafter they are to be insured on the pay roll basis, the average number of cars in use during a year being determined by dividing the annual pay roll by the average annual pay of a chauffeur, the manual rate per commercial car being applied to the result.

Chicago's growing importance as an export center is leading the principal agencies to establish marine insurance departments. H. R. Woolsey, who has been with the Insurance Company of North America at Philadelphia, takes charge of the marine department of the Automobile of Hartford at Chicago, and the Rollins-Burdick-Hunter company has secured T. J. Prindiville, formerly with Johnson & Higgins, in a similar capacity.

The Farmers' National Life of Chicago made an increase of $1,527,000 in insurance in force during the first four months of this year. Last year it took until Dec. 7 to make a similar gain, indicating the growth of new business and the notable reduction in the lapse ratio, largely due to the warning of the influenza epidemic.

The Royal yesterday subscribed for $75,000 of the Victory loan through Chicago, and the Queen for $30,000.

FALL RIVER PRINT CLOTH.

The Fall River print cloth market was active during the week, with sales of 240,000 pieces reported.

CHICAGO CROWDED AS NEVER BEFORE, REALTY MEN SAY; FEW STRUCTURES VACANT

BUILDINGS HERE BETTER RENTED THAN SINCE 1893

Flats, Homes, Hotels, Offices, and Stores All Well Filled.

Real estate renting agents are united in the statement that the first of May found Chicago buildings much better rented than at any time since the World's Fair. This includes practically all classes of buildings, with the possible exception of factory buildings, where excessive construction to meet the war requirements of the government has, with the coming of peace, resulted in many vacancies. There is little doubt, however, that with the readjustment of business to peace conditions there will come a marked change for the better in this field.

But in residential buildings, including apartments, apartment hotels, and residences, the situation could hardly be better from a renting standpoint, and this applies to the situation in the downtown district, although possibly not to the extent it does with reference to residential structures.

This is especially the case with respect to the conventional flat building, where vacancies are almost as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth. This applies more particularly to desirable steam heated flats, as the stove heated ones, formerly so popular with renters of more moderate means, seem to have lost considerable of this popularity, according to reports of brokers.

Cheap Flats in Less Demand.

This class of apartments have appealed mostly to the laboring classes and particularly the foreign element, and the lessening number of the latter because of the war is thought by some to be largely responsible for this decreased demand. By others, however, this is thought to be largely due to the greatly improved financial condition of this class, in common with laborers in general, because of the great increase in wages.

As a whole there is thought to have been an average increase of about 10 per cent in rents for the coming year and unless there is much more building of the ordinary class of buildings than now seems likely, another advance of probably 10 per cent is predicted for the coming October renting.

The renting situation is exceptionally good in the downtown district, not only much better than for a number of years, but also much better than seemed possible six months ago. This includes stores, floors, and office space. While there is considerable undesirable space unrented, as will always be the case with this class of room, the statement was made by a leading broker in this field that fully 95 per cent of the really desirable space is rented.

Many high grade office buildings, especially along La Salle street and Michigan avenue, are reported to be 100 per cent rented, the rental running from $2 to $2.50 a square foot. The claim is made by some building managers that, owing to the high cost of operation and maintenance, this is hardly enough to provide anything like an adequate return, and that something like the $3.50 to $4 which New York buildings are said to get should obtain here. It is said that conditions are better in the wholesale district than they have been since 1892, and that desirable floor space is exceedingly scarce.

Store space is in surprisingly good shape, considering the many vacancies resulting from the approaching period of prohibition, as well as the vacancies resulting from the centralization of the railroad ticket offices in the Insurance Exchange. An interesting situation is revealed in the sharp increase in the number of candy shops taking places vacated by saloons.

Homes Lead Building.

In a general building way the bulk of the construction is for bungalows, cottages, and two flat buildings, although there is a broadening tendency, taking in other classes of structures. This is particularly the case as regards high grade fireproof apartment hotels, with one, two, and three rooms, with kitchenettes.

In this connection an interesting feature is reported by brokers with reference to the ordinary flat buildings of twelve or more apartments. It is that many owners, instead of renting their flats as such, have divided them up into smaller furnished apartments of one and more rooms, by which, it is claimed, a decidedly larger return is received. Large residences are also being put to this use, and in the meantime there is going on a feverish construction of the cheaper classes of residential structures, with an enormous movement of lots in the outlying districts of the city.

U. S. CONTROL OF EXPRESS CHAOTIC, SHIPPERS SAY

Byron H. Webb Defends Administration of Companies.

Chicago shippers of merchandise are criticizing the American Railway Express company, the governmental corporation now operating the American and other pre-war express companies, as in a general state of chaos. Commenting yesterday on the situation, one shipper hinted that there was a method in the madness—the object being to so disgust the public as to force a return to private ownership and management.

"Hundreds of Chicago consignors who are daily forwarding merchandise by express are driven to the verge of madness because of the rotten state of affairs, and the complaints of Chicago shippers are identical with those of others in all sections of the country," said a Clinton street business man.

Employé Defends Company.

"The American Railway Express company is giving the maximum of service, notwithstanding complaints here and there," said Byron H. Webb of the general agent's department, 23 West Monroe street.

There are three express terminals or billing stations in Chicago, and from these tens of thousands of packages are shipped from Chicago daily to points throughout the world. These terminals are at 817 South Wells street, Fourteenth street and Indiana avenue, and Monroe and Desplaines streets.

It has been asserted that the delay in the delivery of shipments has become intolerable and that the worries following the attempts to adjust claims for lost or damaged goods have so distracted the shipping public that dealings with the company have become little short of a nightmare. It is alleged that many thousands of money orders collected on "C. O. D." packages are scattered throughout all of the shipping zones and remain in the hands of the company's agents.

Halliburton's Complaint.

"I have been months seeking to collect our outstanding express money orders," said O. G. Halliburton, manager of the Simplex Gas Plants company, 9 South Clinton street. "As a single instance of the wretched state into which the service of the express business of the country has fallen, I will point to one of many of our shipments. Last July we sent a package shipment to Morris, N. J., and some of the packages were lost. No trace yet. Lately I went to the claim department in Chicago and exhibited a lot of futile correspondence on the subject, finding no satisfaction. I left, saying a lawyer would take the matter up. The official then said, 'You'll sue? Then I'll wait until I hear from your lawyer,' saying which he closed his files. And our trouble is typical of many others.

In his discussion of the troubles of shippers Mr. Webb of the express company insisted that the service had not lost in efficiency. He was inclined to lay the blame on the shippers generally. He admitted that in specific shipments there always had been complaints here and there, the result of common errors. With reference to the holding up of express money orders, he insisted that such delays were caused only through incorrect addresses.

The great mail order houses have branch express orders on their premises, operated under the eyes of their respective officials, but at these places it was said that complaints, one way or the other, were not abnormal. However, it is admitted by the express management that in the last year 300,000 express shipments were found in cars or in wagons without mark or with marks so obliterated that it was impossible to forward to destination.

RECORD OF DEEDS SETS NEW MARK, 1,800 IN WEEK

$650,000 Unity Building Deal the Feature of Activity.

The feature of another exceedingly active real estate market in connection with small outside properties, in which another high mark was established in the number of transfers filed for record, was the announcement of the acquirement by a syndicate headed by Edward M. Willoughby, as president, of a contract covering the entire capital stock of $650,000 of the Unity Safe Deposit company, owner of the Unity building at 125-33 North Dearborn street, in the block between Washington and Randolph streets.

The establishment of new high records in the recorder's office has become a regular weekly announcement, but the remarkably heavy total of last week's figures, running close to 1,800 deeds, with an increase of 622 instruments over the corresponding week a year ago, serves again to call attention to the surprising activity in the market for the cheaper outside properties.

Heavy Home Buying.

As stated in this column a week ago, it measures the almost sensational increase in the home buying movement, which has become the one special feature of the market. Investment buying of more valuable improved properties is steadily increasing, but it fails to keep pace with the outside small home buying movement.

In addition to the acquirement of the Unity building, there was a fairly large movement of apartment property, including several transactions of considerable magnitude. As has been the case for several weeks, there was a good deal of activity in residence property, both in Chicago, and along the north shore. As was to be expected, there was a big falling off in the leases of building space, coincident with the arrival of May 1, while there was only a light movement of outside business and manufacturing property.

To Improve Unity Building.

It is the purpose of Mr. Willoughby and his associates to thoroughly improve the Unity building, converting it into a high grade office structure, and to this end they will expend about $90,000 in the installation of four large high speed electric passenger elevators while the entrance is to be rebuilt. The newest type of indirect lighting fixtures will be installed, and the building entirely rewired with a three wire system.

A tenant is said to have been secured for the entire bank floor, 60x120 feet, under a fifteen year lease, at an average annual rental of $20,000. All partitions are to be removed, steel vaults installed and the entire space fitted with modern fixtures at an expense of $40,000.

A special feature will be the installation of a refrigerated, filtered water sytem, which will supply all offices with filtered ice water.

Several years ago the company constructed caissons under the foundations along the south and west walls, and it is now proposed to construct caissons under the rest of the foundations at a cost of about $100,000.

Lease Runs Seventy Years.

The building is a sixteen story structure, erected just before the world's fair, and occupies a lot 80x120 feet. The fee is owned by the McCormick estate, and the company has a ninety-nine year lease, without revaluation, at a yearly rental of $18,000, and having seventy years to run. An unusual feature of the lease is that the owner of the fee must pay for the improvements at the expiration of the lease.

LEAPS FROM CINCINNATI BRIDGE.

Cincinnati, O., May 3.—Elbert M. Corbly, 45, guest at the Columbian hotel, leaped from the suspension bridge here today and was killed instantly. No motive for the suicide is known. His home is believed to be in Muncie, Ind.

BUILDING BOOM UNDERWAY IN 175 U. S. CITIES

The feeling of uncertainty is gradually being dispelled, states Building Age, editorially. With labor steadily become more abundant, builders who were holding aloof more because of the labor situation than because of high prices, are going ahead. That the expected boom is under way is borne out by the fact that contracts let during March were greater than any year since 1911, except 1917, when urgent government requirements made the record abnormal.

Government encouragement, the "Own Your Home" movement, high rents, war wage savings of the thrifty, and needs of expanding business, constitute factors which are pushing construction. The crisis is past. From now on the building trades and material manufacturers should gradually enter upon an era of prosperity that may even surpass the hopes of the most optimistic.

The latest reports, received direct from city building departments, show a gain of 35 per cent in permits granted for March, 1919, compared with March, 1918, the totals for 175 cities being $56,997,854 for March this year as against $42,044,451 last year. That the prosperity is widespread is shown by the fact that 124 cities report gains, as against fifty-one reporting losses.

Eastern cities report a gain of 41 per cent, forty-three out of sixty-five showing increases; middle states cities report 27 per cent gain, thirty-four out of forty-seven showing increases; southern cities 34 per cent gain, thirty-one out of forty cities showing increases and western cities report 24 per cent gain, sixteen out of twenty-three cities showing increases. This favorable condition shows widespread activity in all sections of the country.

Sheridan Road Property Nets 225 Per Cent Profit

George C. Stamm and Henry Stafford, who recently sold the 121x156 feet of vacant at the northeast corner of Sheridan road and Airdrie place to David Angus and John Cameron, the builders, are said to have taken a profit of $225 per foot after an ownership of only six and a half years. They received $45,000 for the property, which is to be the site of a big high grade apartment building. They originally acquired the property in exchange for the equity in the property at the southwest corner of Broadway and Leland avenue, in the sale of which they are said to have netted 100 per cent profit. The transactions show the rapidity with which property has advanced in that section.

Underwrite $1,750,000 in Bonds on Loop Building

Greenebaum Sons Bank & Trust Co. has underwritten a serial bond issue loan of $1,750,000, 1½ to 10 years at 6 per cent on the Transportation building, southwest corner of Dearborn and Harrison streets, 297x61.2 feet, through to Federal street. The loan is to refund outstanding issues, and the bond holders will be given the privilege of exchanging for the new bonds. The building, which is twenty-two stories high, contains about 5,800,000 cubic feet of space, and is said to be fully occupied at an annual gross rental of about $350,000. Part of the ground occupied by it is leasehold, and part fee.

40 Per Cent Boost Shown in Cost of Bungalows

The experience of a large subdivision operator in building bungalows two years ago and why he abandoned present plans to duplicate the same, illustrates the extent to which building cost has advanced during the last two years. At that time the average cost of the buildings was $3,048.78 on lots selling at $1,100. Recently he took the same set of plans and divided them into groups in order to give contractors a chance to bid on them. According to bids received, the cost of these bungalows would be $4,200, or an increase of over 40 per cent.

WEEK'S MARKET IN FLATS SHOWS MUCH ACTIVITY

$160,000 Deal Leads the Record of Sales.

The week's market developed much activity in apartment property, the business including an unusual number of good sized transactions, several of which are said to have been made as investments.

The largest deal of the week was the transfer by William J. Reinhold to William C. Hill of the new forty-eight court apartment building, on 200x125 feet of ground, at the northeast corner of Marianna street and Mildred avenue for an indicated consideration of $160,000, subject to an incumbrance of $100,000. It is divided into apartments of two, three, four, and five rooms, with a gross annual rental of about $22,000.
